PROGRAM AND METHOD

IF anything has been needed to verify the assertion on this page last week that: "The decree negotiations pertain to a cartel—and how to slice it," it is this week available in the situation pointed up by the exhibitor uprising in Washington. Also most germane is that part of Mr. Francis L. Burt's account in the news pages in which he states a Department of Justice viewpoint holding that perhaps the decree does not take care of the "little fellow" but that he can hope that the general influence of the document may help him get concessions. Maybe so, but as is the case with some other things going on in Washington, this does not seem to pertain to the prescribed methods presumed of the law. When American methods are set aside, judicially or otherwise, the setting aside may prove to have more serious import than the thing done.

MOT MIDSTREAMLINING

"THE Ramparts We Watch," March of Time documentary feature, does seem to require an uncommon amount of watching. After sundry trials before audiences it went into the cutting room, again, and retakes were set in motion, also again. The modified picture is to emerge with a "new ending," this time, it seems, converting it into a recruiting document throwing its weight into the nation's foremost political issue before the Congress. Some call that sort of thing propaganda. The United States, as represented in the halls of Washington, have not made up their mind, as March of Time has. Meanwhile for showmen there continues the usual issue about "message" pictures—plus the trade familiarity with the record of "doctored" productions, or what often in the past has happened to the motion picture box-office in consequence of "changes in midstream," or any part thereof.

UNSUNG TRIUMPH

INTO the scene of a troubled industry and a perplexed art come kind words, encouraging words, and sincere ones, from an authority. In the Woman's Home Companion for September Mr. Olin Downes, distinguished music critic for the New York Times and other ranking publications, has done a piece which is news because it finds the screen the new custodian, patron and medium of music, for America, for the world.

A certain special satisfaction for Motion Picture Herald derives from this, because year in and year out, for ever so long, sound in general and music in particular has had attention and serious consideration for the industry solely in the pages of this publication.

It has been perhaps not a mystery, but a puzzle, that in all the glorifying endeavors of the promoters of the wares of the screen there has been, and continues to be, substantially no attention to the sound track, painfully little even when the sound track has been the important side of the picture. There has been an assumption, and probably a lazy one, that the box-office public is indifferent or musically illiterate. Perhaps that is not so very inaccurate a judgment, but it can be observed that the public knows as much about music as it does about anything else. There is as large a sector of special interest to be sold into there as anywhere else. Hollywood's very large investment in music is the only element of picture making that it does not brag about.

Says Mr. Downes: "If you were to ask me where the most provocative and exciting musical activities are going forward today in America, I should say 'Listen to the movies.' . . . The most obvious testimony is the present number of important films which bring before the public internationally famous musicians. I personally don't think that the exploitation of these celebrated artists tell half of the present significant accomplishment and the unlimited future of the musical movies.

"In the sound films today every picture, no matter how cheaply made or unimportant, must have music—prelude music, incidental and background music. In most pictures of normal running time there is as much musical material as there would be in a symphony. . . . And here I take my hat off to the boys who are such masters of that business . . ."

THE WALKER

HIS contemporaries in the world of the motion picture are noting with interested approbation the President's appointment of Mr. Frank Comerford Walker to the Cabinet as postmaster general.

In this appointment the President is perhaps more than usually fortunate in that this time there is a high post appointment which entails no coloration of experimentation or tentativity. Mr. Walker has been the President's close friend, adviser and confidant for all these several tremendously important and often busy years.

To the motion picture industry, which has not been having all the luck in the world of late in its general public relations, there is a decided satisfaction in the most excellent and laudatory press which this week's appointment of Mr. Walker is receiving.

One is to be reminded, too, that once upon a time, now about twenty years ago, the motion picture pridefully acquired a postmaster general from Washington. It is now prideful of having one to give to Washington and a national administration—in days when it can use all the real help there is.

SPEAKING of circuit operations: the U. S. Department of Commerce issues "trade-o-graphs" to show how things are going, from time to time—this week on chain grocery store. It seems that in June their business was off one per cent as compared with May, after seasonal adjustments, but that this June of 1940 was twelve per cent better than the same month for 1939. That says this year is better than last, but not quite so good as it was.

This Week in the News

Admission Changes

THERE have been indications in some parts that exhibitors are considering a change in admission scales to minimize the "annoyance" caused by the handling of pennies for the Federal defense tax. Exhibitors in the northwest are said to be the latest among those considering revision of their scales, enabling them to eliminate the use of pennies.

Conscription

OFFICERS and directors of the Association of Motion Picture Producers, representing the organized industry in production, the Hollywood affiliate of the MPPDA in New York, assembled Tuesday evening with Will H. Hays to discuss the problems which are anticipated to arise from conscription.

The conferees were silent on the subject at adjournment, except for a statement that, "There was discussion as to provisions to be made in various studios in event of general military conscription."

Warner Brothers home office announced Wednesday that former service men at its California studio had organized "Warvets", and that a searchlight battery and pistol and rifle club had been formed, with an ultimate membership of 600 anticipated—for defense purposes.

"Anyone regularly employed by Warner Brothers may join—it is not necessary to be a war veteran," said the company's announcement.

The national exhibitors' council to cooperate with Government agencies in national defense activities in theatres met Wednesday in the home office of RKO in New York.

Members of the committee include: Joseph Bernhard, Warners; Harry Brandt, ITOA; H. A. Cole, Allied States; Leonard Goldenson, Paramount; Ed Kuykendall, MPTOA; C. C. Moskowitz, Loew's; Robert H. Poole, Pacific Conference ITO; Spyros Skouras, National Theatres; L. E. Thompson, RKO; Walter Vincent, MPTOA and Nathan Yamins, Allied States.

Guild Schism

THE injection of political issues has developed a schism in the Screen Publicists Guild in New York, organized to bargain effectively with distributors on behalf of the 250 publicity and advertising department members in its ranks.

Many members are known to be strongly opposed to the public commitment of the Guild to opposition to conscription for national defense. This action they credit to the Guild's "Representative Council," overriding the sentiment of the majority of the membership.

The Council issued a bulletin last week urging all members to express opposition to conscription legislation, on the grounds that conscription "threatens to destroy the very democratic processes in whose name it pleads." The bulletin was circulated on the same day, August 26th, that the Guild submitted preliminary proposals on salaries to directors of home office advertising departments (MOTION PICTURE HERALD, August 31, page nine).

Previously, at a general meeting, the membership voted down a lone suggestion that the Guild go on record against defense conscription. The Representative Council later took an opposite stand, to which it is held to have committed the membership.

Several members now are prepared to present a resolution at the next general meeting, next Thursday, to have the Guild "in future refrain from delving into political matters."

Meanwhile there comes, unsigned, presumably from the office of Joe Gould, United Artists press book writer, and head of the Guild, a statement that reports of "a sharp difference of opinion" within the Guild are "somewhat unwarranted."

Severed Ties

THE Canadian Motion Picture Distributors Association has not had relations for months with the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, although trade headlines in New York only last Wednesday announced a severance of ties between the two groups which represent the organized industries in the countries.

Hays organization contacts with Canadian companies and individuals are now maintained through their New York offices.

Meanwhile, the Canadian industry has effected a reorganization, extending its scope to embrace contact with independent exhibitors and distributors, cooperating in, among other things, the correction of clearance problems.

Talent Bull Market

THE official journal of the American Federation of Musicians, International Musician, sees the new show season, started Labor Day, as bringing not only "a decided upturn in theatre business," but an accompanying rise in the demand for stage talent and name bands. "The demand, is, in fact, already rising," observes the Musician, which says it bases its conclusion on "predictions of those in key positions in the theatre world."

Where He Is

A SPELL back Frank Nugent, resigning as picture page editor of the New York Times, went to Hollywood as a writer at the invitation of Darryl Zanuck of 20th Century-Fox Film Corporation. Wondering what happened next, a scout for this page has found Mr. Nugent assigned to the problem of what to do scriptwise about "Lucky Baldwin", an original story, first announced in 1935 when the opening of Santa Anita race track on the old Baldwin ranch put the name into headlines. Several writers have tried the job and now and then the picture has been discussed for an all star cast. It is yet to be scheduled.

$11,500,000 for Music

TRAVELING bands playing some 570 theatres, dance halls, night clubs and elsewhere, grossed $11,500,000 in salaries last season, it is reported by H. E. Brenton, treasurer of the American Federation of Musicians, Boston. Salaries of "resident" orchestras are not included.

Although some 3,200 traveling orchestras are listed on the Federation's books, a little less than half that number—1,500—are regular itinerant bands, while the rest average one week to two months of traveling time, were not included in the figures quoted by Mr. Brenton.

While the road bookings take the traveling musicians into every State in the Union and Canada, better than one-fifth of their income is obtained in seven cities of the United States. New York and Chicago lead with an expenditure of $680,000. Boston, Detroit, San Francisco, Los Angeles and Miami, each spend approximately $280,000.

Handbills Legal

FEDERAL Judge Murray Hulbert in New York has ruled invalid the local ordinance which bans distribution of advertising handbills on the streets but permits dissemination of political and certain other throwaways. Motion picture exhibitors in New York as well as elsewhere are among the biggest users of handbills.

Judge Hulbert found that the law, which has the avowed purpose of preventing litter on the streets, was discriminatory and in direct violation of the First Amendment to the Constitution.

"The ordinance," the jurist wrote, "clearly discriminates against the business man while affording protection to persons distributing non-commercial handbills whose convictions and efforts might be subversive to the welfare of the government."

Color Television

THE Columbia Broadcasting System presented its new color television for the first time to the press Wednesday afternoon at the network's headquarters in New York.

The story of the new television, which exceeds the realism, definition and clarity of color motion pictures, according to James L. Fly, chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, appears on page 19.

The color television material shown by CBS to press representatives Wednesday was filmed and presented with a degree of showmanship. Two television receivers, one for color and the other for regular black and white, were placed side by side so that a comparison of results could be made. Both the color and black and white pictures were small, only nine inches wide, but the color images, though very vivid, were such that the reviewers only glanced at the regular black and white pictures and appeared to concentrate on the colored ones.

A variety of scenes, mostly beach and garden, were photographed on 16mm color film at Jones Beach, Long Island for the color television demonstration. The images were not as sharp as those seen in a motion picture theatre, partly on account of the 16mm film used and partly on account of the 343-line television images.

A combination of the RCA large screen television, demonstrated last Winter, with CBS's color television, developed to use both "live" and standard size film programs would seem to open up a new public entertainment medium.—M. Q., Jr.

Gentle Hint

THEATRES in England are taking the suggestion of the British War Government and are camouflaging their roofs, to make their large rooftop displays indiscernible to enemy planes carrying bombs.

Generally accepted as vulnerable, as are all other places of public assembly, the theatres are using "grey oil distemper" to camouflage.

Theatres principally involved are those standing alone, not those in a town among other buildings.

What is Labor?

RECLASSIFICATION of motion picture executive, administrative and professional employees under the Federal Wage and Hour law may be made early this month, Philip B. Fleming, administrator, said recently in Atlanta.

For two years representatives of producers have petitioned for a reclassification of such studio workers as actors, directors, writers, editors, producers, location men and other employees. The request was made to have many of these so-called "white collar" workers exempt from the hours provision of the Labor Act. Amendments to the act were opposed by Hollywood unions.

Hearings were held in Washington at the end of July on the recommendations submitted by Homer I. Mitchell who conducted a survey for the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America.

Colonel Fleming told newspapermen that he was convinced that Congress intended that distinctions should be made in applying the law. He specifically referred to the film and newspaper industries as among those urging that new distinctions be drawn from the Wage Hour Law. The present definition of a professional used by the Wage Hour Division is one who has "educational training in a specially organized body of knowledge." As now interpreted this does not include actors and other film workers.

Warners & AFM Settle

TERMINATING the longest strike in recent years in the industry—a strike which began last December—the executive board of Philadelphia AFM Local No. 77, on Wednesday accepted a peace offer from the Warner circuit in that city.

And thus, vaudeville, absent from the city for approximately the length of the strike, will return to Philadelphia, for the terms of the offer have the circuit reinstating vaudeville at its Earle, in Philadelphia, weekdays, and in the Stanley, in Camden, N. J., on Sundays.

The local accepted the Warner terms at the urging of the American Federation of Musicians' president, James C. Petrillo.

Warners will spend $92,500 for a year's music, compared with the $72,000 it spent previously at the two houses. However, it will not be using music at the downtown Fox, and at the neighborhood Alhambra, Kent, Oxford, Frankford and Allegheny theatres, as it once did. The union had wanted music at those neighborhood theatres. Vaudeville will resume at the Earle following the current run of "Boom Town," which opened last Tuesday.

The dispute flamed last December when Warners discharged musicians in all local houses, after the union attempted to force hiring of musicians in the neighborhoods.

Columbia's Earnings

COLUMBIA'S net earnings in the past year were 256 times greater than the year before, the company reporting, Wednesday, a net profit of $512,185 for the 52 weeks ended June 29, 1940, against a net of $2,046 for the year before. Both totals represent income after all charges and taxes. Last year's earnings were equivalent to 83 cents per share on 366,268 shares of common stock.

June 29, 1940, the company had current assets of $13,146,250, including $2,354,700 cash, against current liabilities of $1,925,715, a ratio of more than six to one. Working capital approximated $11,221,000.

SCORNING ARNOLD "CONSENT" DEAL EXHIBITORS PROMISE COURT BATTLE

Department of Justice Wants to Settle on Basis of Decree as Written but Exhibitor Arguments Make an Impression

by FRANCIS L. BURT
Washington Correspondent

Exhibition in Washington conference assembled has told the Government, and the world, that it will intervene with a new court battle to prevent the acceptance and enforcement of the consent decree proposed in the Department of Justice anti-trust suit in the motion picture industry. Block selling is the uppermost issue.

The hard words of "sell-out" expressive of a fighting mood, in an atmosphere of high indignation were to be heard in hotel room conferences in Washington Tuesday night, after an all-day conference between exhibitors and government officials at the Department of Justice.

Compromise Hinted

At that conference it was indicated flatly that the Government was preparing to accept the proposals submitted by the five theatre owning distributors last week. It was reported on Wednesday, however, that the Department might bow to the views of the exhibitors, with whose determination and sincerity officials were said to have been impressed, and ask the "Big Five" to continue straight block booking, with trade showings and cancellation privileges of 10 and 20 per cent, for a trial period after the effective date of the proposed decree.

The word weariness came into the official discussions, indicating that the defendants were the weary ones—and maybe the Department of Justice, too. Mr. Arnold was said to have set forth that the proposed decree was the best solution short of a long drawn out and "expensive trial."

Speaking of expenses, it was said that Mr. Arnold observed that the Department had been spending $150,000 a year collecting evidence and that he had no further appropriation for the purpose.

Mr. Arnold indicated an attitude of urgency, saying that decision had to be had in ten days whether to accept the decree or proceed to trial.

Exhibitors in attendance expressed the opinion, in the subsequent discussions of the day's events, that they had been invited "to blow off steam" to dissipate their force of opposition, rather than called for consultation.

The principal point of exhibitor attack, Tuesday, was the five-film block, but other provisions, notably that permitting distributors to change the combinations of trade-shown features in offering blocks for sale, and the arbitration sections, also were the targets of strenuous objection.

Following a brief general meeting, Mr. Arnold and his colleagues met the several organized exhibitor groups separately at a series of sessions lasting late into the afternoon.

Attending these conferences were Ed Kuykendall, president of the MPTOA; Fred Wehrenberg, president of the Eastern Missouri MPTO; Nat Williams of the Southeastern Theatre Owners Association; Roy Walker of the Texas MPTO; Fred Kent of the Sparks Circuit, Jacksonville, Fla.; Bob Wilby; Robert White, Portland, Ore., representing the Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatre Owners; Stanley Sumner, Cambridge, Mass., representing the New England Motion Picture Theatre Owners; Tom McGuire, Detroit, representing the Cooperative Theatres of Michigan; Louis Wade, Fuquay Springs, N. C., operator; and Abram F. Myers, Nathan Yamins, Sidney Samuelson and Harold Stoneman of Allied.

Lack of Understanding Charged

Details of what transpired at the meetings were meager, but exhibitors later commented upon the apparent inability of the Government men to understand the mechanics of the film industry, a lack which they feared might lead to the acceptance of a consent decree which would not eliminate the evils at which the suit was aimed, while the department appeared to feel that the theatre owners were equally lacking in their understanding of the limits to which the Government could go and were seeking to have the department totally reorganize the entire distribution branch.

That the sessions were neither friendly nor productive of an understanding was evidenced by the declaration by Mr. Kuykendall of his determination to fight the decree to the last ditch and that he would immediately take the matter up with the membership of his organization.

The MPTOA group told Mr. Arnold frankly that they would prefer to have the suit dismissed rather than accept the five-film block, and other leaders declared the decree contains many provisions which would prove adverse to the small exhibitor and, if anything, make his position worse than it now is.

Some of the exhibitors took the position that the case should be permitted to proceed to trial, with the idea that as the case went on the companies would improve their proposals to a point where they would be acceptable to the theatre owners.

Before the conference, department officials, discussing the situation informally, said they were maintaining an open mind regarding the consent decree proposals now before them but feared that the exhibitors would raise objections to many features.

Many of the exhibitors, they commented, think the Department of Justice has the right to make over the motion picture industry when, in fact, it can do nothing more than bring about the abandonment of practices which it believes to be in violation of the law.

During the meeting, Mr. Arnold told the exhibitor representatives frankly that he believed the proposals now before him were the best the department could do and that he believed they should be accepted although, he pointed out, the attitude of the court toward them could not be forecast.

Mr. Arnold told the theatre men that if they believed the proposals did not meet the requirements of the situation they could and should go into court to tell Judge Goddard so.

But, he warned, if the consent decree does not go through and the case goes to trial, it may be years before the exhibitors get the relief which the department is seeking to obtain for them immediately. He predicted that it would be as long as five years before the case reached the Supreme Court if the companies fought it all the way through. And, it was indicated, if the present proposals are not accepted, the companies are willing to fight the case through court after court.

Mr. Arnold admitted that in some instances the effects of the consent decree upon individual operators might be adverse, such as pushing back the availability of films to small town and subsequent run exhibitors, but took the position that exhibitors so placed could probably work out a deal with their distributors who, having narrowly escaped expensive litigation, would probably be anxious to iron out any difficulties which might arise.

The Assistant Attorney General informed the exhibitors that the present proposals were not the result of a horse-trade or a trade practice conference, but an effort by two opposing groups to settle a lawsuit.

He reminded them pointedly that the suit was filed in July, 1938, and that the present proposals were the result of long negotiations, and indicated that the department was becoming impatient over the continued delay and would not countenance a re-opening of the discussions.

ATTORNEYS DISCUSS ARBITRATION METHOD

Attorneys representing the five film companies which have consented in principle to the consent decree discussed last week with Government lawyers the arbitration set-up to be incorporated in the final settlement and in other discussions reaffirmed the agreement that franchise deals concluded since last June 1st will be subject to the terms of any consent decree.

James Hayes and Robert Sher, special assistants to the U. S. Attorney General, represented the Government at the arbitration meeting held Thursday, August 29th, at the Bar Association Building in New York City.

The five theatre-owning defendants agreed in June to include under any consent decree all franchise deals made after the first of that month. Circuit operators, according to reports, have been seeking franchise deals to insure a supply of product if the proposed block-of-five provision in the decree should cause delays in selling

115 FEATURES COMPLETED FOR NEW POLICY OF PRODUCT PREPAREDNESS

Record Picture Backlog Results from Majors' Anticipation Last Spring of Changes in Distribution Methods

The anticipation, last Spring, of sharp changes in selling methods from legislation or trust suit regulation, which influenced several large companies to start building a big backlog of product, has resulted in a record list of 115 features completed and "in the can." Forty-three more are now actually shooting and 44 others are in preparation. This represents a full 40 percent of the 504 to which the ten distributors are committed for 1940-41 with the actual delivery of new season's product only two weeks under way.

One hundred and seventeen current and advance release dates have been set, another record, giving theatre buyers and bookers plenty of opportunity to plan ahead.

While the present and tentative draft of consent decree settlement of the Government's trust suit (see page 12) would not apply to blocks-of-five selling, advance trade showings and other new practices until the 1941-42 season, starting next September 1, earlier impressions of some company leaders that almost anything might happen, at any time before, caused them to consider building surpluses.

More Foresight Used

Some of the defendant distributors are understood to have concluded that in case any quick application was made by any new regulations to producing or selling methods—requirements such as the submission of advance synopses, or the holding of advance trade showings—those requirements would not cover pictures already completed.

One important circuit official declared this week that the producers in deciding last Spring to prepare so far in advance against changes in selling methods, "used more foresight" than they have in years. The big backlog and record-breaking advance release date schedule would be "a blessing" to circuit bookers, he said.

Additional reasons, described as important by some home office officials were given for the present product situation. One executive reminded that as a result of the war in Europe, Hollywood talent for the most part remained at home, away from European vacations, away from European production, and so Hollywood producers took advantage of their availability and of particularly heavy story inventories.

Others pointed to the industrywide fear, when war broke out, that the resultant curtailed income would automatically curtail production in both quantity and quality. There was much conversation about this phase in both circuit and independent exhibition, and some in Hollywood set out to dispel those fears. One home office official now reminds that "those fears" have not been expressed in months.

"Hollywood's product backlog today is proof that there is no product shortage," he said.

Also, with income curtailed from reduced rentals abroad and increases dependent upon expansion of the domestic market, it was decided to supply the sales forces with large blocks of "something to sell."

"You can't sell only the blue sky today," said a distributor. "Our sales managers have to have something in the line of finished products."

Another reason cited: The advisability of having plenty of product on hand to market at a pace in keeping with an anticipated general business boom developing out of national defense and armaments expansion.

In listing the backlog of product now on the books of the distributors—a backlog which one of the "Big Three" calls "a consent decree" backlog, and which list appears in adjoining columns, it will be noted that there are about half a dozen features which have already had wide release attention, like "Ramparts We Watch" and "Boom Town." These however, have been confined principally to "test" exhibitions, and while exhibited in August, in the last weeks of the old season, are, nevertheless, 1940-41 releases.

Almost every variety of background, every type of characterization, theme and plot are found in the completed product. The list follows:

FREEMAN HAILS DROPPING OF "B's"

Paramount has disbanded its "B" production units and is now expending upon its 1940-41 program of 32 to 36 pictures the money formerly spent on 52 to 60 pictures, and, furthermore, it plans to do the same in 1941-42. So said Y. Frank Freeman, vice-president and studio manager of the company, on Thursday, August 29th, in New York, before leaving for the Coast, after five days of conference with home office executives. Mr. Freeman said 14 pictures of the 1940-41 program were completed, with four before the cameras and four more expected to go into work within three weeks. The 1941-42 schedule is being prepared, he announced, adding that it would include two pictures by B. G. De Sylva, one with Bob Hope, another with Bing Crosby.

Local 306 Sues for Breach of Contract

Local 306, International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees New York projectionists' union—and strongest in the country—on Tuesday brought a breach of contract suit against a group of Brooklyn persons and corporations, former and present operators of the Metro and Globe theares in that borough.

The suit, in behalf of Joseph Basson, the local's president, and six projectionists, seeks damages, reinstatement of the men, payment of back salaries to them, and an injunction against the employment of any but Local 306 men in the two theatres.

Warner Station Keeps ASCAP Music

First public act of motion picture interests in the fight between the American Society of Composers, Authors & Publishers and Broadcast Music, Inc., backed by the radio industry, came Tuesday when station KFWB, owned by Warner Brothers Pictures, signed a five-year music license agreement with ASCAP.

BMI has asked for cooperation of the motion picture companies and has pointed out that if ASCAP music is banned from the networks after January 1st, the film companies will lose a medium for exploiting musicals. Although it has been reported that one of the majors is planning to use one BMI song in a forthcoming musical short, action of the Warner radio station indicates that the film music interests are still supporting ASCAP. Warner Brothers had difficulty with the Society several years ago and withdrew its catalogue, returning only recently.

Des Moines Patrons Reverse Gallup; Lone Exhibitor Kills Milwaukee Ban

A majority of patrons attending Tri-States' three Des Moines theatres, the Des Moines and the Paramount, downtown, and the Roosevelt, a suburban theatre, have reversed the Gallup-Goldwyn poll and voted for dual films.

The 72.5 per cent vote for duals at the Paramount theatre made the total 57.1 per cent against 42.9 per cent for singles, although the Roosevelt vote was 76.3 per cent for singles and the Des Moines 55.8 per cent for single features.

The figures of the Gallup poll showed 57 per cent for singles and only 43 per cent for duals.

A. H. Blank and Ralph Branton decided on their own poll after announcement of the results of the Gallup poll and an editorial in a local paper said it was felt the Gallup poll did not reach the theatre public and that the majority wanted duals.

The single feature policy for 70 Milwaukee county houses, scheduled to go into effect September 3rd, failed to materialize when H. J. Mirisch, operator of the Tower and the Oriental, withdrew from the proposed pact.

Mr. Mirisch, who has first call on subsequent-run product at his houses, said he decided not to go along on the proposed change on advice of his attorneys. He said he was told it violated government regulations.

Jack Kirsch, president of Allied of Illinois, who has been leading an attack on Balaban & Katz triple features in Chicago, on Tuesday commended the circuit for abandoning triples at its Belmont, as announced last week. Mr. Kirsch said he looks next to B. & K.'s abandoning triples at the rest of the circuit's houses, to be followed by a return to singles "as the next progressive step". Chicago's serious triples situation was nearing a solution as a result of B. & K.'s action, with independent competitors taking similar action, including the Atlantic, Marshall Square, White Palace and Dale.

Atlas Heavy RKO Stock Buyer

Heavy additions to the Atlas Corporation's portfolio of RKO securities in July were reported this week by the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Reporting on the transactions of officers, directors and heavy stockholders in the securities of their corporations September 5, the commission disclosed that the Atlas Corporation during July added 26,901 shares of common and 800 shares of six per cent preferred RKO stock to its holdings, which at the close of the month totaled 591,090 shares of common held direct and 268,230 shares held through the American company, 327,812 warrants for common and 30,681 shares of preferred.

Only two other film company transactions were reported by the commission. They were the disposition of 6,000 shares of Twentieth Century-Fox preferred stock by Joseph M. Schenck, Beverly Hills, Cal., director, and the disposition of 600 shares of Loews common stock by J. Robert Rubin, New York officer. At the close of the month Mr. Schenck still held 8,784 shares of his company's preferred stock and Mr. Rubin had 25,015 shares of Loews common.

Nate B. Spingold, New York, filed a report with the commission showing that he held 10,178 shares of Columbia common through a holding company and 100 shares jointly when he joined the company's directorate last February 7.

Amendment Urged To Modify Sunday Law in Delaware

Modification of Delaware's 144-year-old Sunday blue laws is promised in one of the planks of the platform adopted by the Democratic State Convention meeting in the Capital theatre at Dover last week. The plank, designed to clear up the controversy raging over the last several years, also recommends the amending of statutes so as to allow games of chance.

The latter recommendation is believed to refer principally to Bank Night and Bingo which were ruled illegal in Delaware in recent opinions handed down by James R. Morford.

The blue laws agitation was begun about two years ago over Sunday films after several attempts to put a Sunday film bill through the legislature failed. The arrest and fining of Charles S. Horn, owner-manager of the Blue Hen theatre at Rehoboth Beach, started the uprising.

Pennsylvania Situation

Motion picture interests and church groups in Pennsylvania are turning their attention to a drive to arouse public interest in the November vote on Sunday films. About 326 communities are expected to vote on the issue. The 326 communities expected to vote were last privileged to decide on the issue in 1935. At that time 167 municipalities voted in favor of Sunday films, while 159 voted against them.

Banned for the past few months, Sunday films will again be shown in Sanford, N. C. At a recent meeting of the board of aldermen a motion was adopted to allow R. P. Rosser, theatre operator, to resume the showing of Sunday pictures.

Characterizing the demands of the American Legion for a 10 per cent cut of the proceeds from operation of Sunday films in Gulfport, Miss., as a tribute the theatres were being required to pay and challenging the patriotism of those who would stop Sunday films, in view of the defense tax, the Richards-Paramount Theatres in a statement this week explained their refusal to continue to pay this sum to the American Legion.

Officials in Kingsport, Tenn., believe that a suit against Ralph and Malcom Taylor, owners of the Fox theatre and other theatres in Tennessee and southwest Virginia, for alleged violation of the Sunday blue laws may develop into a test of the legality of all Sunday amusements.

The McKenzie, Tenn., board of aldermen has approved Sunday films by a vote of five to one. Hours are fixed at one to five in the afternoon.

Monogram Shows Loss

Monogram Pictures lost $179,656 for the year ended June 29th, it discloses in the annual report to stockholders this week. The report asserts that "the practical disappearance of the European market for our product has had a considerable effect on the income of the company."

The situation is being tempered, it is added, by "drastic economies" which "have recently been put into effect—and," the report continues, "the budgeted costs of our future pictures have now been adjusted to a point where the company does not feel it will be dependent on foreign markets."

The company's franchise holders agreed in January, the report states, "to loan the sum of $108,785 to the company . . . in order to improve the working capital position."

CBS GAINS A MARCH ON NBC WITH COLOR TELEVISION, READY JANUARY 1

Demonstration Given for FCC Chairman and Press; Results Claimed Better Than Color Film; RCA Experimenting

Color television, claimed to give better reproduction than color motion pictures, was demonstrated by Columbia Broadcasting System a week ago Thursday in a private showing for James L. Fly, chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, and again last Wednesday, to the press in New York. It was announced that by January 1st "substantial progress" was expected toward the manufacture of the commercial equipment necessary for the color television developed by Dr. Peter C. Goldmark, chief television engineer for CBS.

RCA Experimenting

The Radio Corporation of America also has been experimenting with color television. Following the laboratory tour of the members of the FCC last February, it was reported from Camden, N. J., that RCA demonstrated color television. It was said, however, that only still pictures were shown and details were secret.

Paul W. Kesten, vice-president of CBS, described the color television thus: "In the pictures we have seen the colors are real colors, not just approximations. They appear to have a greater and more faithful range of shade and vitality than exist today even in color motion pictures."

The color television system was said to be simple, using only one camera, one transmitter and one cathode ray tube in the receiver. The receiver used in the color demonstration is a standard production model adjusted to only a minor extent and equipped with a simple attachment, according to Adrian Murphy, executive director of television. The cost of the color attachment, he said, should be comparatively small. Receivers not having the color attachment can, it was reported, pick up good black and white pictures from the same signal. The color television system uses the same width channel as is used for regular television transmission.

Mr. Kesten said the use of color increased the apparent definition of the picture and made small objects easier to recognize. He added, "Color, in the opinion of those who have seen it, added depth to the whole picture and eliminated the flat quality that many people have felt exists in black and white television."

See Greater Acceptance

The standards used produced a black and white picture of 343-line quality which compares with the 441-line used by the National Broadcasting Company for its regular programs. However, an increase in the number of lines of the color picture is contemplated. It was said that Dr. Goldmark had started work on raising the line number to between 400 and 500 while keeping within the 4¼ megacycle band width, conventionally used for the picture signal.

After viewing the demonstration, Mr. Fly said, "I do not doubt that if we can start television off as a color proposition, instead of as a black and white show, it will have a greater potential acceptance with the public." He said he liked color television better than black and white and added, "Color television has realism, clarity, definition and life."

CBS has not released technical details of the system. Previously many thought that three separate signals would have to be combined to produce color television. CBS's color television will be explained at the next meeting in New York of the industry's television committee.

MGM PLANNING NEW RADIO EXPLOITATION

Beginning September 15th, MGM will inaugurate a new radio exploitation for its films. This will consist of special 14½ minute recorded programs furnished gratis to radio stations, and prepared in the company's Culver City studios. These recorded programs will contain a resume of the film, short dialogue scenes, comment on MGM films and personalities, and songs from the production, if any. The transcriptions will be released twice monthly, and will be given for use only on sustaining programs.

"Strike Up the Band" will be the first of the series, featuring Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland, and Paul Whiteman and orchestra. Following, then, will be "Hullabaloo," "Little Nelly Kelly," and "Bitter Sweet."

Don Lee Station To Resume

The Don Lee television station, W6XAO, in Los Angeles will be shut down only for a few days to shift to its new wave-length. W2XAO, as NBC's W2XBS in New York and other stations, formerly operated on the old number one television channel and must move to make room for FM broadcasting which was given the television space by the FCC.

Tom Lee, head of the organization, said that 525-line transmission, recently inaugurated, was a success. Baseball games have been telecast as part of the 14½ hours per week schedule. A program of more outdoor pickups during the Fall and Winter was announced. Negotiations are underway to obtain the television rights to certain football games. A total of 39 outdoor pickups has already been telecast by the station.

Cincinnati Station Approved

The FCC has approved the application of the Crosley Corporation for a television broadcasting station in Cincinnati, to operate on the 50-56 mc channel with 1,000 watts power. The Crosley station, to be built at a cost estimated at over $100,000, will experiment with a transmitting system in which the picture is composed of 30 frames per second interlaced, with 441 and 507 lines. The station will be erected atop the 49-story Carew Tower.

The Allen B. DuMont Laboratories, Paramount affiliate, added a new feature to the New York skyline with the erection of a tower atop 515 Madison Avenue for the company's television station which is expected to begin program operations sometime this Fall. Using a tower on top of the 42-story building, DuMont Television expects to cover the metropolitan area within a radius of about 40 miles.

With work on switching NBC's television station in New York, W2XBS, from the old number one channel to the new number one, O. B. Hanson, vice-president and chief engineer, announced that preliminary tests probably will begin within ten days. No date was assigned, however, for the resumption of regular program operations.

Many features, introduced as makeshifts during the 15-month operations period, Mr. Hanson said, are being made permanent features in the studio set-up. Among these, he added, is the lap-dissolve, the familiar motion picture technical trick in which one image disappears while another takes its place. Changes are also being made in the equipment to improve the pictorial quality.

It was reported that the National Television Systems Committee may request NBC to conduct field tests using other than the 441-line 30-frame standard to help determine the most suitable system. Mr. Hanson said that tests could be conducted during the hours when the regular programs were not scheduled. It is possible, however, that NBC may wait until definite standards are adopted by the industry committee before resuming regular programs.

At San Francisco Fair

More than 10,000 persons saw a special six-day television demonstration held at the San Francisco Fair by RCA and Westinghouse. Outdoor telecasts were transmitted each evening from the Court of Seven Seas to the RCA and Westinghouse lounges in the Hall of Electricity. Ned Burman, in charge of television at the RCA exhibit at the Fair, used new lighting equipment said to make possible the telecasting of night scenes as clearly as those in daylight.

Eddy To Head B. & K. Television

Balaban & Katz has engaged William C. Eddy, former head of the television effects division for NBC, to head the new Chicago television station for which the FCC has granted a license. Mr. Eddy holds a number of television patents and for two years was in charge of studio operations for Farnsworth Television. He joined NBC in 1937 where he was in charge of lighting and all animated effects. There he developed his animated advertising cartoons and his kaleidoscope television curtain for use between the acts of television plays.

DuMont Questions Public

A questionnaire seeking to determine the program preferences of the New York television audience is being distributed by the Allen B. DuMont Laboratories, Paramount affiliate. NBC had a system in which each television set owner was asked to check the quality of each program and mail the reply to the company.

Will Baltin, program director of the DuMont station, W2XWV, will tabulate the results of the questionnaire and use them as a guide in formulating the station's programs. Those receiving the questionnaire are asked to check their favorite type of television program and how many hours a day they think programs should be available. Other questions are whether individual programs should be long or short, what kind of sporting events are preferred and what would be considered the ideal television program for afternoon and evening.

Shooting at Randolph Field

Shooting started this week at Randolph Field on "I Wanted Wings," which is being directed by Jay Theodore Reed for Paramount with the U. S. Army's cooperation. The cast includes Ray Milland, William Holden, Brian Donlevy and Constance Moore. Various Army officers stationed at Randolph will appear in the film.

LAWYERS SEEK RULING ON RADIO GIVEAWAYS

Bar Committee Cites Justice Department for Refusing to Prosecute Program Sponsors

The committee on communications of the American Bar Association in its annual report, made public this week in New York, calls for a clean-cut legal definition of the status of giveaway radio programs such as "Pot o' Gold," "Mead's Bakery" and similar shows, stating that it would be "wise" to submit such programs to the scrutiny of the courts. "Pot o' Gold," particularly, has been the subject of film theatre attack.

Protested by Exhibitors

Radio and other giveaway programs have been the subject of protests by exhibitor organizations on the ground that they interfere with attendance at theatres. In many states giveaways or games are permitted when conducted by churches, charitable and other organizations but are banned in motion picture theatres.

Exhibitors and exhibitor groups took the Tums "Pot o' Gold" fight to the Federal Communications Commission and the Department of Justice.

The committee's report calls attention to the fact that the Department of Justice has refused to prosecute sponsors of such programs despite the provisions of Section 316 of the Communications Act. The report adds that a court "decision will still be useful as leaving a clear issue—whether or not the public interest would be served by new legislation prohibiting such programs."

"The conclusion of the Department of Justice," the report says, "was apparently based on the view that 'consideration' must run from the prospective recipient of the prize, to constitute the broadcast a 'gift enterprise,' and that no such consideration is involved in the schemes in question. . . . In view of the strong appeal which such programs have, this administrative construction of the statute seems likely to result in an increase in the number of such programs."

Concerning Government control of radio, the report says: "If the Government is to be kept out of actual management of radio programs, however, the broadcasting companies must deserve and maintain public confidence as to the way in which broadcast programs are at present selected, and as to the fair working of the system as between the large business units and the smaller ones."

Among the recommendations in the report is that stations and networks keep a log showing which groups have been given free time and that such logs be made available to those who seek to determine whether time has been allotted fairly. A survey of legal decisions dealing with radio is contained in the report and after a review of the law of defamation by radio, it is pointed out that federal legislation might be desirable.

Theatre and Other Game Developments

With Bingo showing a revival in the Milwaukee area, exhibitors hailed a ruling by Roland J. Steinle, circuit judge, upholding Charles W. Trampe, Milwaukee exhibitor and head of Film Service, Inc., in his refusal to submit to an adverse examination in his suit to secure an injunction restraining the American Luther Association from holding Bingo games.

Mr. Trampe's action had been postponed since early May when he refused to answer certain questions in an adverse examination conducted by Charles Orth, court commissioner. Ben J. Miller, counsel for Mr. Trampe, objected to the questions as being improper, immaterial and irrelevant.

The Bahn Frei hall has been restrained from conducting Bingo as a result of action brought by Mr. Trampe and a subsequent state supreme court ruling which held that the game is a public nuisance.

Two Holyoke, Mass., theatres have been ordered to discontinue the practice of awarding cash awards in connection with their entertainment. The theatres were running a "Klondike Night" each week.

The Golden Gate International Exposition at San Francisco has installed the west coast theatre giveaway game, "Ten-O-Win," as a nightly feature at the fair during September, with $1,000 in awards being given away nightly.

Warner Club Elects

The Warner Club of Philadelphia has elected Irving Blumberg president for the new season. Other officers are: Martin Ainsman, vice-president in charge of entertainment; Joseph Feldman, vice-president in charge of welfare; Floyd Bretz, vice-president in charge of membership; Helen V. Mahoney, secretary; J. Ellis Shipman, treasurer. Mr. Feldman also is chairman for contributions and loans. The board of governors includes Henry Eytinge, George Campbell, Joseph Mazer, Henry Kahan, Maurice Gable, Al Cohen, Birk Binnard, Charles Moyer, Dorothy Burd, Ted Schlanger, David Weshner, A. J. Vanni and Jack Flynn.

To Honor Zagrans, McNamee

Industry members in Philadelphia will honor Charles Zagrans, recently elevated to branch manager for RKO there, and Frank McNamee, who resigned that post, at a testimonial dinner to be given September 26th at the Hotel Warwick. In resigning to enter another branch of the industry on his own, Mr. McNamee terminated 18 years with RKO and its predecessors, while Mr. Zagrans is marking his 20th year in the industry. Vince O'Donnell, booker, was promoted to office manager of the exchange, the post formerly held by Mr. Zagrans.

Evergreen Buys Portland Orpheum

The cancellation of the Orpheum theatre building lease to John Danz, Seattle and the sale of the property to the Evergreen State Amusement Corporation was reported in Portland by Paul Farrens, attorney for the Orpheum Building Corporation and Albert J. Fink, general manager of Evergreen, for Frank Newman, president. Title will pass to Evergeen on October 1st.

Hollywood Gives $440,416

Total of the film industry's contribution to the American Red Cross and the Allied War Relief funds was said this week to be $440,416. In Hollywood last week, Samuel Goldwyn, representing the industry, gave a check for that amount to Dr. A. H. Giannini, chairman of the Citizens' Emergency Committee, of the Red Cross.

TIME OUT FOR RAIDS

British studios are already suffering from the occasional ministrations of Nazi bombers, and shooting has been interrupted more than once in studios near London by air raid warnings.

A case in point comes from Denham where Gabriel Pascal has been shooting on "Major Barbara."

The Denham Studios has its own air raid siren, which is the public siren for the district. On Friday last, at the sounding of the warning all work ceased at the studios and the entire Pascal unit decamped to the shelters in the basement of the building, which are equipped with tables, chairs, telephones, drinking water, first-aid outfits, etc. Gabriel Pascal estimates that this shut-down cost his unit £1,000 per hour.

Warner Circuit Books RKO Films

Ned E. Depinet, vice-president in charge of distribution for RKO Radio, announced this week the closing of negotiations with the Warner circuit for 1940-41 product.

The transaction involves playing time for RKO Radio product in 359 situations, including first run theatres in such metropolitan cities as Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Cleveland and Milwaukee. A. W. Smith, Jr., sales manager, represented RKO, and Clayton Bond, buying executive, represented the circuit.

Sixteen of RKO's exchanges will figure in the servicing of product for the Warner circuit. "The completion of the deal with Warner Brothers rounds out the greater part of our circuit selling and gives the organization its most successful season for this period in several years," Mr. Depinet said.

The company also has closed a deal with the Balaban & Katz circuit of Chicago for 1940-41 season. Forty theatres are involved in the transaction.

Flannery Day

Over two thousand Chicago exhibitors, theatre managers, film exchange officials, labor leaders and politicians attended the annual Tom Flannery Day at Nippersink Country Club, last Wednesday, August 28. Mr. Flannery, who heads the White Way Sign Company, inaugurated the picnic about four years ago and since that time it has become an annual event for the motion picture industry in the Chicago area.

See Business Improvement

Northern California theatre and amusement operators are facing the autumn and winter season optimistically, following the results of a business survey by the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce, which shows steady business gains for each of the first eight months of the year. This, coupled with the closing of the exposition September 30th, is believed to indicate prosperous weeks ahead.

Poll Names Best Actors, Players

Robert Donat, Bette Davis, Mickey Rooney, Virginia Weidler, Thomas Mitchell and Hattie McDaniel were first in their respective player categories, and Frank Capra led the directors, in the first annual joint poll of exhibitors and newspaper critics, conducted this year by the Film Daily, to determine the best players and directors for the season between May 1, 1939, and April 30th last.

Honored for "Chips"

Mr. Donat's selection was said to have been made largely for his performance in MGM's "Goodbye, Mr. Chips." Runners up were Spencer Tracy, James Stewart, Raymond Massey, and Lawrence Olivier.

For the best player performance by an actress, Miss Davis led Vivian Leigh, Joan Fontaine, Greta Garbo, and Rosalind Russell. Her selection was based on her work in "Dark Victory," "The Old Maid," "Juarez" and "The Private Lives of Elizabeth and Essex."

Mickey Rooney scored for the best performance by a juvenile actor, and Miss Weidler for that by a juvenile actress.

Thomas Mitchell was chosen for his work as a supporting actor in "Stagecoach," and Miss McDaniel for work as supporting actress in "Gone With the Wind."

Mr. Capra topped the "Twenty Best Directors of 1939-40" with a rating of 3,750 points, the peak (in the players' ratings, Mr. Donat scored a point high of 2,530), and led John Ford, Alfred Hitchcock, Ernst Lubitsch, Sam Wood, William Dieterle, King Vidor, George Cukor, Victor Fleming, Michael Curtiz, Edmund Goulding, John Cromwell, Cecil B. De Mille, Norman Taurog, Henry King, W. S. Van Dyke, 11, Gregory La Cava, Lewis Milestone, Frank Borzage, and Clarence Brown. Mr. Capra was represented, in the 12-month period, by "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington."

Directors Vote Faith In George Skouras

The board of directors of Skouras Theatres Corporation, New York, has refused to accept the resignation offered by George Skouras, president, following his indictment, on Friday, August 30, on a charge of conspiring to bribe former Circuit Judge Martin T. Manton. The board expressed full confidence in Mr. Skouras who denied the charge.

The indictment asserted that in January, 1937 Mr. Skouras made a purported loan of $30,000 to former Judge Manton and obtained his approval of a $155,000 bid for the Academy of Music, 14th Street theatre in New York. Also indicted were the Skouras Theatre Corporation, Ktima Corporation, in which Skouras Theatres has a 50 percent interest, and Harvey B. Newins, real estate broker and friend of former Judge Manton, who, it was said, arranged the transaction.

The Academy of Music had been rented prior to 1937 by the Skouras company for $175,000 from Milton C. Weisman, receiver of Fox Metropolitan Playhouses. The Fox company rented the theatre from the Schinasi estate and it was asserted, that, by the sale of the lease to the Skouras company, Fox Playhouses lost $1,500,000 in assets.

Nazis Push Attack on March of Time For German War Shots in "Ramparts"

Scene from "Inside Nazi Germany", two-reel March of Time release in January, 1938, showing Baron Von Gienanth, now with the German Embassy at Washington.

March of Time, a week ago, again went into its production laboratories to alter its much-altered "Ramparts We Watch", and emerged with a first-class controversy, plus a threatened lawsuit, from agents in the U. S. of Nazi Germany.

March of Time had added some 400 feet from "Baptism of Fire", the Nazis' own war record of some of its earlier invasions and destructions in World War II. "Baptism" has been shown limitedly in theatres in the U. S., and was shown to Congress, a month ago, causing quite a stir. (See MOTION PICTURE HERALD, July 13th, page 8.) Originally, it was reputedly used in Europe to terrorize governments of countries Germany was about to invade.

Louis de Rochemont, of March of Time, said, "Title to the 'Baptism' picture was obtained from the British Government through the transfer by the British Alien Property Custodian of a copy of the film which had been seized in Bermuda."

March of Time and RKO Radio, as distributor, besides certain circuit customers of "Ramparts", immediately were threatened "by legal action and reprisals", emanating from the German Embassy at Washington, and reportedly inspired by Baron Ulrich Von Gienanth, Nazi Embassy secretary, acting through Ernest Hepp, a Nazi agent.

George Schaefer, president of the RKO distributing company, said that the Nazis here had "hinted at reprisals to be taken against a European company which is an affiliate of a certain American exhibiting chain" which had booked "Ramparts".

Through all of the arguing, March of Time refused to bow to what it described as "Nazi censorship", and on Monday Ufa Films, Inc., official distributor of German films in the U. S., formally notified that it had arranged to sue for an injunction to restrain further use of the "Baptism of Fire" shots, on grounds of infringement. March of Time declared it would assume the defense of any action brought against RKO or any exhibitor customers.

Circuits of Warner Brothers, Fox-National, RKO, Publix-Shea, Dent, Fanchon & Marco, Lawrence & Buck Wilder have booked "Ramparts".

First theatre showing of the revised "Ramparts," with the "Baptism" shots, was given Friday, August 30th, at Loew's Palace, Memphis.

52 STORIES, BOOKS, STAGE PLAYS BOUGHT IN AUGUST BY PRODUCERS

Three Films to Be Re-made; "Tobacco Road," "Hellz-a-poppin" Bought by 20th-Fox, Universal; 40 Original Stories

Hollywood producers purchased during August 52 stories for filming. Of these 40, or 79 per cent, were original stories, seven were books, magazine stories or rights to motion pictures to be re-made, and five were stage plays.

Three to Be Re-made

The screen rights to three films, to be re-made, were purchased in the closing month of the product year. Warners is planning to re-make "Convention City," first filmed in 1933 with Joan Blondell, Dick Powell and Adolphe Menjou. Allen Rivkin is preparing the scenario which will have a political background, from Peter Milne's story.

Warners also have announced that Raoul Walsh is seeking to buy from 20th Century-Fox "The Cockeyed World," a motion picture made in 1929 with Edmund Lowe and Victor McLaglen as the two featuring Marines "Quirt" and "Flagg." If and when the story is purchased Warners will cast James Cagney and Humphrey Bogart in the leading roles.

Ferenc Molnar's play "The Swan," in which Frances Howard appeared in a silent version motion picture for Paramount some fifteen years ago, has been purchased from David O. Selznick as the first independent production of William Hawks for RKO. Ronald Colman will star in this new version and Mr. Hawks is reported to be seeking to borrow Joan Fontaine for the co-starring lead. Charles Belden will write the scenario.

In August Walt Disney purchased "The Reluctant Dragon," a story by Kenneth Graham, to be used as a part of his forthcoming feature with Robert Benchley, who recently signed a contract with the cartoonist. The picture will be released under that title and will include live action and animated cartoons—a new procedure in cartoon production. Filming of the live action will begin early in the fall and it is expected that the picture will be ready for release late this winter.

MGM Acquires Song

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has acquired the rights to the musical piece "Ballad for Americans," first heard on Norman Corwin's "Pursuit of Happiness" radio show, sung by Paul Robeson, and now a popular work. It will be used as the principal musical piece in the forthcoming Mickey Rooney-Judy Garland vehicle, "Babes on Broadway."

"Tobacco Road" and Hellz-a-poppin," two of Broadway's current stage successes, have been purchased for production at the conclusion of the Broadway and road-show runs. "Tobacco Road," running for more than six-and-a-half years, has been purchased by Twentieth Century-Fox at a reported price ranging from $100,000 to $200,000. Nunnally Johnson, who adapted John Steinbeck's "Grapes of Wrath" to the screen for the company has been assigned to the scenario and he also will be associate producer.

"Hellz-a-poppin," the Olsen and Johnson musical comedy farce has been acquired by Universal for production by the Jules Levey-Mayfair production unit. Reputed to have cost the company $200,000 for the screen rights, which also includes the screen rights to the services of Olsen and Johnson and most of the cast, the picture will go into production following its road-show run.

Twentieth Century-Fox have abandoned a plan to produce annual sequels to their "The Californian," now in production, because of a protest by Republic which claimed ownership to the name "Zorro," lead character in "The Californian" and in the planned sequels which were based on the Johnston McCulley series of stories "The Curse of Capistrano." Republic has produced two serials written around the "Zorro" character. "The Californian" is a remake of a Douglas Fairbanks' picture made in 1920 in which he portrayed "Zorro."

FCC Hearings On Radio Open

The 1940-41 hearings of the Federal Communications Commission opened Wednesday with contesting applications for a 250-watt daytime broadcasting stations at Jacksonvile, Ill.

Permits Granted

The FCC has granted construction permits to stations in Tampa, Fla.; Traverse City, Mich., and Augusta, Ga. Power increases were granted to WMBS, Uniontown, Pa., and WLOK, Lima, O. Applications for construction permits have been made for Worcester, Mass., and Houston, Tex. A construction permit has been granted CBS for a new international short-wave station with 50,000 watts power to be located at Brentwood, N. Y.

The CBS engineering department announced that the construction cost of the two new CBS 50,000 short wave transmitters would be more than $300,000. The short wave station WCBS broadcast 4,577 hours of programs during the year ended June 30th. This represents an increase of 26 per cent over the year before.

Sidney D. Spear, assistant to the legal adviser of the State Department, has been appointed to the Law Department of the FCC to advise on all matters involving employment and labor problems in relation to the regulation of communications.

An investigation of the charges made before the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee that Harry C. Mahaffay, clerk of the U. S. District Court of Wilmington, illegally postponed in 1932 the Government's anti-trust suit against RCA, has been ordered by Federal Judge John P. Fields. Stewart Lynch, U. S. District attorney at Wilmington, has been directed to make the investigation. At the Senate hearing Mr. Mahaffay denied the accusations.

C. C. Potwin, consultant to Better Theatres on acoustic design and treatment, has just finished supervision of the acoustical installation and treatment of the FM transmitter room of W2XOR's station at 444 Madison Avenue.

George W. Klingaman, former holder of a Research fellowship at Lehigh University, has been appointed to the engineering staff of WOR to specialize in FM broadcasting at the new station. He is the fourth engineer to be employed by WOR solely for FM work.

Stromberg-Carlson has started a campaign to popularize FM receivers. The special radio programs are carried over WQXR and its FM affiliate, W2XQR.

Three Pittsburgh radio stations have already applied for FM licenses. WWSW would use 3,000 watts and operate 24 hours per day; KDKA and WJAS have also asked for FM stations but no details will be announced until the FCC acts on the applications.

Chesterfield's Free Admission Unit Booked Into 60 Houses in the New York Territory

Having already played in some 175 theatres throughout the United States, the Chesterfield Cigarette admission-free advertising motion picture show featuring "Pleasuretime" with Fred Waring and "Tobaccoland, U.S.A." has been booked in some 60 additional theatres in the New York area, in competition to admission-charging houses.

Completed Year Ago

Both of the films were completed a year ago by the Industrial Pictures' Division of the March of Time, under the supervision of John Wood, general manager. "Tobaccoland U.S.A.," runs 36 minutes, while "Pleasuretime" runs 22 minutes.

Tickets are distributed through merchants in the localities where the theatres are located.

Chesterfield is reported to pay exhibitors at the rate of 17 cents per unit for each seat of the individual theatre's capacity. The theatres are taken over from one to three days.

The show was presented in conjunction with the Glen Miller broadcast in Detroit, recently, it was reported, and played to some 5,000 persons. It is booked through Newell-Emmett Company, advertising agency for Chesterfield, who have assigned a special representative for the task.

Certain of the theatres playing the show were reported to have played to capacity houses, a theatre in point being the Times, a Consolidated house on 42nd Street.

Free shows such as offered by Chesterfield "are creating a Frankenstein" for the film industry. Charles C. Moskowitz, vice-president of Loew's in charge of New York theatres, said Wednesday.

Among the circuits which have booked the show are Century, Randforce, Consolidated, Brandt and Fabian. The theatre suspends its regular performances and puts on a continuous one-hour performance. Advertising and exploitation material is sniped up throughout the territory.

New Theatre Patronage

According to Chesterfield, these showings have attracted persons to the theatres who have never been inside its doors.

One exhibitor, alarmed at the intrusion of the admission free show into the exhibition field, threatened last week to place blow-ups of rival cigarette advertisements in his lobby free of charge.

Pix Theatre on 42nd Street has booked the show September 11-12.

Martin H. Barrett, chief of the motion picture department of Newell-Emmett Company, advertising agency, is directing the campaign. "Tobaccoland" was in production from March, 1939, through December, 1939, and was filmed on location in the various tobacco-growing localities.

"Pleasuretime" was filmed at various times in conjunction with the March of Time, according to Mr. Wood, who declined to divulge the cost of the two productions.

'WHOLESOMENESS' PLEA OF MAYOR

"Now, as never before, it is essential that the entertainment industry continue to supply our citizens with wholesome, diverting stories which do so much to refresh our minds in these days of turmoil and strife," Mayor Floyd F. Green, Columbus, wrote in congratulating Manager Russell Bovim, of Loew's Ohio, on the opening of the fall season at that house August 30th, when "Boom Town" started an engagement at an advanced scale of 40 and 60 cents for matinee and night, respectively, including state and federal taxes. Children's admissions were 20 cents at all times.

'Noiseless' Camera Built at 20th-Fox

A new mobile, near-soundless motion picture camera which eliminates the use of studio "blimps" has been perfected by engineers of the 20th Century-Fox Film Corporation under the supervision of Dan Clark, executive director of photography.

Completed after eight years of research, the new camera is said to eliminate all distortion and bring a clearer, sharper picture to the screen. It resembles the equipment used in the pre-sound era, weighing only 115 pounds in comparison with the 450-pound cameras now in use.

Because of its weight—one man can tote it anywhere on the lot—and the ease of mobility it is estimated by studio officials that it will save two hours a day in shooting time.

Chief innovation, however, is the fact that the new camera makes so little noise that it no longer is necessary to photograph through glass in the sound-proof but clumsy studio "blimps." Lowest point on sound meters used for such tests if 26 decibels and the new camera in operation hardly registers on such meters.

Patents on the new camera, known commercially as the Cine-Simplex are held by 20th Century-Fox. At present there are three such cameras in use at the Westwood Studio—two models built by Fox engineers and a third built to specifications by the Cine-Simplex Corporation of Syracuse, N. Y., manufacturing agents.

The model cameras have been used in shooting "Brigham Young" and "The Californian", two of the studio's 1940-41 specials. Orders have been placed by 20th-Fox for a number of this type. David Walters, Cine-Simplex plant manager, declined to reveal the exact figure, but he said the Fox order alone would keep the 100-man laboratory busy for the next six months. The new camera retails for approximately $12,000.

Stage Season Set In Philadelphia

The legitimate stage in Philadelphia, for the first time in many years has started its season before Labor Day. Al Jolson opened the Forrest Theatre on August 27th with his "Hold On to Your Hats," and Ed Wynn, as star and producer of "Boys and Girls Together," follows at the Forrest on September 16th. The Locust St. Theater, operated by the Shubert interests along with the Forrest, opens September 9th with the "New Pins and Needles" labor reveue.

Other Bookings Set

Bookings already announced for this city include many screen names. Although no definite dates have been set as yet, definitely assured for either the Forrest or Locust are Katharine Hepburn in "The Philadelphia Story," George Abbott's "Too Many Girls" musical, "Hellzapoppin'," John Barrymore in "My Dear Children," "The Man Who Came To Dinner," Bert Lahr in "DuBarry Was a Lady," "Separate Rooms" with Alan Dinehart, Glenda Farrell and Lyle Talbot, and Gertrude Lawrence in "Skylark."

In addition, the American Theatre Society has announced four of its six subscription plays with Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night" starring Helen Hayes; "The Time of Your Life" with Eddie Dowling and Julie Haydon; "Ladies in Retirement" with Flora Robson, and "There Shall Be No Night" with the Lunts.

The Erlanger Theatre, independent house, will also present a number of plays this season, attractions to be announced later.

The Cincinnati legitimate season, opening Oct. 10th with Gertrude Lawrence in "The Skylark" at the Taft, is headed for a 20-week stretch, compared with 14 weeks last year, according to Nelson G. Trowbridge, resident manager. Second attraction will be Tallulah Bankhead in "The Little Foxes," at the Cox.

Other productions thus far booked include: "Too Many Girls," "Life With Father," "Step This Way," "The Man Who Came to Dinner," "The Philadelphia Story," with Katharine Hepburn, and "There Shall Be No Night," with the Lunts. The Taft, larger of the two houses, normally is dark, and is used sporadically for legitimate attractions.

The legitimate season in Columbus, Ohio, will be inaugurated at the Hartman Theatre September 26th with Tallulah Bankhead in "The Little Foxes," according to Robert F. Boda, manager.

ENGLISH EXHIBITORS SPLIT OVER NEW MINIMUM ADMISSION PRICES

Scale Set by Three Major Circuits Meets Objections from Independents; Fixed Scale Is Held Impracticable

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

With the publication at long last of the admission rates agreed upon by the three major circuits, Gaumont-British, Associated British, and Odeon, fundamental factor in which is the establishment for first run houses of a ninepenny minimum, British exhibitors are now getting down to the complex job of rearranging their seat prices.

No Agreement Seen

Despite the backing the circuit plan has in other circles—notably among the lesser circuits and with selected independents—there is by no means wholesale agreement. A national ninepenny minimum is now seen to be less than likely. There is not even a united attitude on whether to increase seat prices boldly or timorously. (The British penny or pence is equivalent to two U. S. cents, the shilling to 25 cents. Symbols for each are d and s and combinations of both are written with the shillings first followed by a fraction bar and the pence—EDITOR.)

The scale devised by the circuits is an elastic one. Its pivotal points are the ninepenny minimum and the one shilling and twopence, and one shilling and ninepence seats, which are likely to become the most general of adoption. It ranged, however, up to two shillings and sixpence, and so includes alternative charges as to offer a wide range upon which the first run house can devise an appropriate scale.

The CEA, which has scouted any lead on admissions and refused to accept responsibility for policies, nevertheless announced the circuit's decision. The statement said:

"The major circuits have decided what they consider is an equitable method of collecting the extra £4,000,000 a year taxes which the Government demands from the Cinema Industry under the terms of the recent budget, and taking into consideration the rising costs of operating the theatres the following prices will be brought into operation as and from October 6th:

"London suburbs and first run Provincial Towns, range of minimum prices to be: 9d., 1/—d., 1/2d., 1/6d., 1/10d., 2/6d., or any prices selected from this range.

"Any theatres whose prices are now 6d., 9d., and 1/—d. with the 1/—d. as the maximum price shall be 8d., 1/—d. and 1/2d. or any prices selected from this range.

"Any situations other than London Suburbs and first run situations, where the minimum price of admission is 6d., the minimum price is to be 8d. or 9d. In towns where only one of the three major Circuits are represented, that particular circuit theatre will be free to arrange its prices according to those decided upon by the Local Exhibitors."

Lower Minimum Set

With this plan as inspiration and lead, British exhibitors all over the country are now organizing their own schemes. Some groups have already decided and agreed upon the future admission rates for their areas. The decisions indicate clearly that the pattern to be evolved will be a variegated one. Minimum prices as low as fivepence have been agreed upon already in certain districts.

The problem seems to have changed from one of justice to one of economic practicability, not so much whether the exhibitor dare to raise his admissions boldly as whether he can afford to do so. Against this latter thesis are ranged the equally strong battalions who insist he cannot afford not to do so. A considerable body of exhibitor thought contends that the circuit scale is itself timid and ineffective, underlining the contention with reminder that hundreds of first run houses have had a ninepenny minimum for years.

Standard Scale Variable

As recorded in these columns frequently the British market is a varied and mercurial factor in which conditions changing from place to place and time to time make a fixed or standard scale impracticable. It is not surprising, thus, that the South East Lancashire CEA have decided on a fivepenny minimum with admission increases of modest caliber and a Saturday matinee price as low as threepence. Even the ninepenny seat has been advanced only to tenpence halfpenny, which allows the exhibitor but a penny for himself.

Edinburgh's CEA group's new admission scale sets the minimum at fivepence (it was previously fourpence), advances the sixpenny seat to eightpence and the shilling seat to one shilling and threepence. Low as the minimum here is, the increases are not unreasonable and allow a "rakeoff" to the exhibitors after payment of the new taxes.

Low in Manchester

Manchester's new admission rates reported in MOTION PICTURE HERALD are among the most modest in their increases. There the view obtains that with wages still, in general, at prewar level, and with the cost of living greatly increased, the patron has less to spend on entertainment than hitherto. The timidity with which such groups have attacked the problem is in direct opposition to the contention of the circuits and of certain independents like Charles Metcalfe that unless boldness is used in arranging the new admission scales the exhibitor will be the loser.

On the one hand is the more cautious party which contends that high admissions are not economically practicable, that until wages increase in line with the cost of living there is no room for drastic change. This viewpoint has champions which plead that sacrifice rather than selfishness should be the order of the day. With a flavor of patriotism it bases its contentions on economics.

Against it is the realist camp which insists that unless admission rates be not increased, and boldly, right now, the future will not be practicable. Here, they contend, is the golden opportunity to adjust finance to conditions. The public are already getting more than value for money. It is a case of sheer survival, and the price of entertainment must now be raised to a figure which will enable not only the tax but the swollen overheads to be paid.

Would Absorb Tax

There is a lesser exhibtior section which has been considering leaving prices where they are and bearing the brunt of the tax themselves. To this group, and to the more timid exhibitor bands, they reply that to do so is not only to court future disaster, but also to defeat the ends of the Chancellor.

The new entertainments tax, they point out, was devised on the basis of a potential extra £4,000,000 which Sir Kingsley Wood decided the trade must contribute to the War Budget. To prevent this being raised is to defeat the Chancellor's own ends and to go contrary to patriotic purposes.

The tax is calculated to raise this £4,000,000. It has been pointed out by Charles Metcalfe that on his own contentions but a few weeks back, the exhibitor has an expense increase of £2,250,000 since the War. This will increase as the War goes on. Wage bonuses amount to at least £1,500,000. Prospective increases included, and film hire increases excluded, the exhibitor will have to meet an additional £10,000,000 annually. How can he meet it with such modest admission increases as a penny or a halfpenny a seat?

These are the problems the British exhibitor is facing, problems which apparently cannot be solved on a national basis, but must be tackled according to the varying conditions and circumstances of locality and time. The new scale devised by the circuits is not likely to be adopted generally, but it is agreed widely that it is elastic enough to cover varying circumstances, granted a certain courage and dash in tackling the matter.

New Money Pact Discussed

Official conversations have been begun in London regarding a new monetary export agreement between the American film companies and the British Government. The present agreement expires October 31st.

Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy, who was instrumental in negotiating the present agreement under which seven major companies are authorized to withdraw $17,500,000 during the one year term, is understood to be active in the new discussions.

BRITISH WARNED ON PICTURE FINANCING

The British Government should not in the future assume direct financial responsibility for the production of feature films, it is recommended in a report of a Government appointed committee on national expenditure. The report, published last week advocated changes in the motion picture policy of the Ministry of Information.

The committee likewise recommended that the Government should arrange for the distribution of those documentary films which are not of urgent importance on a commercial basis. It also was suggested that closer cooperation be developed and maintained between the fighting forces and the Ministry of Information and the newsreels.

Cavalcanti Joins Ealing

Albert Cavalcanti, G.P.O. Film Unit producer, responsible also for "Men of the Lightship," has resigned in order to take up an assignment with Ealing Studios, where he will work in association with Michael Balcon.

Although the change will remove him from Service to civil production, Cavalcanti actually will be in charge of the shorts department at the Ealing Studios under which many films made under Ministry of Information auspices will be launched.

Cavalcanti was engaged wtih David Macdonald at the time of the French capitulation in preparing a film dealing with the French and British fishing fleets.

'HOWARDS' OPENS IN RICHMOND; 'WESTERNER' AND 'ROCKNE' SET

Pre-release Engagements of "Brigham Young", "Boom Town", "Sea Hawk" and "Kit Carson" Hit Record Grosses

Columbia Pictures on Wednesday opened its "Howards of Virginia" in four theatres of Richmond, Virginia. Meanwhile Samuel Goldwyn's "The Westerner" was set to open September 19th in Fort Worth, Texas; Warners' "Knute Rockne-AllAmerican" was set for October 4th in South Bend, while Paramount is planning another world premiere for "Northwest Mounted Police."

Meanwhile, reverberations of premieres and pre-release engagements of past weeks roll in. In approximately one week since its opening at seven of Salt Lake City's theatres, Twentieth Century Fox's "Brigham Young" is estimated to have been seen by almost one-third of the city's population. MGM's "Boom Town" was held over for a fourth week in three of its original test engagements, and, in most, is doing 200 per cent and more of normal business. Warners' "The Sea Hawk" is running ahead of the company's "Fighting 69th" in 17 key city situations. United Artists "Kit Carson" has established all-time records at the Denver Theatre, Denver, where it is continuing an indefinite run.

"Howards" Fills Four

Columbia Pictures this week found it necessary to expand the number of theatres housing the premiere Wednesday of its "The Howards of Virginia" to four. The Byrd, State, and Westhampton theatres had been scheduled; the rapid ticket sale forced the enlistment of the Capitol.

The premiere was held to the accompaniment of a city-wide pageant and the attendance of numerous state and city political notables.

Frank Lloyd, director, and Martha Scott, star, were guests at numerous events thereafter, including a luncheon tendered them by city Mayor Gordon Ambler; a reenactment at St. John's Church of the Patrick Henry "Liberty or Death" oration; a program of dancing and pageantry at Byrd Park; the four premieres; and a "Howards of Virginia" Ball at the John Marshall Hotel.

Governor James Price, of Virginia, attended many of the functions, and opened the Ball by dancing with Miss Scott.

The company held special trade screenings of the picture throughout the country, beginning with one at the Astor theatre, New York City, last Wednesday morning. Others were, on Tuesday, in Cleveland, Dallas, and New Haven; on Wednesday, in Los Angeles, and St. Louis; on Thursday, in Seattle; on Friday, in Portland, Oregon; on Sunday, in Philadelphia and Atlanta.

It was to hold more trade screenings next Monday in Kansas City, Cincinnati, Memphis, Milwaukee, Pittsburgh, Oklahoma City, Albany, Buffalo, Des Moines and Minneapolis; and next Tuesday, in Salt Lake City, Boston, Chicago, Denver, and Tulsa.

"Westerner" in Fort Worth

Three chartered airplanes will take producer Samuel Goldwyn, players Gary Cooper, Walter Brennan and others, from Hollywood to the opening, on September 19th, of the producer's latest, "The Westerner," at the Worth and Hollywood theatres, in Fort Worth, Texas.

ASKS AUDIENCE NOT TO BOO CANDIDATES

Eugene Street, manager, is attempting to stop booing and hissing of Presidential candidates at the Tennessee and Riveria theatres, Knoxville, Tenn., by flashing a request on the screen for more orderly demonstrations and reports that the plan has greatly curbed expressions of disapproval of either candidate.

The opening will be accompanied by local celebrations, the presence of notables, and a "Court of Beauty" contest at the two theatres, with preliminaries being held in Interstate, Robb and Rowley, and Jefferson Theatres houses throughout Texas.

On September 20th, the picture will open at the Majestic theatre, Dallas, with Mr. Goldwyn and party attending, and with approximately the same ballyhoo attendant.

The picture will then open in 51 Texas towns that week, including Houston, Austin, El Paso, San Antonio, and Galveston, and will open in 50 more the following week. The result will be concurrent booking, in one state, of one picture in more than 100 towns, a record, UA claims.

Gabe Yorke, who last week became Samuel Goldwyn's director of advertising and publicity, is in charge of the Texas publicity arrangements.

"Brigham" Attendance

Almost one-third of the population of Salt Lake City saw "Brigham Young" in the first week of its run, Twentieth Century-Fox officials estimated this week. The picture opened at seven theatres, continued at the Centre with advanced prices. It was said that 46,097 persons saw the picture in one week.

The company decided upon eight test prerelease engagements for the picture, set thus: Uptown and Esquire theatres, Kansas City, September 11th; Idaho Falls, Idaho, Thursday, August 29th; Twin Falls, Idaho and Provo, Utah, Friday, August 30th; Loew's State and Grauman's Chinese theatres, Los Angeles, Wednesday; Ambassador, St. Louis, Thursday.

"Boom Town" Fourths

MGM's "Boom Town" has been held for a fourth week in three of its original advanced price test runs, Los Angeles, Asbury Park, and Cincinnati.

The film started national release Friday, August 30th, beginning regular runs in eight key cities on Thursday, August 29th, and in 14 others the day following. These were at advanced admissions: 25 per cent for matinees, 33⅓ per cent for evenings.

Marking the first time in many seasons that a day and date engagement was scheduled in that city, "Boom Town" opened in that manner this week at the Hamrick-Evergreen Paramount and Fifth Avenue theatres, to advanced prices.

"Sea Hawk" Beats "69th"

In grosses to date, Warners' "Sea Hawk" is running ahead of the company's "The Fighting 69th," the company's home office reported this week. The latter picture was one of the best grossing pictures of the 1939-40 season, it was stated. Situations in which "The Sea Hawk" is bettering "The Fighting 69th" are: Memphis, Washington, Los Angeles, Richmond, New Haven, Hartford, Bridgeport, Worcester, Springfield, Stamford, San Francisco, Albany, Utica, Jersey City, Paterson, and Reading.

The picture is now in its fourth week at the Strand, New York City.

"Rockne" in Three

Warners will use three South Bend, Indiana, theatres to house the world premiere of its "Knute Rockne—All American" on October 4th. The theatres are the Colfax, Palace, and Granada. The three houses have a total seating capacity of 7,800. This number of seats will be used, and more may be needed, because the premiere will be held on a Friday night, eve of a Notre Dame football game.

"Northwest" Plans Mulled

Presided over by Neil Agnew, vice-president in charge of sales, and with Adolph Zukor, chairman of the board, as guest of honor, Paramount's district sales managers will meet in Kansas City next Wednesday and Thursday, to discuss sales policy and advertising plans for the company's "Northwest Mounted Police" which had an enthusiastic audience reaction at a "sneak" San Diego preview several weeks ago.

The picture is in Technicolor, and was produced by Cecil B. De Mille. The two-day Kansas City meeting will decide, among other things, whether the picture will be roadshowed or given merely an advanced price policy.

Among the Paramount men to be at the meeting will be J. J. Unger, Charles Reagan, Oscar Morgan, Milton Kusell, Harry Goldstein, G. A. Smith, Hugh Baly, M. A. Milligan, Don Chambers, H. F. Wilkes, and William Erbb.

Marketing of "Thief"

Harry Gold and L. Jack Schlaifer, general sales managers and vice-presidents of United Artists, flew from New York to Hollywood last week to confer with Alexander Korda on sales plans for the latter's latest production, "The Thief of Bagdad." They were also expected to remain in Hollywood for sales discussions on the Charles Chaplin latest, "The Great Dictator." Maurice Silverstone, UA chief executive, was expected to come from New York for conferences on the latter.

"Pastor Hall" on Broadway

James Roosevelt's British-made "Pastor Hall," distributed in America by United Artists, will have a Broadway premiere and run on September 13th, at Harry Brandt's Globe theatre. The house is to close on Friday, to prepare for the premiere.

"GWTW" Book Demand

The final figures in the New York Public Library's survey to measure the increase of demand for "Gone With the Wind," following the showing of the motion picture version in that city, published last Wednesday were cited to prove that if a picture based on a book is well made reader interest is increased.

The 60 branch libraries in the New York system had 480 copies of "Wind" before the Selznick International film was released and 640 copies on August 1st, according to Franklin F. Hopper, chief of the circulation department of the Library. The demand created by the film, it was reported, made the library buy the 160 extra copies. Also 2,500 persons during the period could not find a copy on the shelves and paid the reservation fee and waited until they could get the book.

The Library for the Blind reported that there were six copies of "Wind" in Braille which each circulated four times during the period. Each copy of the Braille edition is in 12 volumes.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

"The Villain's Protective Association," originated by a Hollywood press agent to publicize "The Villain Still Pursued Her," Harold Franklin's RKO Picture, is developing seriously, they say, with by-laws, objectives and even incorporation papers. Herbert T. Silverberg, Hollywood picture attorney, has been engaged to represent the association.

Under the presidency of Alan Mowbray, who stars in "The Villain" film, and with Boris Karloff, Margaret Hamilton and Marc Lawrence as officers, the association is planning to have regular monthly meetings to "develop the cinematic art of screen villainy" and to permit members to "pursue their personal avocations in private" away from eyes and flash bulbs of the press.

Other screen villains who have joined are: Lionel Royce, Bradley Page, Lon Chaney, Jr., John Carradine, Charles Bickford, Stanley Fields, Noel Madison, Lloyd Nolan, Horace MacMahon, Bruce McFarlane, Shemp Howard, Cyril McLaglen, Anthony Averill and John Carr.

In strict character, "The Villain's Protective Association" refused to pay to the State Franchise Commissioner the $25.00 required for the filing of incorporation papers.

The officers of the organization are to be known as Chief Mortgage Closer (President), Penny Pincher (Treasurer), and Poison Penman (Recording Secretary).

Heading the list of villains is George R. Bilson, press agent who started the whole thing.

One of those somethings we'd like to do someday is meet the guy, or guys, gal or gals who seemingly go into a fit, or fits of delirium tremens to get some of those titles for short subjects, such titles as Fireman Save My Choo, South of the Boudoir, You Can't Shoe a Horsefly, Stealin' Ain't Honest, Fulla Bluff Man, Springtime in Rockage, When a Razzberry Was a Fruit, How Wet Was My Ocean, etc. etc., et al. Not forgetting the new Fleischer-Paramount "Popeye" cartoon character endowed with the monicker Poopdeck Pappy.

ON the 24th of this month, Warden Joe O'Grady of the Nebraska state penitentiary will grab Inmate Jules Rachman by the hand, push $5 "carefare" into that hand, give him a lecture about going straight, and turn him loose togged in a prison special $12.50 suit—which may fit.

Jules has been hotelled under three "managers" since February, 1933, and originally entered the bastille manacled to a detective because he had seen fit to use a gun in an argument with two cousins, his theatre partners in Omaha, Harry and Sam Goldberg. He shot them both, and both died. The argument was over money, Jules claiming at his trial that he had been cheated.

When Jules went into prison, the warden was W. T. Fenton, who ruled the place with two iron hands. He was one of the few men in the country, incidentally, who was offered a chance to run the "rock"—the Federal "pen" at Alcatraz. He knew men, and he took a chance on Jules, who had been badly shaken in his experience in Omaha cells from the murder date, Dec. 2, 1932, until "sent up" three months later for 15 years.

Warden Fenton offered Jules the job of running the prison theatre.

Rachman, seeing a ray of light which would let him keep in cadence with the business he had known on the outside, was grateful. In fact, he even turned humorous. He told Fenton he would take the job only if the warden guaranteed not to open an opposition house down the yard after his got going. Fenton evidently knew he had hit upon the one thing which could rehabilitate Rachman.

Fenton never lived to see Rachman go free, but Rachman today, as he faces freedom he fought for unsuccessfully once, and finally won on a second appeal, is described as giving every appearance of having been worth the chance. He practically wrote the present prison honor code, runs the affairs of the men on the inside, is said to have every man from the chaplain to the warden staff rooting for him, and he has personally met more public figures interested in his case since he has been inside than he knew when he was out.

The other day they let him designate his successor, an inmate named Tommy O'Connor, who helped put through a withdrawal on a bank at which he had no account. The withdrawal was a little matter of $2,500,000, from the Lincoln National Bank, in 1930, and in lieu of his signature Tommy waved a gun in the face of the tellers. Tommy was given a 25-year stretch, figures he won't tromp the streets of St. Louis for a while and has picked up a lot of film buying knowledge from Jules. He'll be around a long time. One thing Tommy is strong against is movie bank night. Anything in conversation about a bank turns him a little sick.

The only time Exhibitor Rachman's capacity audience drops off is when one or two of the boys have been bad, and the warden sends them to bed early, without supper. He has no competition down the street, doesn't have to give away dishes, doesn't have to worry about block-booking, advancing film rentals, duals, triples or Thurman Arnold's trust suit consent decree. He pays a distributor $7.50 a feature, and they can take it or leave it.

Rachman's clientele delights in finding film boners; after seeing one of their two pictures a week, will argue it up and down the cell block for days.

Convicts, murderers, oldtimers, and first offenders like the homey type of film, Rachman says. They go strong for the Hardy Family, and doted on the Joneses when Darryl Zanuck was holding them together. Romance, the boudoir kind, they don't want. High class westerns, Dodge City, Virginia City, Bad Man of Brimstone, they enjoy. The worst two pictures in Rachman's seven years were Babes in Toyland (Laurel-Hardy) and the Marion Davies, "epic" Hearts Divided. When they don't like the film fare the boys become afflicted with temporary blindness, pains in the side, and other excuses to get back to their cells, and don't speak to Rachman above a grunt for a week.

Rachman worked out his own rules for the prison theatre. Each usher carries a "gat" to kinda keep the audience in order. He finally hit upon three rules—which were grapevined about the prison. Obeying them meant continued shows. The rules are:

1. Don't laugh if a cop gets shot.
2. Laugh if in a running fight the cop misses his target more than three times.
3. Don't boo when the law gets the upper hand.

There's an old saw in the show business that one should be nice to the doorman on the way up, because he may be among those one meets on the way down. Jules can tell about that, only his version goes this way: When a theatre manager, he used to loan a "fiver" now and then to a chap named Swanson. And then, there was another young fellow who used to throw handbills for Jules' theatre into parked cars along the streets. His name was Walter Johnson. Well, when Jules went before the pardon board the last time, the board consisted of Governor R. L. Cochran, Secretary of State Harry Swanson, and Attorney General Walter Johnson, the most impressive example of the old adage Rachman could ever experience.

U. S. HINTS WIDE PROBE OF STAGE, SCREEN LABOR

Department of Justice Hints of Wide Investigation Following Complaints from Factions

The United States Department of Justice at Washington this week indicated it might examine the labor union troubles which have seethed intermittently in all branches of the entertainment industry through several years with a view toward a possible sweeping investigation of labor unionism in the amusement field.

Department spokesmen so intimated while affirming receipt of complaints from the American Guild of Musical Artists against the larger and more powerful American American Federation of Musicians. It was pointed out that similar "anti-trust" complaints had been previously received against the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers and, from time to time, against unions or sections thereof, like the Coast section of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, and the New York projectionists' Local 306. Federal interest or mediation also has been invoked in situations such as the Philadelphia musicians' strike against the Warner Theatres, and the inter-union squabbles in Coast studios.

Guild Gets Injunction

The complaints by the musical artists' guild against the musicians' federation are a result of the smaller unit's fight against an order by the federation president, James C. Petrillo, that all instrumentalists in the guild join the federation by Monday or suffer the consequences. The Guild on Thursday, August 29th, secured a temporary injunction in New York Supreme Court to prevent Mr. Petrillo from barring guild members from employment on radio, in concert, on stage or screen, or for recordings.

Hearing on the guild's application for a permanent injunction against Mr. Petrillo's dictum is to be held in the same court Thursday.

In granting the guild request for a temporary injunction, Justice Ferdinand Pecora remarked at a provision in the musicians' federation contract permitting its president, Mr. Petrillo, to issue virtually any order, when, in his opinion, there exists an emergency. He was reminded by Henry Jaffe, guild attorney, that William Bioff, head of the Coast IATSE has such power.

Judge Pecora urged settlement of the fight but Lawrence Tibbett, guild president (who last week was also elected president of the American Federation of Radio Artists) said that Mr. Petrillo, in four interviews, had repeated a determination not to yield and hence, in Mr. Tibbett's opinion, settlement appeared impossible.

The guild this week was planning a concert in New York in which such famous members as Mischa Elman, Lily Pons, Gladys Swarthout, Efrem Zimbalist will appear. The proceeds will be used to carry on the fight against the Federation.

Tibbett Elected

Mr. Tibbett, Guild president, was elected president of the American Federation of Radio Artists late last Saturday night, at the federation's annual convention, in Denver. He succeeds Eddie Cantor.

Mr. Tibbett's election is regarded significant because, as the advocate of a "one big union" for all performers, he now heads two of the Four A's unions. Broadway specualtion, this week, also had Mr. Tibbett in line for the presidency of the Four A's next May, when the incumbent, Frank Gillmore, may resign. Edward Arnold, who is unopposed nominee for the presidency of the Screen Actors' Guild, was elected, also last week, first vice-president of the radio federation.

In Hollywood, the Screen Actors Guild was scheduled to try two members, on Wednesday, on charges of trying to extort jobs from casting directors through threats of violence. Howard R. Philbrick, general manager of the Central Casting Corporation, brought the charges.

Election Hearing Ends

A hearing in the National Labor Relations Board Los Angeles office, on Monday, before trial examiner Bruce Hunt, on the possibility of an election for a collective bargaining agency for studio office workers in eight studios, ended without the American Federation of Labor Office Employees union intervening with a claim to enroll casting office aides. The examiner this week will collate the evidence.

The Screen Office Employees Guild is seeking the election. The AFL union last week asked that a vote be held only in the casting offices.

The suit of 16 studio workers expelled from the Hollywood IATSE, for $45,000 for each, was dismissed on Tuesday by Superior Court Judge Reuben Schmidt, in Los Angeles. The plaintiffs charged their expulsion prevented them from obtaining studio work. The Judge supported the IA contention that the suit was without cause.

Scenic Artists To Elect

The Board's Washington headquarters announced on Monday that a collective bargaining election would be held within 30 days among the scenic artists and assistants of nine Hollywood companies, Warners, RKO, Twentieth Century Fox, Columbia, Loew's, Universal, Samuel Goldwyn, Paramount, and Hal Roach.

In Chicago, last week, Frank Olson, president of the local IATSE, predicted that the projectionists' contracts with the city's operators would be renewed for one more year without important changes. However, this week it was reported that the union is asking a 10 per cent raise and two weeks' vacation with pay.

In Scranton, Pennsylvania, Judge Will Leach last week granted a temporary injunction to restrain CIO pickets from picketing the Comerford theatres in that ctiy, after counsel for the circuit had filed a bill in equity against the United Theatrical Alliance Local 997.

More than 100 unnamed witnesses will be called by the Department of Justice at the trial, beginning next Monday in the St. Louis federal court, of John P. "Big" Nick and Clyde Weston, ousted head and business agent, respectively, of that city's projectionists' union, Local 143. The two are to be tried for violation of the anti-racketeering and Sherman anti-trust laws. The charges grew from negotiations the two had, in 1937, on an IATSE contract, with the city's theatre owners.

Fund Board Named

Appointment of a board of trustees to administer a newly established $1,000 sick and welfare fund has been made in San Francisco by Vic Connors, executive secretary for the Associated Actors and Artistes of America. On the board are Theodore Hale, Equity; Lucien Tobin, American Federation of Radio Artists; Don Santos, and Philip Palmer, of the American Guild of Variety Artists.

Welworth Circuit Sets Plans for Fall Exploitation

Managers of Welworth Theatres, Inc., operators of a circuit in Minnesota, North and South Dakota and Wisconsin, set plans for one of the heaviest exploitation programs in the history of the circuit in selling autumn shows, at their semi-annual convention held Tuesday in the Nicollet Hotel in Minneapolis.

Fall Boom Anticipated

Managers of the circuit reported that the defense tax has hurt business. However, an upward trend is expected in the fall. Other topics under discussion were price policies, premiums, giveaways, new problems confronting the industry, circuit problems and situations.

The convention schedule consisted of luncheon business conferences and dinner and closed with a get-together and entertainment.

Those attending were E. R. Eddie Ruben, supervisor and head of the circuit; Lowell Kaplan, booker; Cliff Gill, advertising manager; Bess Crane, Dorothy Crane and Helen Johnson, staff secretaries, all of Minneapolis. Ted Bolnick, city manager, and John Diedenhofen, manager Hollywood Theatre, and Gene Bender, manager Fifth Avenue Theatre, all three of La Crosse, Wis. Art Abelson, manager of Lake and Hollywood Theatres, Devilslake, N. D. Joe Floyd, manager Hollywood, Sioux Falls, S. D. Al Hill, manager Pantages, Minneapolis; Emery Eckberg, manager Hollywood, South St. Paul, Minn. Clayt Severson, manager Monte, Montevideo, Minn. John Cliplef, manager Hollywood Montevideo, Minnesota. Carl Engstrom, manager Newulm Theatre, Newulm, Minn. Eddie Swanson, manager Metro, Redwing, Minn., and Harold Bartlett, manager Roxy, Langdon, N. D. Arthur G. Patterson.

Special Academy Group Named

Darryl F. Zanuck, chairman of the research council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts & Sciences has appointed the following committee to studio uses of the new type mercury vapor lamps: Fred Albin, Samuel Goldwyn studios, chairman; Lawrence Aicholtz, Arthur C. Blaney, Charles Daily, Ferdinand Eich, J. G. Frayne, John Hilliard, Edward H. Reichard and Carl Schillinger. The group will function under the basic optic committee.

Warned of Imposters

Reports have come from New England and the mid-West warning exhibitors of imposters. A number of theatre managers in the New England territory, it was said, have been swindled by a man representing himself as a manager of a Miami theatre on vacation. From Chicago comes word that a man has taken money from merchants in some towns with the promise to run a patriotic flag waving trailer at the local theatre, mentioning the merchants. The adventurer has no connection with the trailer manufacturing company he claims to represent or with the local theatre.

Renew Altec Service

D. D. Query, general manager of Lincoln Theatres Corporation and King Coal Theatres, Inc., has renewed service agreements with Altec for his seven theatres.

RCA Indianapolis Plant To Expand

The RCA Manufacturing Company has completed plans for enlarging its plant at Indianapolis, Ind., by the addition of one building unit of 100,000 square feet of space, the first of a total of some 400,000 square feet which the company will need to meet requirements under the National Defense Program for products now manufactured at Indianapolis. The new building will be rushed to completion so that it may be in service by January 1st.

The Indianapolis plant is one of three operated by the company in addition to its largest factory and home office at Camden, N. J. Others are at Bloomington, Ind., recently opened for manufacturing small radios, and at Hollywood, Cal., where phonograph records are made. John M. Smith is resident vice-president at Indianapolis. The plant was opened in 1936.

Consent Decree Hit by Managers In West Virginia

The West Virginia Managers' Association voted unanimously against the proposed consent decree in its present form, at the unit's sixth annual convention last week at White Sulphur Springs in that state.

Kuykendall is Speaker

Highlight of the meeting was a talk by Edward Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, on the Government's anti-trust suit in New York, the consent decree negotiations, and questions of importance to exhibition.

J. C. Shanklin, of Ronceverte, West Virginia, presided, in the absence of S. J. Hyman, of Huntington.

Mr. Hyman was re-elected president, and Mr. Shanklin and W. H. Holt elected secretary and treasurer, respectively. Other officers elected were: Mrs. P. Thomas, G. W. Talbot, N. B. Carskadon, L. E. Rogers, R. W. Phelan, Mrs. C. P. Church, vice-presidents; Mrs. Church, northern chairman of the membership committee, and Milton Levine, southern chairman; and Lester Rosenfeld, chairman of the entertainment and reception committee.

Climax of the convention was a banquet Wednesday evening, August 28th, with, as principal speakers, the Governor of the state, Homer Holt; Boone Dawson, mayor of Charleston; Mr. Kuykendall, and Abe Hyman of Huntington.

About 150 attended.

South African Building Boom

South Africa is a market in which business is so good that there has been no reason to restrict the export of currency and in which building of theatres is proceeding at an unprecedented pace—approximately 30 having been built at a cost of $3,500,000 in the past two and one-half years. It was so described Tuesday in New York City by Otto W. Bolle, managing director in that territory for Twentieth Century-Fox. Mr. Bolle had arrived from Johannesburg, his headquarters, and was reached at the company's New York home office.

Product Guaranteed

He noted that the building boom had occurred since the opening of the company's Johannesburg office, but said that Twentieth Century-Fox had no financial interest in the new theatres. However, it guarantees the new houses a flow of product. In Cape Town and the Pretoria areas three more theatres are being constructed, and two more are planned in Rhodesia, he said. Ten other theatres are expected to be built, and these will complete the present building program and also exhaust new theatre possibilities in the South African field, Mr. Bolle thinks.

United Artists, too, is selling to the new theatres, he noted, adding that product of other companies is generally under contract to the huge I. V. Schlesinger circuit.

Theatre business is normal, with American and British pictures used only, he said.

First run theatres generally have one show per evening, and admissions ranging from 35 cents to $1, he said.

Matrimonial Comedy

Talent whose names add up to a total taxing the capacity of any showman's marquee is displayed here in a comedy that kept ripples of laughter breaking over the audience attending its preview in Hollywood, punctuated with snorts, chortles and guffaws when emphasis fell upon Robert Benchley asleep, snoring, mumbling lines, foozling gestures. It is a comedy of matrimony and business, situation and circumstances, a story of today and New York and with no purpose save to amuse.

Rosalind Russell is seen as secretary to a cement manufacturer played by Brian Aherne, who fancies himself in love with a model portrayed by Virginia Bruce. Benchley is cast as the lawyer who counsels him to a marriage of convenience, and John Carroll entertains as a South American who furnishes a fourth corner of the triangle. Complications which confound all parties in their attempts to arrive at settlement of their problems are of the sort to be expected, but the pattern of their occurrence is not.

Direction by William A. Seiter avoids routine, combines momentum and clarity. Richard Connell and Gladys Lehman attained, in their screen play based on a story by George Becks, a maximum of humor per situation and sequence. Glenn Tryon's production rates praise for roundedness and point. Art director Jack Otterson furnished a mounting setting off to advantage the work of all concerned.

Stranger On the Third Floor

(RKO Radio)

Murder Melodrama

Producer Lee Marcus, director Boris Ingster and author Frank Partos departed from routine in treatment of this melodrama, combining with the account of two murders in today's New York City the techniques of suspense and thrill first experienced by American theatregoers in 1921 when "The Cabinet of Dr. Caligari" made newspaper and magazine copy, stirred discussion and drew money into the box offices. Here are employed the camera effects, accompanied this time by sound effects, which gave that attraction its novelty. Elaboration upon the point of novelty by exhibitors exploiting the picture appears indicated.

Opening with a reporter testifying against a man he has seen fleeing the scene of a murder, the story follows the reporter, after the accused has been convicted, to his rooming-house and into a set of circumstances paralleling those on which the conviction has been obtained. This time, however, suspicion points to the reporter, who, before reporting the second murder, experiences in a dream the events—prosecution, defense, conviction, etc.—which he knows will follow. It is in the presentation of this dream that the picture uses the techniques mentioned above.

John McGuire, as the reporter, has the principal role, Peter Lorre, starred in the billing, appearing as the maniac guilty of both murders. Margaret Tallichet plays the reporter's sweetheart.

No Time for Comedy

(Warners)

Sophisticated Comedy

Titled for a stage play which made a reputation on Broadway, this is a comedy of situation and dialogue founded on a spirit of iconoclasm. The plot has to do with the experiences of a youth from Minnesota, who, upon attaining fame as a playwright in New York, becomes involved in the writing of a "drama with a message" and alienates for a time the affections of his wife. The play fails, the woman who has been his "inspiration" gives him up and reconciliation with his mate follows.

James Stewart and Rosalind Russell as playwright and wife are the center of interest with Genevieve Tobin, Charles Ruggles, Allyn Joslyn, Clarence Kolm and Louise Beavers leading the support.

Julius Philip Epstein, whose writings for Warners include the "Four Daughters" sequence of hits, adapted the stage play by S. N. Behrman. William Keighley directed with comedy values emphasized, Robert Lord served Hal B. Wallis as associate producer.

Designed for adult consumption, the film jibes at small towns, writers who think they have "messages," misguided patronesses of the arts, Hollywood, and to some extent at the institution of marriage.

The Leatherpushers

(Universal)

Comedy-Melodrama

"The Leatherpushers" is the first of the 1940-41 series of melodramas starring Richard Arlen and Andy Devine, and was considered by the preview audience as the best of this Universal group. It is loaded with laughs and action against a background of attempts to break up a ring of fight-fixers.

Contributing most of the comedy is Shemp Howard, as one of a group of "slug nutty" exboxers, whose pantomiming is one of the attractions of the film. Astrid Allwyn, as the girl sports reporter interested in continuing her father's rehabilitation camp for broken-down fighters; Douglas Fowley, Charles D. Brown, Horace MacMahon, Charles Lane, Wade Boteler, George Lloyd, Eddie Gribbon, Frank Mitchell, Reed Kilpatrick and Ben Alexander complete the cast.

John Rawlins dispatched the directorial assignment with conciseness. Ben Pivar was associate producer, with Larry Rhine, Ben Chapman and Maxwell Shane contributing the screenplay.

I Want a Divorce

(Paramount)

Comedy-Drama

Listeners to the radio-program from which this picture takes its title and after which the story is to some extent patterned may be told by showmen that it is indeed the kind of picture they expect, but that isn't all there is to tell them, and the others. It is to be told them that this picture presents Joan Blondell and Dick Powell as co-stars after an inactivity of some duration, that the picture makes in terms of drama a case against divorce as a solution of married people's problems, and that it accomplishes this with more footage devoted to comedy than to drama, more laughs than tears, and without lecturing.

The story, an original by Adela Rogers St. Johns adapted by Frank Butler, deals with the affairs of six adults, some related and all acquainted, who find matrimony difficult. The film opens with the divorce of one couple, consequences of which are unhappiness and suicide for the wife, remarriage for the husband. Later on a second couple take their troubles to the judge, who gives the husband his freedom when evidence discloses that the wife has perjured herself. The principal couple (played by Miss Blondell and Powell) come also to the parting of the ways but reconcile before divorce action is started. The three strands of the story are woven together in such manner as to make, firstly, a narrative of interest, secondly a presentation of the divorce question with both answers available to onlookers but the anti point of view underscored.

Production is by George Arthur and direction by Ralph Murphy.

Previewed at the Paramount theatre, Los Angeles, where press, profession and public laughed heartily during the first two-thirds of the picture, in which comedy predominates, hushed into silence for the dramatic section preceding the ending and roundly applauded the finale.—W. R. W.

Colorado

(Republic)

Western

An episode in Colorado in the days of the Civil War is enacted by Roy Rogers and supporting cast here, marking another in the series of this popular western star. Brother against brother is the theme, the one being an officer in the military intelligence department of the Union Army, the other an active supporter of the Southern cause masquerading in the uniform of blue.

Regardless of the occasional appearance of a uniform "Colorado" is distinctly a western and not a war picture. General Grant assigns "Lieut. Jerry Burke" (Rogers) to end an Indian uprising in the state where the Columbine grows. Once there the lieutenant, with carte blanche authority, takes over.

George "Gabby" Hayes continues with the series, activating most of the comedy dialogue and situations. The girl in the case is Pauline Moore and the brother, of southern sympathies, "Captain Mason," is played by Milburn Stone. Rogers, also, sings a couple of songs.

"Lieut. Burke" is naturally loath to report on his brother who is playing an important role in the underground movement, which has for its purpose the keeping of a large cavalry detachment fighting the Indians instead of the Confederate Army.

A chase is begun over plains and mountains interrupted by intermittent fighting that ends in the desert as "Burke" finally catches up to his brother, who is killed by another member of the posse while trying to escape.

Argentine Nights

(Universal)

Musical Comedy

If there be truth in the contention that today's audiences want gaiety, song, dance and humor in their pictures, then this film is tailored to taste. Offering the Ritz Brothers in the brand of entertainment they made their fame with, the Andrews Sisters of radio in a kind to match it plus vocalizing popularized via the air-lines, the production is crammed with songs and dances, gags and girls, and executed with speed, point, and no waiting for laughs.

The story opens in New York City with the Ritz trio, as directors of Colossal Ideas, Inc., facing an assemblage of creditors, grouped by state a la political convention, and trying to sell them the idea of backing a girls' band, which performs forthwith, followed by the girls' trio. Failing, the boys glee, with band and trio, to the Argentine, where many things happen, many more gags are told and acted, many songs and dances performed. None of it makes sense or is intended to, but much of it makes laughter.

Showmen exploiting the film have a number of sales-points in addition to those indicated above. Constance Moore, who plays the feminine lead, is the young lady recently publicized as the all-American girl by verdict of some magazine-cover artists. George Reeves, seen opposite her and also singing, played one of the twins in "GWTW." The Andrews Sisters are known in radio as the trio which introduced "Bei Mir Bist Du Schoen," "Well All Right," "Hold Tight" and other hit-paraders.

Ken Goldsmith, producer, Albert S. Rogell, director, and their many writers, appear to have had in mind one objective—to pack into one film a maximum of mirth, music, fun and foolishness. That, according to the advices reaching Hollywood from the field of late, is what the customers have been shopping for.

Crook's Tour

(British National-Anglo American)

Espionage Comedy

Despite the probability that wartime audiences prefer escapist entertainment, the producers of this latest variation on the espionage formula apparently are loyal to the more ancient cliches. Fortunately there is another angle of appeal for home audiences in that the film is adapted from a radio serial, and features in the lead roels the impeccable Basil Radford-Naunton Wayne duo as the now traditional Charters and Caldicott. Abroad, however, the film, which sedulously avoids brilliance, has to stand the difficult test beside a small army of other spy subjects. The native leg-pulling at the expense of the true blue cricketing Britisher, however, suggests an exploitation angle.

Background of the adventure is pre-war Europe and the Near East and the adventures themselves involve the travelling Britishers in a German plot to blow up the Iran pipe line. There is blonde and beauteous cabaret singer—naturally a secret agent in disguise—a gramaphone record with some sabotage plans on it—and a Disneyesque Schloss wherein the victims are imprisoned and made to face a firing squad. Of course, it is not really meant to be taken seriously and even the "execution" is with blank cartridges and a waiting car. The Arabian Desert—with a public school sheik—Bagdad, Istanbul and Buda-Pesth are the backcloths.

Radford and Wayne are of course delicious in their nonchalant dignity and there are one or two gay encounters, but the situations and dialogue seldom do justice to the players. Greta Gynt supplies pulchritude and Cyril Gardner, as the German agent, sinister action.

A trade show audience, more than liberally sprinkled with women, laughed quite consistently if seldom inelegantly.—Aubrey Flanagan.

Schubert's Serenade

(Arthur Ziehm, Inc.)

Love Life of a Musician

Obviously the chief merit of this production stems from the musical reputation of Schubert and his works which are scattered through the film and which include excerpts from "Ave Maria," "Waltz of Yearning," "Impatience," "Winter Journey," "Moment Musical," 'The Rosamonde Ballet" and 'The Unfinished Symphony." However, audiences more concert than cinema conscious, may resent the haphazard and sliced presentation of the master's melodic gems.

The three principal parts are acted by Lilian Harvey as the romantic inspiration, Louis Jouvet in the role of a chief admirer of Miss Harvey and Bernard Lancret in the title role.

The romantic rondelay, part fact and part fiction, locates Schubert in his mid twenties. Due to his love affair with "Margaret Brenton," an English dancer who has earned for herself a notorious reputation due to some publicity seeking stunts, the composer becomes fertile with smash musical compositions. However, the amorous arrangement comes to an unhappy ending when the lovers are forced to

The Range Busters

(Monogram)

Western Melodrama

George W. Weeks' first undertaking in the field of production is a western outnumbering any since the Hart-Mix era in shots fired, in miles covered on horseback, fist fights and desperadoes put to flight. It also surpasses most westerns of 1940 in strength of plot, plausibility of story and logic of conclusion. Offered as the first of a series, it gives promise of adding to the stock in trade of showmen featuring westerns a sequence of films qualified to give account of themselves in any company.

Interest centers about Crash Corrigan, John King and Max Terhune, whose character names correspond to their own, enacting a trio of cowboys arriving to find out the identity of a supposed ghost accountable for a series of murders on a ranch by a girl. After complications and adventures differing from routine, they solve the mystery and ride away to other adventures. Screen play by John Rathnell and direction by Roy Luby give the production fascination and action of the kinds required by followers of westerns.

Screen Snapshots, No. 10

(Columbia)

Screen Sightseeing

Under the jovial but none too energetic sponsorship of Jack Oakie, who is supposed to conduct this newest screen sightseeing excursion but who never leaves the comfortable confines of his own backyard, the spectator drops in for a look at Basil Rathbone at a fencing lesson, visits a charitable benefit to peek at some screen personalities entering into the carnival spirit of the occasion and listens and sees James Newill sing an aria from "Rigoletto" on one of his radio broadcasts. Mr. Newill's vocal performance is the highlight of the screen trip which the good humored joshing of Mr. Oakie makes newsy and intimate.—Running time, 9½ minutes.

The Timid Pup

(Columbia)

Color Cartoon

This color cartoon is all about the carefree rompings of a pup and a neighboring kitten. While the respective animal parents of the pair manifest their adult animosity for each other, the offsprings pursue their innocent way. The youthful play of the tiny canine and his kitty pal brings them to a vegetable store and the encounter reduces the establishment into a state of havoc. The parents take the rap from the angry proprietor but they transfer the punishment to the pup and the kitten through the means of well placed and well intentioned spankings. Children should find the frisky antics of the pup and the kitten cute and amusing.—Running time, 7½ minutes.

Wimmin Hadn't Oughta Drive

(Fleischer-Paramount)

Popeye Cartoon

Here Popeye attempts to teach Olive Oyl how to drive with resultant comic complications. Olive is the sort that watches everything but the road so Popeye is kept busy preventing smash-ups. Finally Popeye is bounced out of the car and Olive heads up a winding road that ends at a precipice. The can of spinach comes to hand, Popeye downs it at a gulp and dashes madly to the rescue. Running time, 7 minutes.

Malibu Beach Party

(Vitaphone)

Merry Melody

Produced by Leon Schlesinger this cartoon in color is a satire on a typical Hollywood beach party. Jack Benny invites actors and actresses to his beach house giving the subject ample opportunity to exaggerate the individualities of a few of the stars. Besides Benny such film and radio personalities as Mary Livingstone, Jimmy Cagney, George Raft, Phil Harris, Eddie "Rochester" Anderson and many more, are represented. The subject ends with Jack giving one of his famous violin solos and everyone sneaking away from the party. An amusing Merry Melody cartoon.—Running time, 7 minutes.

Service With the Colors

(Vitaphone)

Patriotic Subject

This is the first of the new series of patriotic subjects to be produced by the company concerning military preparedness and depicting the operations of the governments armed forces. Army life is shown here from the first steps of a recruit being taught the fundamentals of military training to the polished soldier drilled in precision. Filmed at the Presidio in San Francisco with the cooperation of the United States Army, the cast includes Robert Armstrong, William Lundigan, Henry O'Neill and William Orr. The subject, photographed in color, is an interesting revelation of army training and routine.—Running time, 20 minutes.

The Capital City, Washington, D. C.

(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

FitzPatrick Traveltalk

From the top of the Washington Monument is seen a panorama of Washington including the Potomac river, the boundary line between the Capital and the State of Virginia in this study of the architectural design of the city created by Pierre L'Enfant, French architect and military engineer who served under George Washington. Such buildings as the White House, the executive mansion of the President, the National Archives Building where the government's important documents are kept. Union Station, the United States Supreme Court, the Smithsonian Institute, the various embassies housing delegates from more than fifty countries, the Ford theatre where Lincoln was assassinated, and, of course, the national Capitol are depicted in detail.—Running time, 9 minutes.

Romeo in Rhythm

Color Cartoon

Hugh Harman has taken the story of unrequited love by William Shakespeare and through the medium of the Black Crow Opera Company presents Romeo and Juliet. In this the crows present a swing version of the Shakespearean play but with numerous interruptions from the milkman, an expedition in search of Dr. Livingston and others. In an effort to find seclusion for their romantic escapades the two crows try the subway, Coney Island, a fish bowl and other spots but without success. An amusing cartoon.—Running time, eight minutes.

Good Bad Boys

Our Gang Comedy

When Alfalfa is wrongly accused of stealing fruit from a nearby market he organizes Our Gang as another Jesse James mob. Spanky, a bit dubious about the profitable and social aspects of the business has them rob a house for which he has been paid to remove some junk. Returning to the hideout with the loot the boys run afoul of a bank robber and the police, and they, with the robber, give themselves up. In Juvenile Court Spanky explains the situation and they are freed with a slight reprimand.—Running time, 11 minutes.

Fireman, Save My Choo-Choo

(Columbia)

Andy Clyde Comedy

Andy Clyde inherits a railroad old enough to be about the first line laid in this country. After locating the one and only train, which has been missing for two weeks, Andy is ordered by the railroad commissioner to race his iron horse against a bus line to determine which should be awarded the franchise. The match is run off humorously and excitingly. The bus and its owner run afoul of a bee hive, while Andy crosses the line the winner. However, the fadeout announcement indicates that the franchise has been turned over to an airline. The railroad-bus marathon is the highlight of the comic moments, particularly the sequences wherein Andy unknowingly uses rockets for boiler fuel.—Running time, 18 minutes.

189 FILMS ON WAR, PATRIOTISM AND PREPAREDNESS IN YEAR OF CONFLICT

129 Features and 60 Shorts Influenced by Conflict Were Released from Hollywood, London and Paris

by GEORGE SPIRES

This first year of World War II, brought to the screens of American theatres, under direct or indirect influence, 129 features and 60 shorts dealing with war and the troubles of Europe, national defense and preparedness, patriotism and Americanism, dictators and democracies, the armies and the navies and marines, Nazis, Fascists and Communists, spies and refugees and sundry related subjects, besides the topical subjects of the day as depicted in the newsreels.

Most are straightaway enertainment, some are propaganda, some based on fact, some on fiction. Some have been imported—27 features from England, eight from France —the majority are from the studios of Hollywood.

Refraining, at the beginning, from making direct attacks on Nazi Germany because of suggestions by the State Department, desiring strict neutrality, and because of a desire to protect their then comparatively whole European market, the producers of Hollywood and distributors of New York are now pointing in the direction of bars up on anti-Nazi themes.

"Storm" Opens Way

With the release of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "The Mortal Storm," the way was opened for more direct attacks on the Nazi form of government. Following this blast at Hitler, Twentieth Century-Fox released "Four Sons," a remake of a war picture of 1928, changed in time and locale to Czechoslovakia as of 1939. Others along these lines were Twentieth Century-Fox's "The Man I Married," based on the Liberty magazine story "I Married a Nazi," Warner Brother's "Secret Army" and the reissue of "Confessions of a Nazi Spy," made more timely by additional sequences inserted midway in the picture showing the Nazi occupation of Austria, Czechoslavakia and, towards the end, headlines and clips depicting the invasion of Finland, Denmark, Norway, Holland and Belgium.

Other companies also have pictures revealing Nazi terrors. Paramount recently released "Mystery Sea Raider" and Columbia's "Mad Men of Europe" was released in June. The latest of the anti-Nazi pictures to be released in this country is "Pastor Hall," an English made production to which James Roosevelt has acquired the American rights and which he is distributing through United Artists. "Pastor Hall" was produced recently in England and is based on an unproduced play by the late German dramatist Ernst Toller which depicts life in a German village before the coming of Nazi stormtroopers and after. Persecutions and life in a concentration camp are shown with violent realism.

Among the new season's product will be Charlie Chaplin's long awaited "The Great Dictator." Chaplin began the actual writing on the story early in 1939 and the production of the picture was started soon after—shooting a reported 500,000 feet of film that will be cut to run about two and one half hours in theatres. In it the comedian plays a dual role of a dictator, ruling under the sign of the double cross, and of a meek and inoffensive barber who is mistaken for the ruler.

Turning from the exposé phase of production, military preparedness is receiving due attention from producers. Warner Brothers is producing a series of shorts in color on this subject. Finished are "Young America Flies," dealing with civilian aviation training; "March On Marines," photographed at the San Diego Marine Base, and "Service With the Colors," a glorification of the infantry filmed at the Presidio at San Francisco. Next on their schedule is "The Tanks Are Coming" which will be made at Fort Knox, Ky., to be followed by "Anchors Aweigh" in which the Navy will cooperate, as have other branches of the government service.

Besides these Warner Brothers has scheduled "You're In the Army Now," a full-length picture dealing with civilian training for Fall production to take advantage of the nation-wide publicity and controversy aroused by the Burke-Wadsworth Conscription Bill now before Congress. Also in preparation at Warner's is "50,000 Fliers," to be based on the President's statement that the national defense looks toward a complement of 50,000 planes.

Preparedness Themes

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is currently filming "Flight Command," starring Robert Taylor, Ruth Hussey and Walter Pidgeon, the story concerning naval air training. "Combat Car," also on the company's schedule, deals with the mechanization of the army. Paramount, in keeping in the cycle of military preparedness has scheduled for its 1940-41 season "I Wanted Wings" which will be shot at Randolph Field and which will depict the training of young aviators for the Army. "They Fly Through the Air," adapted from a radio script dealing with the horrors of military bombing has been abandoned, at least temporarily, by Warner Brothers.

Among the hundreds of documentary, commercial and sponsored films being shown at the New York World's Fair are scores of political, war historical and patriotic short subjects and features.

Some of these are, "Better Aircraft in the World of Tomorrow" and "Navy Wings of Gold," being shown at the Aviation Building, and "The Good Neighbor Fleet," illustrating the good neighbor policy between the United States and South American countries, sponsored by the Maritime Commission in the Communications Building.

In the United States Government Building "Land of Liberty" a 35 mm sound production running nearly two hours is being shown. The picture was made from material taken from 125 different motion picture productions and short subjects with additional scenes from newsreels and various other sources of film material. Cecil B. DeMille edited the film and it will be distributed free to educational institutions throughout the United States at the close of the Fair.

March of Time chose for its initial subject of the 1939-40 season "Soldiers With Wings," concerning the preparation and training of aviators for the Army and produced with the cooperation of the United States Army Corp. In previous months, March of Time released "War," "Peace" and "Propaganda" revealing the effects of propaganda on the various peoples of this and other countries. Other subjects released in the past months are "Battle Fleets of England," Newsfront of War," "Crisis in the Pacific," "The Republic of Finland," "Canada at War," "America's Youth—1940," "The Philippines," "U. S. Navy—1940," filmed in cooperation with the United States Naval Department, "Spoils of Conquest," a subject on the Dutch East Indies, and the latest of the series, "Gateway to Panama," showing the potential threat to the Panama Canal should Hitler gain control of the Dutch, French and British possessions in the Caribbean.

"Ramparts" Released

The highlight of March Of Time's releases for the past season was their first full-length feature production "The Ramparts We Watch," already released in many of the key cities.

Schedules for the new season indicate that the present trend toward themes of patriotism, the current situation in this and foreign countries and military preparedness will hold key spots on the production charts.

A list of feature pictures which fall into the category of war and related subjects follows:

PRODUCT SHOWS HISTORY REPEATED

A comparison of product schedules of the present war period with those of World War I shows a striking similarity of themes. For instance, in 1914-18 there were "The Heart of Maryland," a Civil War melodrama; "Her Boy," a melodrama of conscription and the draft; "The Kaiser—Beast of Berlin" and "The Hun Within," a story of German espionage in the United States.

Similar pictures now are "Gone With the Wind," a melodrama of the Civil War; "You're in the Army Now," concerning compulsory military training; "Hitler—Beast of Berlin," and "Confessions of a Nazi Spy," revealing spy activities in this country and re-issued by Warners during the past season.

BUSINESS AS USUAL DURING AIR RAIDS

Despite constant bombings day and night British cinemas remain open for their normal programs. Intermittent warnings, however, necessarily are affecting trade and grosses are far below the lowest summer conditions. In London's West End attendance virtually ceases at dusk although the houses remain open. Suburban provincial conditions are variable. In some areas matinee attendances compensate for depleted evening business but the majority of theatres show a slump.

Although several theatres have been hit by bombs there have been no casualties. Where the raid warnings sound during a show only a few people leave the audience, the majority overstaying the curtain to join in games, charades, community sings and tea parties organized by the managements.

The Old Subscribers' Roll Call

In connection with the preparation of the forthcoming special issue of MOTION PICTURE HERALD commemorating the twenty-fifth anniversary of Martin Quigley's service in the journalism of the screen, a recording of the older subscribers to the publications of the House of QP is being compiled.

MOTION PICTURE HERALD is prideful of the fact that its subscription rolls of today include the names of men who have been identified with the motion picture from the earliest days of organized exhibition—some of whose names were first inscribed on the rolls of Moving Picture World, beginning in 1907 and acquired by The Herald in 1928, and Motion Picture News, absorbed by The Herald in 1930—all today fused into the institution of MOTION PICTURE HERALD.

It is desired to hear from those older subscribers from such a period as fifteen years ago, on back to the beginning. To make response convenient, a reply coupon is offered:

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

BLONDIE HAS SERVANT TROUBLE: Penny Singleton, Arthur Lake, Larry Simms—Had a very good draw the first night but fell off considerable the second. Feature is very good, possibly the best of the series and will please all who enjoyed the others. Plenty of laughs and that's what they seem to want nowadays. Running time, 66 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

BULLETS FOR RUSTLERS: Charels Starrett, Lorna Gray—A good western to very ordinary business as the local firemen held their annual field days on that date. Played August 17.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

DURANGO KID: Charles Starrett, Luana Walters, Sons of the Pioneers—We were very happy to see that Columbia has changed the cast a bit in this series of westerns for the new season. We advocate some change in cast for every picture as we believe that it keeps our patrons interested in the series when there is something different in each outside of the story. This is tops in action shows and was well taken here to good business. Running time, 60 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

LONE WOLF STRIKES, THE: Warren William, Joan Perry—The "Wolf" certainly struck alright. We didn't make film rental.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

TOO MANY HUSBANDS: Jean Arthur, Fred MacMurray, Melvyn Douglas—Pictures on this theme, if well done, usually please and this was very well done. A teaser ad along the line such as a pretty girl with two husbands, is one husband too many and both husbands were such swell fellows, seemed to bring some extra patrons. This was doubled with "Haunted Gold," a John Wayne Warner reissue.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

TWO FISTED RANGERS: Charles Starrett, Lorna Gray, Sons of the Pioneers—Reasonably good western to a little less than normal business. Played July 27. —C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

First National

FLIGHT ANGELS: Virginia Bruce, Dennis Morgan, Wayne Morris, Ralph Bellamy, Jane Wyman—A very good picture that pleased everyone. Business was off due to rain. Dennis Morgan and Jane Wyman help Virginia Bruce make it a swell picture. Running time, 74 minutes. Played August 13-14.—E. S. Tompkins, Winfield Theatre, Winfield, Iowa. Rural and small town patronage.

MAN WHO TALKED TOO MUCH, THE: George Brent, Virginia Bruce, Richard Barthelmess, Brenda Marshall—Good melodrama about criminal lawyers which pleased good business on week-end. Running time, 75 minutes. Played August 23-24.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

RETURN OF DR. X, THE: Wayne Morris, Humphrey Bogart, Rosemary Lane—This was doubled with "Buck Benny Rides Again." It is a good chill and thrill drama. Quite a few who came late asked if they could still see "Dr. X." It's well done, not too scary. I advertised it as the kind of a picture to give one a double dose of goose pimples. I give this part of the credit for the extra business done with this double bill.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ANDY HARDY MEETS DEBUTANTE: Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland, Lewis Stone, Cecilia Parker, Fay Holden, Ann Rutherford—Pulled far above average and pleased generally, although there were many comments that this was too much like another in the "Hardy" family series. Metro needs to watch this series carefully in the future or it will lose patron appeal. Running time, 87 minutes. Played August 11-13.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

ANOTHER THIN MAN: William Powell, Myrna Loy, "Asta," Ruth Hussey, Virginia Grey—Very funny detective story where the plot didn't count. First Powell-Loy picture to go over here. Even the Hardy pictures have cost us money this season. Running time, 102 minutes. Played August 22-24.—S. E. Ramsey, Community Theatre, Carlyle, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural, small town and summer resort patronage.

> IN this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box-office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—

> What the Picture Did for Me
> MOTION PICTURE HERALD
> Rockefeller Center, New York

CONGO MAISIE: Ann Sothern, John Carroll, Rita Johnson—We passed this up due to bad reports but decided to play it in place of "40 Little Mothers" because Eddie Cantor never had any box office value at our theatre. Our conclusion: we're glad we did. It did an average business and left our audience in smiles and praising Ann Sothern. It isn't as good as "Maisie" was but, if this series is once established, we'll expect Metro to watch their production carefully. Running time, 70 minutes. Played August 15-17.—John Grabenstein, Liberty Theatre, Eustis, Neb. Rural and small town patronage.

DR. KILDARE'S STRANGE CASE: Lew Ayres, Lionel Barrymore, Laraine Day—There will always be the question with a series of pictures, of whether the newly released feature is as good or better than the preceding ones. Nevertheless, this film pleased our audience and they look forward for another. But the pattern of the story and setting has been identical in every film so far. That fact needs some consideration and adjustment or it too will grow stale and lose box office value. Running time, 77 minutes. Played August 8-10.—John Grabenstein, Liberty Theatre, Eustis, Neb. Rural and small town patronage.

FORTY LITTLE MOTHERS: Eddie Cantor, Bonita Granville, Rita Johnson, Judith Anderson—Remarkably pleased audience reaction to this picture. They were particularly pleased that Cantor didn't sing. Running time, 90 minutes. Played August 8-10.—S. E. Ramsey, Community Theatre, Carlyle, Saskatchewan, Canada. Small town, rural and summer resort patronage.

I TAKE THIS WOMAN: Spencer Tracy, Hedy Lamarr—Tracy does his usual fine job but story did not appeal to our audience. Running time, 97 minutes. Played July 25-27.—S. E. Ramsey, Community Theatre, Carlyle, Saskatchewan, Canada. Small town, rural and summer resort patronage.

JOE AND ETHEL TURP CALL ON THE PRESIDENT: Ann Sothern, William Gargan, Lewis Stone, Walter Brennan—I would class this as an unusually fine picture. It is a change from the usual run of pictures. If you can get them in, it will more than please. The nice summer weather kept some away as we hardly did average business on this.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

MAN FROM DAKOTA: Wallace Beery, Dolores Del Rio, John Howard—Not the best of the Beery pictures in comparison with some of his past ones. But, all in all, our audienced seemed pleased. Box office receipts were below that on other Beery films but we've had a box office slump all summer. Running time, 74 minutes. Played August 1-3.—John Grabenstein, Liberty Theatre, Eustis, Neb. Rural and small town patronage.

NEW MOON: Jeanette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy, Mary Boland—What a drubbing we took on this one, with patrons walking out, and those who stuck it out complaining plenty. Personally thought it the poorest this team has made, with MacDonald and Eddy turning in very weak performances. No business; no wonder. Running time, 104 minutes. Played August 4-6.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

OUT WEST WITH THE HARDYS: Mickey Rooney, Lewis Stone, Cecilia Parker, Fay Holden, Virginia Weidler—Very satisfactory. Played 15-21.—R. R. Kiefer, Kiefer's Theatre, Hardisty, Alberta, Canada. Village and rural patronage.

PRIDE AND PREJUDICE: Laurence Olivier, Greer Garson, Mary Boland, Edna May Oliver, Maureen O'Sullivan, Ann Rutherford—A substitute for a Hardy picture that was pulled after we had spent considerable time and money to advertise it. This did very well but we wonder if it was this that drew. Very few who came expecting to see the advertised feature failed to see this and none were disappointed they did. Was well liked by all, although it was too long and Boland got tiresome. Running time, 118 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

SPORTING BLOOD: Robert Young, Maureen O'Sullivan, Lewis Stone—Good picture which failed to draw. Guess I played it too soon after "Maryland," as both are race horse pictures. Running time, 82 minutes. Played August 21-22.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

SWEETHEARTS: Jeanette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy—Very satisfactory. Played August 10-16.—R. R. Kiefer, Kiefer's Theatre, Hardisty, Alberta, Canada. Village and rural patronage.

TWENTY MULE TEAM: Wallace Beery, Leo Carrillo, Marjorie Rambeau—According to audience reaction and comment, this was better received than "Man from Dakota." This had more comedy situations. Marjorie Rambeau and Beery made a good pair. Leo Carrillo was very good as the Indian. Our audience liked it, so what can we say? Running time, 83 minutes. Played August 22-24.—John Grabenstein, Liberty Theatre, Eustis, Neb. Rural and small town patronage.

Monogram

MIDNIGHT LIMITED: Marjorie Reynolds, John King—A good detective mystery drama with most of the action taking place on a speeding railroad train, which is a welcome change from the usual mystery drama. This was doubled with "Gaucho Serenade" and it held up its end of the show.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

Paramount

BUCK BENNY RIDES AGAIN: Jack Benny, Eddie "Rochester" Anderson, Andy Devine, Ellen Drew—If the film companies will make more pictures like this, they will find exhibitors fighting to buy their product. It pleased 100 per cent and more than doubled average business. Running time, 85 minutes. Played July 19-20.—E. S. Tompkins, Winfield Theatre. Winfield, Iowa. Rural and small town patronage.

BUCK BENNY RIDES AGAIN: Jack Benny, Eddie "Rochester" Anderson, Andy Devine, Ellen Drew—This picture pleased and brought in extra patrons. Real cool weather helped. Jack Benny wisely permitted "Rochester" plenty of footage, which helps greatly. This is an excellent piece of entertainment, the kind that makes one forget the scare headlines for the time being.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

FARMER'S DAUGHTER, THE: Martha Raye, Charlie Ruggles—A very nice little comedy suitable for a double feature or bargain show. Martha Raye's name isn't big enough to put it over in this location. Running time, 61 minutes. Played July 23-24.—E. S. Tompkins, Winfield Theatre, Winfield, Iowa. Rural and small town patronage.

GULLIVER'S TRAVELS: Color Cartoon Feature—Drawing and color good. As good as Disney's but no business. Played July 22.—R. R. Kiefer, Kiefer's Theatre, Hardisty, Alberta, Canada. Village and rural patronage.

REMEMBER THE NIGHT: Barbara Stanwyck, Fred MacMurray, Beulah Bondi, Elizabeth Patterson —Very satisfactory. Played August 3-9—R. R. Kiefer, Kiefer's Theatre, Hardisty, Alberta, Canada. Village and rural patronage.

ROAD TO SINGAPORE: Bing Crosby, Bob Hope, Dorothy Lamour—Very good. This is the type of pictures people want to see these days. Bob Hope is definitely on top now. Even Dorothy Lamour was liked in this and this town doesn't care for her as a rule. Running time, 77 minutes. Played August 6-7.—E. S. Tompkins, Winfield Theatre, Winfield, Iowa. Rural and small town patronage.

Republic

DAYS OF JESSE JAMES: Roy Rogers, George "Gabby" Hayes, Donald Barry—Well received by most of our patrons. This is just about the best of the Rogers' offerings, even though it is somewhat farfetched. Business very good. Running time, 63 minutes. Played August 16-17.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

GAUCHO SERENADE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, June Storey—In commenting on a Gene Autry picture, all that need be said is that it's a standard Autry picture and will please his followers and do some extra business. Smiley Burnette does his stuff in a free and easy manner, and it seems as if Smiley enjoyed every minute of his work in the picture, which really is the height of art. More power to you, Smiley. Keep on being a part of the life of the party with Gene and the pictures will continue in popularity.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

GAUCHO SERENADE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, June Storey—Now here is a picture just up our alley. Good old Gene and Smiley, what a box office stimulant. These pictures put life back in our situation.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

GRANDPA GOES TO TOWN: James, Lucile and Russell Gleason—Shades of the slapstick days and our patrons ate it up, although some did say it was too silly. You can't please everyone but it appears the majority considered it good entertainment. The lower half of a double bill unless this series is a business getter in your situation. Running time, 66 minutes. Played August 9-10.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

IN OLD MISSOURI: Weaver Brothers and Elviry—No business puller, this one, but it got a few laughs from those who did turn out. Seems to me Republic is not taking full advantage of the talents of the Weaver Brothers and Elviry. This went along for a while at a nice pace, then suddenly blew up. Double feature fare again. Running time, 67 minutes. Played August 14-15.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

MOUNTAIN RHYTHM: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—Smiley Burnette in person on stage. Complete sellout. Saturday he gave five shows. People standing in line waiting to get in at every performance. Running time, 59 minutes.—J. F. Falls, Academy Theatre, Lynchburg, Va. General patronage.

SOUTH OF THE BORDER: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—Very satisfactory to the customer and the exhibitor. Played May 6.—R. R. Kiefer, Kiefer's Theatre. Hardisty, Alberta, Canada. Village and rural patronage.

RKO Radio

ABE LINCOLN IN ILLINOIS: Raymond Massey, Ruth Gordon, Mary Howard—We personally guaranteed this attraction, sending out personal recommendations. As a result business was a little above normal and thoroughly satisfied. Played August 7-8.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

FIFTH AVENUE GIRL: Ginger Rogers, Walter Connolly, James Ellison, Tim Holt—Satisfactory picture but no business. Played July 24.—R. R. Kiefer, Kiefer's Theatre, Hardisty, Alberta, Canada. Village and rural patronage.

MEET DR. CHRISTIAN: Jean Hersholt, Dorothy Lovett—This was the first of the "Dr. Christian" series to reach our screen. It afforded a pleasant evening's entertainment. Played August 10.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

MY FAVORITE WIFE: Irene Dunne, Cary Grant, Randolph Scott, Gail Patrick—For some reason or other this failed to draw the patrons but those who did see it were well pleased. Easily one of the best comedy offerings of the season that should please in any situation. Running time, 88 minutes. Played July 28-30.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

ARIZONA WILDCAT: Jane Withers, Leo Carrillo—One of Withers' best. Played April 22.—R. R. Kiefer, Kiefer's Theatre, Hardisty, Alberta, Canada. Village and rural patronage.

BLUE BIRD, THE: Shirley Temple, Spring Byington—I would like to know why Fox ever took the time and trouble to make a picture like this. For the cost they could have made three or four good pictures and I know they would find the exhibitor in a better mood after playing them. Business off over 50 per cent. Running time, 83 minutes. Played July 26-27.—E. S. Tompkins, Winfield Theatre, Winfield, Iowa. Rural and small town patronage.

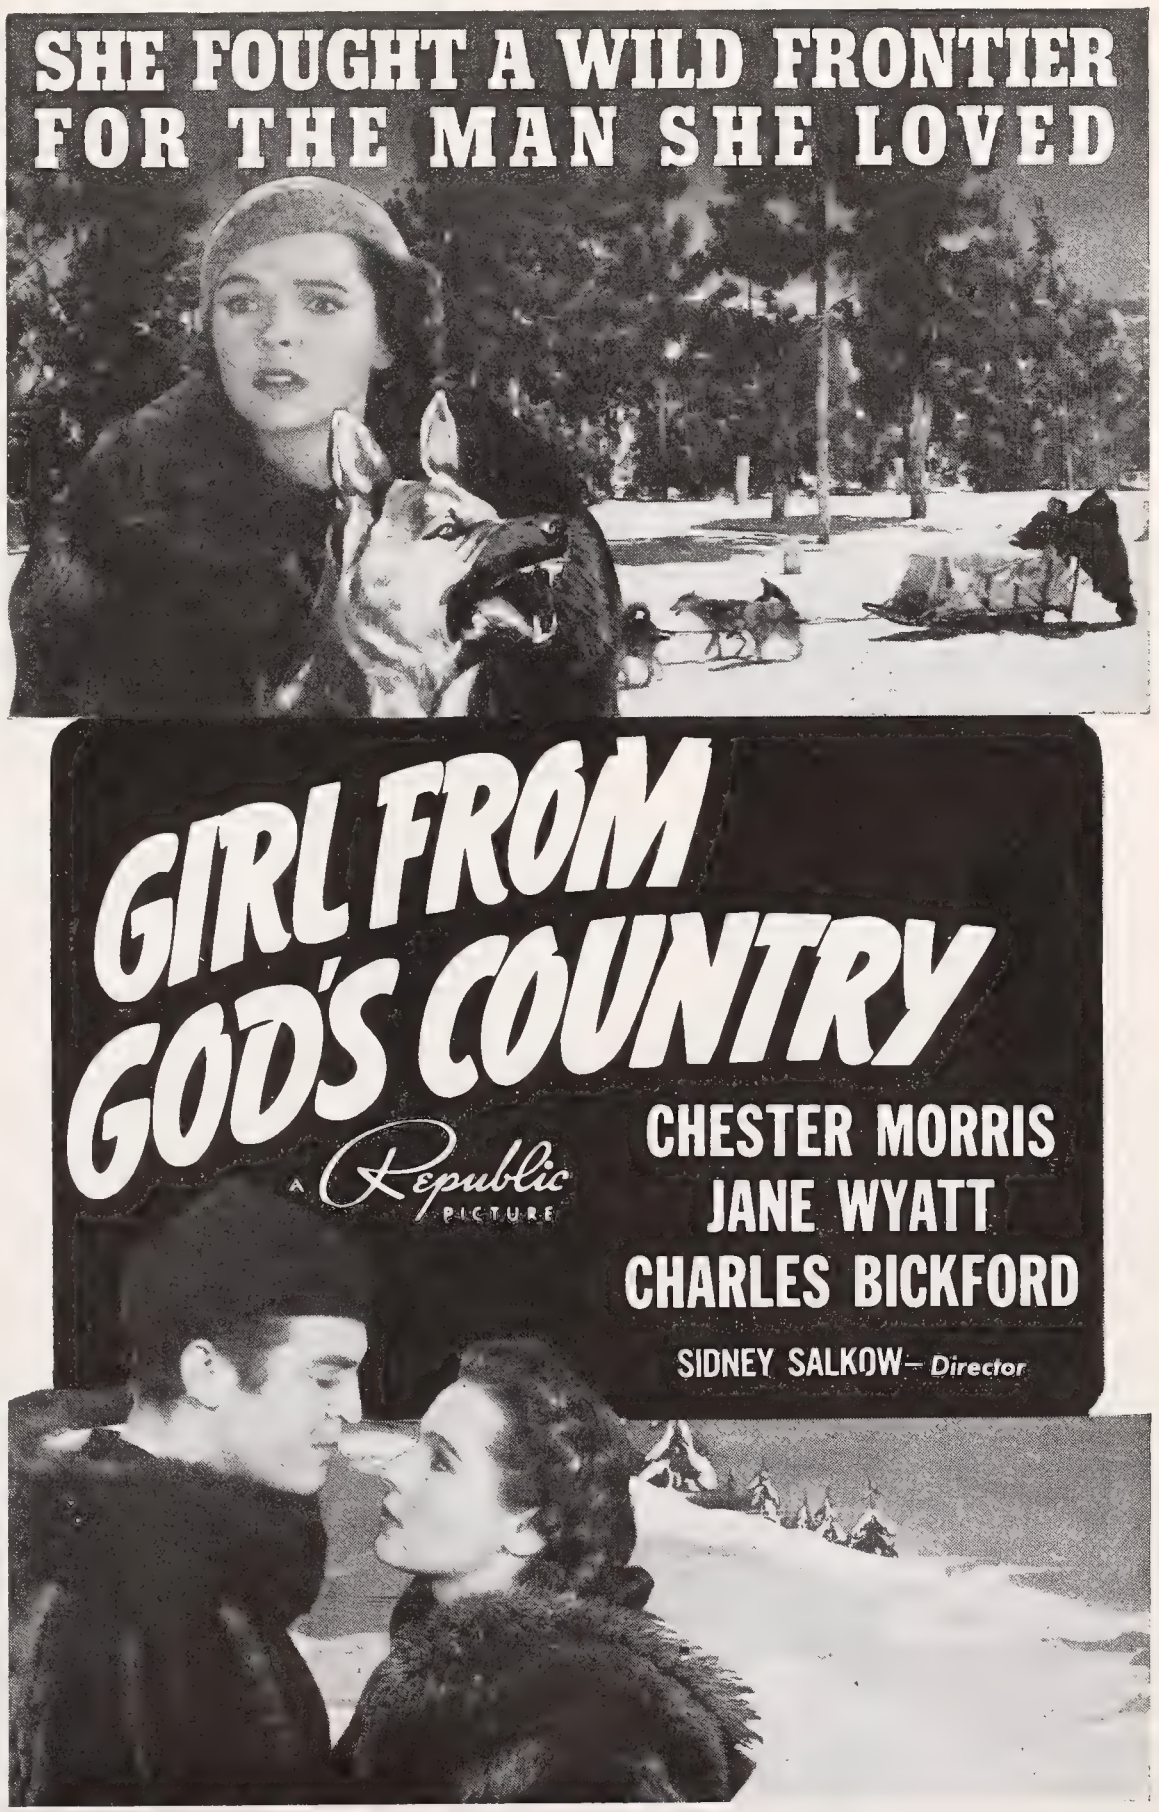
BLUE BIRD, THE: Shirley Temple, Spring Byington—Unfortunately, a heat wave arrived in time to materially cut down the attendance but those who saw the picture were pleased with few exceptions. Played July 24-25.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y.

DRUMS ALONG THE MOHAWK: Henry Fonda, Claudette Colbert, Edna May Oliver—A little extra business but more of a man's picture. Played June 17.—R. R. Kiefer, Kiefer's Theatre, Hardisty, Alberta, Canada. Village and rural patronage.

FOUR SONS: Don Ameche, Mary Beth Hughes, Eugenie Leontovich—It is almost equally as good as "The Mortal Storm," and as in that case the ladies with the unpronounceable names stole the picture. But, and a large but, neither "The Mortal Storm" or "Four Sons" did business for all the quality of both pictures and I think that this would get it to the producers that the public is getting all the war they want in the newsreels. If more are produced along the same lines and a cycle starts, they will get no playing time in this house. I took it on the chin with both and one had preferred playing time. We need good comedies and not this heavy stuff at this time.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

GIRL IN 313: Kent Taylor, Florence Rice—Just another picture that did its duty holding up the other half of a double bill. Not much chance to single bill when features show such little strength as this one. Running time, 58 minutes. Played August 16-17.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

GRAPES OF WRATH, THE: Henry Fonda, Jane Darwell, Dorris Bowdon, John Carradine, Charlie Grapewin—Although we played this late, business good. While it is not a pleasant picture, our audience felt they were repaid for attending in spite of the warm weather. Played August 14-15.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.



HIGH SCHOOL: Jane Withers, Joe Brown, Jr.—We did very well for "High School" as our folks like Jane Withers. Played August 3.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

JOHNNY APOLLO: Tyrone Power, Dorothy Lamour, Edward Arnold, Lloyd Nolan—A late playdate on this one but even so business above average and patrons considered it real entertainment, though a little too long. Unusual role for Lamour but she handled it very well indeed. Rest of cast more than adequate and story held interest all the way through. Running time, 93 minutes. Played August 9-10.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

LILLIAN RUSSELL: Alice Faye, Don Ameche, Edward Arnold, Henry Fonda, Warren William, Leo Carrillo, Weber and Fields—Another grand flop at the box office for this situation at least. It's a good enough picture but certainly not big enough to merit the film rental charged. Patrons on the whole liked the show but there were no raves, either for or against. Running time, 127 minutes. Played August 18-20.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

LITTLE OLD NEW YORK: Alice Faye, Fred MacMurray, Richard Greene, Brenda Joyce—We were fortunate to have cool weather for this feature and we did a little better business than we have had for our mid-week shows. Played July 31-August 1.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

LUCKY CISCO KID: Cesar Romero, Chris Pin Martin, Evelyn Venable—More comedy than other releases in this series. Just another picture as far as business was concerned. Coupled with "Sailor's Lady," this made just a fair program that pulled fair business. Running time, 65 minutes. Played August 2-3.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

RAINS CAME, THE: Tyrone Power, Myrna Loy, George Brent, Brenda Joyce — Quite satisfactory. Played July 29.—R. R. Kiefer, Kiefer's Theatre, Hardisty, Alberta, Canada. Village and rural patronage.

SAILOR'S LADY: Jon Hall, Nancy Kelly—Played with "Lucky Cisco Kid." This made just a fair program that pulled fair business. Played August 2-3.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

SHOOTING HIGH: Gene Autry, Jane Withers—This picture was a very entertaining western. Gene Autry wasn't given a chance but you can expect Fox to push their own stars first. Played it on cash night and was surprised at the increased business. Running time, 65 minutes. Played July 30-31.—E. S. Tompkins, Winfield Theatre, Winfield, Iowa. Rural and small town patronage.

STANLEY AND LIVINGSTONE: Spencer Tracy, Nancy Kelly, Richard Greene, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Walter Brennan, Henry Hull—Fine show. Of interest to the older people. A little extra business. Played May 27.—R. R. Kiefer, Kiefer's Theatre, Hardisty, Alberta, Canada. Village and rural patronage.

STAR DUST: Linda Darnell, John Payne, Roland Young, Charlotte Greenwood—A good story, well done, but Linda Darnell isn't sold to the public as yet. With a big name or two in the cast this could easily have been a big picture instead of just a programmer. Running time, 85 minutes. Played August 16-17.—E. S. Tompkins, Winfield Theatre, Winfield, Iowa. Rural and small town patronage.

STAR DUST: John Payne, Linda Darnell, Roland Young, Charlotte Greenwood — Good picture which pleased average business on family night. Running time, 85 minutes. Played August 20.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

SWANEE RIVER: Don Ameche, Andrea Leeds, Al Jolson—Very satisfactory both ways. Played May 13.—R. R. Kiefer, Kiefer's Theatre, Hardisty, Alberta, Canada. Village and rural patronage.

VIVA CISCO KID: Cesar Romero, Jean Rogers—I wish they would put this series with the "Mr. Motos." Each one I played does less business and the first one didn't pay the film rental. If you must play it, keep as quiet as possible about it. Some one might come in not knowing what's on. Running time, 70 minutes. Played August 2-3.—E. S. Tompkins, Winfield Theatre, Winfield, Iowa. Rural and small town patronage.

United Artists

CAPTAIN FURY: Brian Aherne, Victor McLaglen, June Lang—A man's show. No draw. Played April 15.—R. R. Kiefer, Kiefer's Theatre, Hardisty, Alberta, Canada. Village and rural patronage.

DUKE OF WEST POINT: Louis Hayward, Joan Fontaine, Richard Carlson—Satisfactory picture but no draw. Played July 8.—R. R. Kiefer, Kiefer's Theatre, Hardisty, Alberta, Canada. Village and rural patronage.

FOUR FEATHERS: John Clements, June Duprez, Ralph Richardson, C. Aubrey Smith—Strong feature. Color good. Appeals more to men. A little extra business. Palyed June 10.—R. R. Kiefer, Kiefer's Theatre, Hardisty, Alberta, Canada. Village and rural patronage.

HOUSE ACROSS THE BAY: Joan Bennett, George Raft, Lloyd Nolan, Gladys George, Walter Pidgeon—Here is as good a picture as the company has given us all season. A typical Raft picture, ending and all but still one that the patrons liked. Very good. Running time, 83 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

HOUSEKEEPER'S DAUGHTER: Joan Bennett, Adolphe Menjou—Box office flop but audience reaction good. Running time, 80 minutes. Played August 1-3.—S. E. Ramsey, Community Theatre, Carlyle, Saskatchewan, Canada. Small town rural and summer resort patronage.

LION HAS WINGS, THE: Merle Oberon, Ralph Richardson, June Duprez, Flora Robson—A fine subject for the times which every one should see. Did not draw for us as it did in the city. Played April 29.—R. R. Kiefer, Kiefer's Theatre, Hardisty, Alberta, Canada. Village and rural patronage.

MAN IN THE IRON MASK: Louis Hayward, Joan Bennett, Warren William, Alan Hale, Joseph Schildkraut—Just fair. Man's appeal. Played June 3.—R. R. Kiefer, Kiefer's Theatre, Hardisty, Alberta, Canada. Village and rural patronage.

OF MICE AND MEN: Burgess Meredith, Lon Chaney, Jr., Betty Field, Charles Bickford—Another late playdate that certainly did not hurt our grosses. Business above average for mid-week but it was funny to hear the wide variance in opinions expressed by the patrons. This is not a picture for children. Running time, 106 minutes. Played August 7-8.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

MY SON, MY SON: Madeleine Carroll, Brian Aherne, Louis Hayward, Laraine Day—A grand production that pulls patronage and pleases. Mid-week business far above average and patrons comments all to the good. Running time, 117 minutes. Played July 31-August 1.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

ONE MILLION B. C.: Carole Landis, John Hubbard, Victor Mature, Lon Chaney, Jr.—Fair business and seemed to please, although it did scare the kids, but as yet we have had no complaints. I thought the whole thing was very well done considering that it must have been quite some job and knowing that the movie wise public would be watching every foot of it to catch the trick photography. You can feel safe to play it as very few will know how it was done and their discussions on it will bring in extra business. Running time, 78 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

STAGECOACH: John Wayne, Claire Trevor, Thomas Mitchell, George Bancroft, Andy Devine, Louise Platt—A man's show with no draw. Played May 24.—R. R. Kiefer, Kiefer's Theatre, Hardisty, Alberta, Canada. Village and rural patronage.

WUTHERING HEIGHTS: Merle Oberon, Laurence Oliver, David Niven, Geraldine Fitzgerald, Flora Robson—Although we played this picture late and considered it strictly for bigger situations, we did outstanding business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

GRANNY GET YOUR GUN: May Robson, Harry Davenport—Smiley Burnette in person on stage. Complete sellout for every performance. Running time, 56 minutes. Played August 14-15.—J. F. Falls, Academy Theatre, Lynchburg, Va. General patronage.

HAUNTED GOLD (reissue): John Wayne—This was doubled with "Too Many Husbands." None of the ladies walked out on this. It's a good western, even judged by present-day westerns.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

MY LOVE CAME BACK: Olivia de Haviland, Jeffrey Lynn, Charles Winninger, Eddie Albert, Jane Wyman—Very good show which pleased fair business. The musical numbers in this show are excellent and will please the music lovers. Running time, 85 minutes. Played August 25-26.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla.—Small town patronage.

WHAT'S YOUR I. Q.?, NO. 2: Pete Smith Specialities—This one certainly clicked in a big way. People all over the house answered or tried to answer the quiz questions out loud. When they were right, everyone applauded. When they were wrong, there was plenty of razzing. Everyone has a swell time. Running time, 10 minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

WHAT'S YOUR I. Q.?, NO. 2: Pete Smith Specialities—This was thoroughly enjoyed for it really enthused our audience. This registered far better than the first I. Q. Pete Smith is okay. Running time, eight minutes.—John Grabenstein, Liberty Theatre, Eustis, Neb. Rural and small town patronage.

INFORMATION PLEASE, NO. 12: Wendell L. Willkie—One of the best in this always good series with the Presidential candidate giving a good account of himself. MARCH OF TIME, NO. 11: U. S. Navy—1940—Very good, but I don't think March of Time is appreciated in small towns as it should be.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

A silent version of the play starring Mable Normand was made in 1919 by Samuel Goldwyn.

English Refugee Children See "Pinocchio" at Canton

English children now at North Canton, Ohio, for the duration of the war, were the guests of J. F. Stein, manager of the Windsor, Canton, at a special showing of "Pinocchio," the Walt Disney cartoon feature, Monday, August 26th.

The picture was being advertised in London when the children left for the United States and several of the youngsters voiced their disappointment that they had not been able to see it.

Mr. Stein became aware of their wishes and although his theatre customarily is closed in the afternoon he arranged for the special screening.

Wehrenberg Not Opposed To Extended Clearance

Independents in and around St. Louis are not opposed to additional clearance on pre-release pictures played at Fanchon and Marco's first run Ambassador theatre, in single bills, at two-a-day.

Fred Wehrenberg and independents of his MPTO at St. Louis and Missouri had been reported, in a story from St. Louis appearing in MOTION PICTURE HERALD on August 24th, as being opposed to additional clearance of from 14 to 21 days for the new F. and M. pre-release policy.

"Independents," Mr. Wehrenberg said, "have always been in favor of a single feature policy and will cooperate on any fair policy that will eventually lead to single programs."

Mexican Union Asks Federal Aid

by JAMES LOCKHART

in Mexico City

The National Cinematographic Workers Union, convened in Mexico City, adopted resolutions urging the government to federalize the industry and to open a bank to finance it. Congressman A. Zapata Vela, a laborite who attended the session, promised the workers that he would do his utmost to have the industry put under the jurisdiction of the Government as the oil industry has been and as the railways soon will be.

The new congress, which began September 1st, is expected to give prompt attention to both resolutions of the film labor union.

Two key Mexican cities are being deprived of films, domestic and foreign, by a boycott the national cinematographic workers' union is waging to force the exhibitors to give in to demands for higher pay and less work. This boycott is against theatres in Tehuacan, Puebla state, famous spa, and Ciudad Valles, in San Luis Potosi state. The exhibitors have appealed to the federal Government.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

Looking At It From This Corner

Theatremen with an ear to the ground and an eye to the horizon must be noting the definite resurgence of big-time, old-time ballyhoo paralleling the raft of late releases studded with fat exploitation material. That would be indicated especially in these pages accepted by the industry as the barometer of theatre promotion.

Such evidences of vigorous showmanship hardly mean that the man in the field has just awakened to the boxoffice merits of "boom boom". Round Tablers have long been doing a job with what they have had to work on. If the members are hitting harder now, it would be because they are given heavier exploitation ammunition to hit with.

Another reason for it could be home office encouragement, conspicuously lacking in important sectors until now. Exhibitors inclined to impede initiative with too much attention to the holding down of expenditures are coming around to the more logical viewpoint. Others will do so, after studying accounts of the recent Fox Midwest managers' convention in Kansas City. Headman Elmer C. Rhoden, one of the country's keener showmen, inaugurates a policy of "old-fashioned showmanship". Thousands are to be spent for ballyhoo.

Observations here on top-grade showmanship must include the recent campaign waged in Denver for the world premiere of Edward Small's "Kit Carson". Led by Rick Ricketson, Fox Intermountain chieftain, and fast-shooting exploiteer from 'way back, his Denver theatres crew worked tirelessly, ingeniously, to fill six theatres for the premiere, to give the attraction an impetus for record boxoffice receipts in the days that followed. That the state's governor, the city's mayor, the community's leaders saw fit to endorse and participate is not so much a compliment to the picture as it is to the manner in which the show was sold.

Civic cooperation, sponsored by the Chambers of Commerce in the division's seven cities, is credited for much of the success in the Loew's-Poli New England "new movie season" campaign, guided by Harry Shaw and Lou Brown, and told about elsewhere in this section. The Chambers were sold principally through a comprehensive brochure made up individually for each situation and ably prepared by Brown with Shaw's approval.

Included in the bows by Brown for wholehearted effort are the managers, assistants and staffs of the participating theatres. The managers, all Round Tablers need it be said, are Matt Saunders, Morris Rosenthal, Harry Rose, of Bridgeport; Bob Russell, Sam Badamo and Bill Reisinger, of New Haven; Ed Fitzpatrick, of Waterbury; Joe Samartano, of Meriden; Jack Simons and Lou Cohen, of Hartford; George Freeman, of Springfield; Monk Maloney, Joe Anstead and Bob Portle, of Worcester.

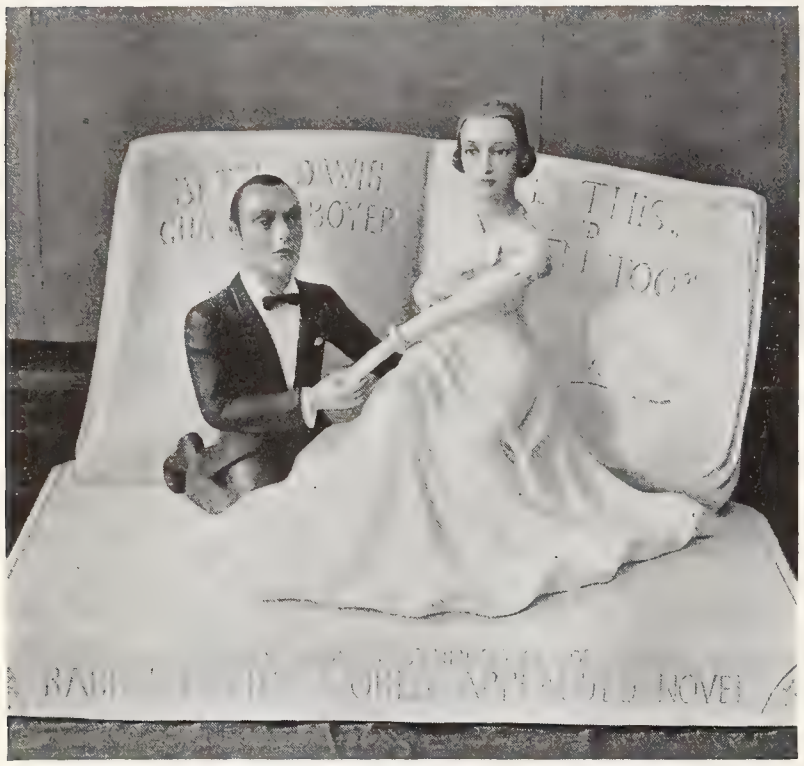
For "The Man I Married", Twentieth Century-Fox prepared two advertising campaigns. One stressed the romance, the other spotlighted the anti-Nazi theme. Though theatres used both campaigns variously, little difference was noted in comparative grosses. One ad approach seemed to draw as well as the other.



A picture's subject matter does not necessarily determine its ticket-selling possibilities. That depends more importantly upon the boxoffice values with which the attraction is invested by the producer and the intelligence with which it is sold by the theatreman.

A-Mike Vogel

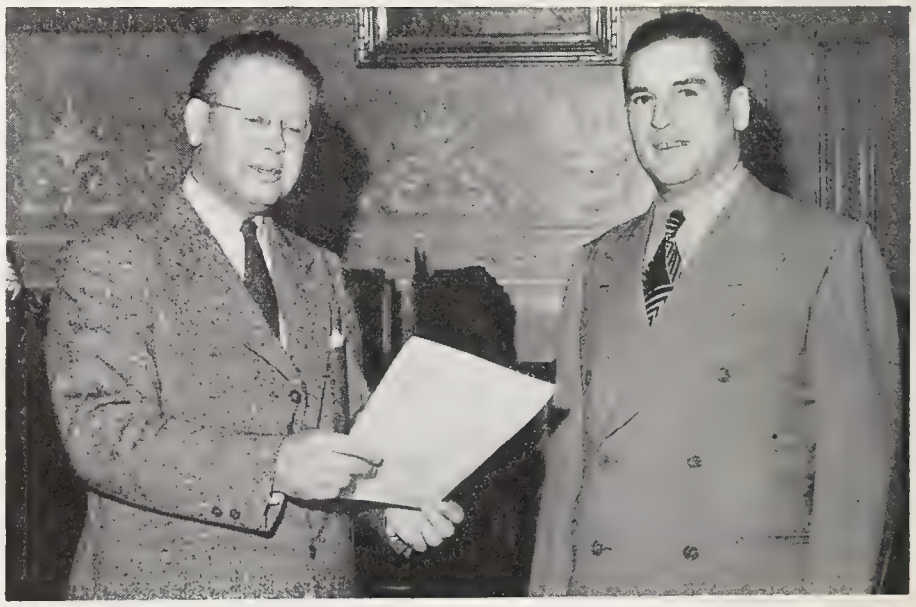
The good news of the week is that ebullient, ubiquitous, lovable Louie Charninsky, dangerously ill for too long a stretch, is now recuperating at his home in Dallas. It was touch and go for a while but, as with many another formidable obstacle in his colorful career, Louie is licking a combination of illnesses and, characteristically, fuming to be back on the job for Interstate.

It is then moved, seconded and unanimously carried that the earnest wishes of the membership be conveyed to the Round Tabler for a quick and permanent recovery.

Round Table in Pictures

For the engagement of "All This, and Heaven Too", Manager William Israel at Warners' Earle, in Philadelphia, built the attractive plaster display illustrated above. Figures of Bette Davis and Charles Boyer were featured against a book background which carried title and cast credits.

Timely and seasonal was Jack Markle's lobby setpiece at the Coolidge Corner Theatre, in Brookline, Mass., featuring his forthcoming attractions on simulated baseball diamond, title letters spotted on baseballs. Jargon of the game was used for selling copy.



Dubbing it "Maryland Star State Handicap", Ed Fitzpatrick at Loew's Poli, Waterbury, used cutout heads of leading members of the cast over a sketched map planted in lobby. Under each was a line giving description of state each player hailed from. To those identifying each state plus best 25-word statement on "Why I would like to see Maryland" guest tickets were awarded.

Launching of a 24-sheet with champagne bottle breaking ceremonies was the ingenious slant arranged by the United Artists publicity department in advance of "Thief of Bagdad" opening. Held in Rockefeller Center area, stunt attracted crowds.

Cattlemen Parade for 'Dalton' Date

Since "When the Daltons Rode" was his state fair week attraction, Lou Golden "threw the works" for the date at the RKO Orpheum, in St. Paul, with an opening night ballyhoo tied to the local "Hook 'Em Cow" Club, composed of wealthy cattle buyers who rode to the theatre in elaborate wild west style. Shooting as they went, the clubmen paraded the main street to a section adjacent to the theatre, cleared by arrangement with the police. Golden turned his front into an old-fashioned hitching rail with signs inviting the riders to "hitch your mustangs here." As a result, the mustangs were the center of attention while the guests saw the picture, with a bit of traffic-stopping caused by the unusual sight.

The stunt was featured in both the local and South St. Paul papers, the breaks in the local sheet being highly regarded by the Round Tabler, who reports the daily as very cold to picture publicity. Sold by the theatreman as a civic event which would draw fair visitors to the city, the paper agreed to come in. Extensive radio hookups also aided in building interest.

In addition, Lou arranged a colorful front in keeping, and dressed his ushers in cowhand style ahead and during the run. The marquee was decorated with horse-tails and the newspaper ads stepped up with emphasis on the "genuine American he-man thrills."

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Lion-Hearted Sought By Bannan on "Ghost"

Gag campaign was accorded "Ghost Breakers" by George Bannan, Schine's Van Wert, , Van Wert, Ohio, who advertised in local papers for folks "who are not feary of the eerie" to attend a special midnight show. Ghost Breakers, Inc., business cards were distributed on main streets, with gag copy such as "office horrors, midnight to," etc. "Ghosts" picketed the theatre and large cutout spook display was planted in front of theatre ahead and during run.

To help sell Schine's "happy entertainment" program, Bannan ran a brief editorial in the paper inviting readers to forget the present conflict and relax at the theatre by seeing the outstanding laugh features booked for the occasion. This was followed by complete list of forthcoming attractions.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Shaffer Crashes Vox Pop Column

With the News-Leader publishing a "Letter Box" column, which is reported widely read, Manager Frank Shaffer at Warner's Dixie, in Staunton, Va., crashed it recently by addressing a letter to the editor in which he went to town plugging his forthcoming attraction, "Our Town," letter being signed with only the initials F. O. B., thus concealing the real identity of the writer.

Since Martha Scott of the picture had been selected as Festival Queen in Boston day ahead of Frank's opening and the story was run by AP, theatreman played it up by planting photo of the star and receiving credit line for his theatre.

SLOGAN TIEIN OPENS LOEW-POLI "SEASON"

Commerce Chambers, Papers Support Divisional Project; Brochure Details Highlights

"Loew Poli Star Spangled Movie Season, Where Pictures Are Better Than Best."

Selected from among over 3,500 entries in newspaper contests held in the seven cities of the Loew Poli New England division, the above slogan, made up of two winning suggestions, has been adopted for the current divisional new movie season which opened August 29.

To inaugurate the new season in previous years, slogans were chosen from suggestions by the Loew managers and staff personnel. This year, Harry Shaw, division chief, and Lou Brown, ad head, switched the slant to an open newspaper contest tiein, in which the public was invited to submit slogan ideas. For the five best slogans entered in each situation, plus 25-word statements on why the slogans were selected, extended term passes were given.

Over 3,500 Entries Received

In all, an average of 700 entries was had in each spot, the seven including Bridgeport, New Haven, Hartford, Meriden, in Connecticut; Springfield and Worcester, in Massachusetts. Full page layouts devoted to the new season product, with by-line stories by J. R. Vogel, Oscar A. Doob, and Harry Shaw, were used to build further interest. According to Brown, the dailies went for the tiein enthusiastically, even those usually hesitant about accepting movie contests.

Since "Boom Town" was selected to open the season, the division heads prepared a special brochure for the Chamber of Commerce in every situation, with each brochure individually typewritten to suggest that the theatres were offering exclusive campaigns. The literature explained in detail the definite values to be had by the Chamber and merchant members in tieing in with the picture via special sales, and co-op ads, accompanied by illustrated layouts. In every instance, the desired cooperation was obtained with the various Chambers urging the tiein via letters to members.

Material to the stores used widely in windows and on counters included processed 14 by 22 cards reading, "It's here. New Boom Town sale. See Boom Town at Loew's." Cards with the news slogan were distributed as were streamers furnished by the home office. Slugs also were carried in newspaper co-op ads.

Theatres Supplement Campaign

The theatres, on their own, supplemented the division campaign with fashion shows and radio tieins arranged with the leading stores. For these purposes, newspapers solicited co-op pages. Managers set up advance hookups for a huge motorized float from division headquarters, the elaborate ballyhoo spending a day in each situation taking part in parades, promotions at popular beaches and other amusement resorts. Local mayors saw the picture at special screenings which resulted in newspaper and radio endorsements. In some situations, "Boom Town" days were proclaimed.

For theatre decoration, the processed slogan discs were placed on all displays and readers' boards, each house exhibiting special processed 40 by 60's with titles and casts of the coming shows. Banners and pennants were used extensively inside and out. To cover the terrritory, a tieup with Sinclair filling stations was made to plug the picture and each manager saw to the placing of directional arrows in the area.

Brochure Details Promotions

As an instance of the coverage in the divisional brochures, the Meriden, Conn., campaign stresses a transportation tiein wherein, following the Mayor's "Boom Town Day" proclamation, additional bus and trolley service to the city was put on to stimulate the special sales put on by local merchants as the day's highlight.

Manager Samartano also planted a newspaper contest in which old residents were invited to write their impressions of Meriden in earlier days on whether "it was slow growing or like a Boom Town as the one pictured in the film coming to Loew's," etc. Contestants were invited to submit photos to illustrate their contributions. For the best entries submitted to the Chamber of Commerce, guest tickets were awarded. Co-operation of news distributors was obtained by stressing the reader interest in fan magazines among local readers. All styles of clothing were spotlighted with allusions to the contents of movie stars' wardrobes which the brochure emphasised could be duplicated in the city's stores. Work clothes were tied in through the costumes worn in the picture's oil-well sequences.

Examples of letters for members of service and women's clubs are included in the brochure in which a section is also devoted to engraver's proofs of co-op ads stressing "Boom Town" and the stars. These cover classified hookups, building and loan and bank tieins, jewelry store suggestions, resort ideas, beauty shop, laundry and dry cleaning promotions, as well as men's and women's stores, dairies, among others.

PAPER BAG STICKERS CLICK FOR MANGRAVITE

Distributed widely around Stamford, Conn., for "Pride and Prejudice" at the Stamford and Avon dates, were star stickers made up by Henry Mangravite, used by stores on paper bags. Individual stickers carried cuts of Greer Garson, Mary Boland, Laurence Olivier, copy below reading, respectively, "Who is this star of 'Goodbye, Mr. Chips'?"; "Who is this featured player of 'The Women'?"; "Who is this star of 'Rebecca' and 'Wuthering Heights'?" Theatre copy followed.

McCollum Theatres Circuit Conducts "Honeymoon" Popularity Contest

Married couples in the six towns of the McCollum circuit, in central Illinois, who never did get around to that honeymoon, or wanted to enjoy another such blissful trip, were recently offered an opportunity to see Niagara Falls and Canada "for free" in a popularity voting contest sponsored exclusively by the theatremen. Five days "on the house" were made available to the winning couple in each situation, making 12 in the party. Each theatre put on the project as an individual contest.

The promotion ran for six weeks of actual voting, with no age limit set, votes cast exclusively by patrons at the theatres. Four denominations of coupons were given variously with purchases of adult tickets—50, 100, 500 and 1000—the larger numbers on days when business needed stimulation, the smaller denominations with the stronger attractions. After the first week, entries were limited to the highest 30 in each situation, to eliminate the publicity seekers and to leave the field clear for the hardest workers.

The five-day trip covered 1,500 miles by rail and water, stopping points and lake journeys plugged in the newspapers and lobbies. Travel literature and posters for display were furnished by the cooperating transportation and hotel companies. Competition was keen in every situation with entries in several of the towns reported to have solicited theatre admissions from door to door, according to Manager E. W. Cupp, Paxtonian, Paxton, Ill., who reports the campaign and who acted on the arrangements committee with A. J. Nelson, circuit general manager, and Manager E. N. Nelson, Watseka, Watseka, Ill.

Kid Quiz Contest Held by Straw

Held on the stage of the Empress Theatre, in Edmonton, Alberta, Canada, is the kiddie quiz contest for which Lafayette Straw has found a local sponsor and which is broadcast over Station CFRN weekly. Questions are submitted by the children, each of whom receives a guest ticket if his entry is accepted. Each child who is able to answer the question—between 12 and 15 are used at each session—receives a cash award of fifty cents, those called on, but unable to answer, receiving a Micky Mouse drawing book to keep peace in the family, so to speak. Cooperating radio station gives the affair daily spot announcements and Straw reports on the average of 500 letters received each week containing questions.

On "Dr. Cyclops," Straw used a street ballyhoo consisting of man dressed in grotesque costume with sandwich sign carrying appropriate tiein copy. All lobby and outside lights during engagement were changed to green, as were the bulbs in display frames, numerous window displays were promoted and all doctors and nurses were circularized in advance.

"Happy Marriage Recipes" Sought by Boyle on "Love"

Readers of the local Post-Standard were asked to submit, in fifty words or less, their "Recipes for Happy Marriages" as one of the features of the "I Love You Again" campaign put over by Joseph S. Boyle, Loew's, Syracuse. Cash prizes were awarded the winning entries. Boyle also arranged for a parade of Liberty carriers to the theatre. The marchers were headed by house ushers carrying banners reading: "We are on our way to Loew's, etc." The Liberty News Agency also cooperated by bannering its trucks with theatre copy and distributing 5,000 heralds as inserts in the magazine.

Rubin's Giant Postcard Gag

Ahead of "Andy Hardy Meets Debutante," Nat Rubin at Loew's Poli, New Haven, prepared a giant postcard which was addressed to the Hardy family congratulating them on their third anniversary on the screen. Card was displayed in the lobby week ahead, patrons invited to sign their names. The town's postmaster was photographed accepting the card for mailing to the coast, photo landing in local dailies with appropriate tiein stories.

Patrons Slumber In 'Cool' Theatre

Repeating a stunt he first pulled in the summer of 1936 for tremendous publicity returns, Ed Benjii hit the front pages again during the recent heat wave by offering the facilities of the Capitol, in Madison, Wisc., as a more satisfactory place to slumber for sufferers from hay fever and high temperatures.

Upon adhering to the following rules, the public was invited to sleep at the theatre. Every one accepting was required to register name and address, to bring their pillows and blankets (blankets, no less). Mezzanine and balcony were reserved for the males while the women were allowed to relax on the main floor and general lounges. Police matrons and officers supervised the arrangements and were on duty through the three nights of heat when over 1,500 locals took advantage of Benjii's offer. Included among the guests were many from the local university summer school in addition to the townsfolk.

The dailies, of course, went for the feature on page one with story and photo, the local Times running a banner layout over the masthead. The tiein also served as a climax to Ed's air-conditioning campaign wherein he landed a page co-op layout from "cool" suppliers on a tiein for "My Love Came Back."

Vennett Greets Star At Maine Airport

With Patricia Morison visiting nearby Bath, Maine, Round Tabler Frank A. Vennett at the Opera House hopped aboard the publicity bandwagon by going out to the airport to greet the star with cameramen, who took shots for local papers, in all of which the theatreman was conspicuous. Stories were also landed in the paper together with prominent mention of "Untamed" opening the following week at the Opera House.

Other activities engaged in by Vennett recently included being on the publicity staff to honor the typical Maine family, localites of Bath, and so chosen by the Gannett Publishing Company in their recent state-wide contest. In all the attendant publicity both the theatre and its manager received excellent breaks.

Redmond Gives "Storm" Novel Trailer Twist

Novel treatment was given the "Mortal Storm" trailer by Jimmy Redmond at the Bonham, in Fairbury, Neb., through use of a lightning and thunder effect, with no copy one minute before the trailer itself started. This ended up with a loud crash and thunder, and just as the trailer came on, the stage lights went up as giant cutout letters, spelling out the title, emerged slowly from the stage floor and remained up during the run of the trailer.

Also promoted by Redmond was the three-fold coming attractions folder which he has been distributing. Merchants' ads on center page and back cover entirely pays for the cost of printing and distribution. Each attraction plugged also carries small art work.

Preview for Horses Held By Hunt on "Sporting Blood"

Contacting local sportsmen in connection with his date on "Sporting Blood," George Hunt, Jr., at Loew's, in Louisville, arranged for a private preview at the localite's breeding farms to gain the reaction of the mares and colts while watching the picture. Much was made in the the papers over the stunt, with the sportsmen issuing 100 invites to racers and breeders in the Bluegrass country to attend the showing. Newspaper critics, feature writers, photographers, society, etc., were well represented and the Louisville Times accepted the stunt exclusively and covered it with a feature story and three column art on news page.

Screen was hung from the side of a huge truck, portable chairs and equipment brought out and special shots were taken for the papers showing the horses curiously snooping around the projectionist making ready for the evening preview.

For "We Who Are Young," Hunt promoted furniture store for one hundred dollars worth of spot announcements over WGRC, five a day, seven days ahead. Newly married couples being invited to register at the store, revealing their plans for the future for cash and merchandise prizes. First three winning couples went on the air for a 15-minute interview, cooperating store plugging the tiein storewide and in ads.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Caldwell's "New Moon" Stunt

A stunt that is reported to have attracted plenty of attention in Toledo's busy streets was devised by Wally Caldwell for his "New Moon" campaign at Loew's Valentine. Two cutout new moons, mounted back to back on loosely bolted sticks, were carried through the business district by two boys who manipulated the contraption to give the impression of a moon in motion.

THOSE SHAPELY MAIDS CLICK FOR MANTAMEN

Bathing Beauty Contests by Indiana-Illinois Managers Are Sponsored by Local Firms

That good old standby—the beauty contest—found a top boxoffice builder annually by managers of the Indiana-Illinois circuit, again received the approval of Alex Manta, president, as the theatremen promoted local campaigns to find the local "Miss 1940" while building the grosses over usually dull July weeks. Put on for the four-weeks of the month, in a series of three weekly eliminations and a final, the campaign highlights reported by J. R. Wheeler, in LaPorte, Chick Tompkins, in Whiting, and Art Warha, in Elkhart—all in Indiana—are set down here.

Theatremen Promote Prizes

At the Roxy, in LaPorte, Ray Wheeler started his advance on the front cover of his programs, asking for entries and succeeded that two weeks ahead with mention in his ads following publicity breaks in the local press. Cost of all-expense trip to Chicago for winner and prizes to the finalists were borne by the local Ford dealer in exchange for the usual advertising, the auto man also supplying a bannered car for street attention. Other prizes from merchants in different lines were also promoted and interest was stimulated with newspaper coupon run daily for entries. Personal letters were sent to local girls considered likely entrants.

All photo work was obtained gratis by Wheeler and photos of the various entrants placed in the outside photo frame for build-up. To keep interest high, the manager added a "candid" contest for the second elimination in a tiein with the local camera club.

Three winners were chosen by audience applause in each elimination, the preliminary winners receiving cash and merchandise prizes in addition to appearing in the finals, on the morning of which Wheeler distributed flash heralds throughout the trade area. At the finals, the winner was chosen by a committee of out-of-town judges who attended a dinner given to the entrants at local hotel, as did the previous year's winner who also took part in the stage program. Added break for the participating merchants was had in personal visits to the stores by the winner, the appearances advertised ahead.

Tompkins Stages Hollywood Premiere

At the Hoosier, in Whiting, Chick Tompkins followed the same operation procedure, his contest starting on July 11. This allowed him to open the campaign with an elaborate float in the local July Fourth parade, the bally decorated with outstanding entrants in bathing attire. To stimulate interest in the weekly eliminations, Tompkins made up a lobby showcase display of promoted gifts and used the different sources of advertising and publicity to concentrate local attention.

The finale, here, took the form of a Hollywood premiere, with the entrants driven in new sedans to the theatre where they were greeted by the Mayor and master of ceremonies from a platform erected next to carpet runway. Each girl was introduced to the crowds over the "mike" while batteries of lights added further atmosphere. After the judging, the girls again entered the autos, followed by "Miss 1940" and "Miss 1939" in an open car, escorted by the Mayor and Tompkins in a torchlight parade to the leading hotel where a reception was held.

Gratifying results also were reported by Art Wartha, at the Elco, in Elkhart, who followed the circuit plan along the lines of the campaigns detailed above. In addition to the draw credited to the entrants in the preliminaries, Wartha "killed two birds with one stone" by having the girls hold lettered cards while they were judged, the cards spelling out the name of his coming stage show attraction.

In each of the three campaigns here noted, attention was given to the publicity obtained in the Chicago papers by the winners on their prize trips to the metropolis. In addition to the contest stories, group shots of the girls were planted in the picture pages and amusement sections of the downtown dailies.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Griffith Wishing Contest Tied to "If I Had My Way"

Situated in the Woodlawn district of South Chicago, at the Indiana-Illinois Lex, Manager Bob Griffith tied in with his local community paper on a page co-op campaign hooked to a wishing contest on behalf of "If I Had My Way." Readers were invited to send in no more than 100 words on what they would be if they had their way, each entry to be accompanied by a sales slip from one of the stores participating in the tiein.

As a result, over 200 entries were reported, stimulated additionally by the publicity given the contest by the paper. Cost was negligible, with prizes from co-sponsors and guest tickets from the theatreman. The new twist has proven popular with the merchants who are set to go again on a similar tiein, according to the Round Tabler.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Numerous "Pinocchio" Tieups Prove Effective for Sarvis

Ahead of "Pinocchio" opening at the Library, in Warren, Pa., George C. Sarvis arranged for five children to parade around town wearing masks and chest banners with playdates to attraction. Through cooperation of various merchants, coloring books, masks, etc., were distributed with each purchase, window displays were arranged with local toy store on doll characters from the picture and as special exploitation stunt a walking book posted with one sheets was featured. Third day of run, a special show was held for kids which was well advertised and special radio announcements were made over WJTN whereby tickets were given to winners in connection with a musical melody program contest.

EXPLOITATION BRIEFS FROM A-FIELD

Concentrating on outside bally, Lige Brien for his "Grapes of Wrath" engagement at the Prince in Ambridge, Pa., had a sandwichman walk about town with giant replica of book which included cast and playdates. Truck cruised entire business district, one side featuring a seven by 12 foot picture of the "Grapes of Wrath" home and the other a sign with title, cast and playdates. For five days ahead of opening a large sign was planted on the main highway leading into the city, small window cards promoted were planted in all stores in the area and a special front was constructed for the occasion.

For his serial "Adventures of Red Ryder" A. J. Kalberer at the Indiana, in Washington, Ind., distributed 1,000 lucky numbered cards to all playgrounds, swimming pools and other spots where children congregate. Line in the newspaper under the serial strip was also promoted in return for one frame trailer on the screen ahead of the serial, calling attention to the newspaper's serial.

Attractor used by H. W. Reisinger at Loew's Poli-Bijou in New Haven, Conn., for "Shooting High" consisted of theatre attendant dressed as cowboy riding busy streets on a horse bannered with the following copy: "I'll be switched if those cowboys ain't hitched me here while they wait for 'Shooting High' to open at the," etc., etc.

Pocketbooks' edition of "Pride and Prejudice" formed the basis for a window tie-up by Tommy Delbridge, assistant manager, Loew's, Dayton, with one of the city's leading department stores.

All Bostonians named Hardy were invited to attend the opening day matinee of "Andy Hardy Meets Debutante" at Loew's State and Orpheum as part of the film's campaign put over by Joseph Di Pesa. Social security cards or automobile licenses were required to establish identification.

Don Kuhn's conception of a street bally caveman made such an impression on Dick Osgood, Hollywood reporter for radio station WXYZ, Detroit, that he invited the fellow to be guest star for a Tuesday evening broadcast. The caveman stunt was to create interest in the Detroit showing of "1,000,000 B. C.," at the Palms State Theatre.

The local public library put on exhibition a number of costumes similar to those worn in "Pride and Prejudice" as part of the campaign for that film put over by Ed Claffey, Academy, Meadville, Pa. Claffey also used a giant walking book as street ballyhoo.

WARNERITES VOTE "LOVE CAME BACK"

Breaking out in a three-column full to tell about it, Howard Waugh recently struck on an ingenious slant to sell "My Love Came Back" at the Warner, Memphis. Idea was that the entire Warner Brothers personnel in town held an annual polling to determine their choice of the "picture of the year" and this time, strangely enough, Waugh's date finished first.

The decision was announced in an unusual layout, with the top half of the ad carrying hand-lettering copy explaining the vote, followed by signatures of all the voters.

As a teaser ahead of "Annie Oakley" at the Castle, in New Castle, Ind., Ray Brenner, featured a box on the front page of the theatre's tabloid paper advising that Annie Oakley would call a number of patrons selected at random from theatre's mailing list and to those who were able to tell the title of the picture Annie would appear in shortly would receive guest tickets.

Complete beaver board false front was built by Hiram Meeks for his "Typhoon" date at the Rialto, in Morrilton, Ark. with a three-sheet on either side. Board was a light blue, giving a water effect and partially covered with river bottom cane. The title was made through the center out of grape vine and boxoffice itself was also covered with the same material.

Window attractor was that promoted by Tommy Turner for "Edison the Man" at the Grand Theatre, in Grand Haven, Mich. consisting of old and new movie projector heads, old telegraph keys, ticker machines, telephone, old style light bulbs, etc. In addition, scene stills were spotted with title, cast and playdates.

"WHAT'S 150 MILES?" BURKE WANTS TO KNOW

For some time, Bill Burke has been trying to round up some of those comic strip magazines for distribution at his Saturday kid shows at Schine's State, Fostoria, Ohio. But merchants showed no enthusiasm when asked to sponsor the giveaways.

Recently Burke noticed that the Detroit News had started using the magazines and "gambled" a three-cent stamp on a tiein. Although the towns are 150 miles apart, the letter brought the paper's circulation manager, and a deal was made. In fact, adds Bill, the paper now intends covering the entire district.

Using a complete store on the main street of Gloversville, N. Y., Round Tabler Lou Hart for his date on "One Million B.C." at Schine's Hippodrome set up a museum display and literally blanketed the windows with stills and thrill copy using the "peep hole" idea for the museum which was made up of stuffed animals promoted from a local taxidermist. Libraries and schools were also tied up and supplied with picture material.

Utilizing the new Victor Herbert stamps recently issued, Walter Davis at the Randolph Theatre, in Randolph, N. Y., mailed cards to special list using these stamps. Copy on reverse side read: "The U. S. Postal authorities honored the great composer, Victor Herbert, by issuing a stamp in his honor. We suggest that you too can pay homage to his memory by seeing," etc., etc.; this was followed by cast, theatre and playdates.

A MacDonald-Eddy week, celebrated among local music stores, resulted in some splendid displays plugging the "New Moon" showing at the Strand, York, Pa., as part of Edward Moore's campaign.

An "oldie" that proved successful for J. R. MacEachron at the Paramount, in Jackson, Tenn., was the mailing of postcards from New York to his theatre list recommending that his patrons see "Andy Hardy Meets Debutante" when it played his theatre. In addition, through tieup with local utilities company backs of envelopes mailed out with monthly bills, carried title, cast and picture copy.

To celebrate the sixth anniversary of his kiddie shows, Manager Bill Hock of Warners' Enright Theatre, in Pittsburgh, Pa., put on a special show which included broadcast from the theatre which was sponsored by Station WWSW and the Sun-Telegraph. Circus heralds were distributed calling attention to the show, cooperating paper plugged the event daily, and in addition to a well rounded program for the youngsters, pop and other prizes were promoted by the theatreman.

Capitalizing on a local situation, Don Smith, manager of the Meralta, in Culver City, Cal., has effected a successful tiein between Station KMPC and the theatre. Utilizing a popular record show, sponsored by a local automobile dealer and emsee'd by his own assistant manager, Smith in exchange for passes to be used as prizes for contests which are a regular part of the program, receives several plugs each week for the current attraction.

A three-day "Leap Year Contest" was one of the features of the "Pride and Prejudice" advance campaign put over by Joseph S. Boyle, assistant manager, Loew's State, Syracuse. Readers of the Herald-Journal were asked to submit "five rules for winning a husband." Cash prizes and guest tickets were awarded the winners.

THE CHART

Productions are listed under distributors. Features in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed as "Coming Attractions." Parenthesis after title denotes audience classification: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following classification are production numbers. Dagger (†) indicates the 1939-40 season; titles without symbols are 1940-41. Asterisk (*) after title denotes first appearance.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures.

When a production is reviewed the running time is as given by the studio and this is denoted by an asterisk (*) preceding the number. When the home office has established the running time for national release, the studio figure is changed. Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions or repairs to the film may cause variations.

THE STORY OF THE GREAT SINGERS!

A movie fable

Once upon a time there was a famous singer called "Boom Town." He was the big noise of his era. He sang good and loud.

It just so happened that at the same time there was another singer called "I Love You Again." This guy sang good and loud too—and funny!

If it hadn't been that "Boom Town" was always in the limelight you can bet that "I Love You Again" would have been the undisputed champion loud-singer of his day.

But when a guy's good he gets recognition. In between booms of this chap "Boom Town" the nation's showmen got an earful of what "I Love You Again" could do.

They said: "Hey, this guy's got a terrific bellow, too. He's a Star in his own right!" So they let "I Love You Again" do his stuff and it was good stuff and now he's booming in the headlines just like his famous contemporary.

PRODUCING

A THUMBING over of last week's and recent issues of Motion Picture Herald discovers, amid the welter of news of controversy, a new and special consciousness of product.

The anti-trust suit is still, if not a controversy, at least a very large quibble.

The loss of "otherwhere", being the onetime velvet, and the often alibi, as a consequence of the war, is a fact accepted.

The great Latin-American market was not and is not, it is now understood, or rather admitted. It is as good as ever.

Production, which we have at times personified as "Lady Hollywood" has found at long last that the fact is that the homeland, the United States, is the real "sugar daddy", who pays off.

The indications are that from this time on, for quite a spell, production is to address itself at the real customers with a considerably more conscious precision.

The current state of affairs is almost comparable with the time when cash registers were introduced. The bartenders found that they "kept track".

The sobering effect is widely manifest. Current announcements appear to be concerned entirely with the box office. Scanning the schedules, one does not discover those several pictures, common to many seasons past, which indicated that someone was about to make another effort to corral all the Academy oscars.

The consequences are all probably to the benefit of the box office, the public, and the industry.

For several years production, which is to say Hollywood, has been rising in authority, with a decided centering of dictation in the West Coast. About now it is becoming manifest that maybe New York was not always talking entirely through its hat.

Meanwhile, never before have production and distribution been so thoroughly in contact, if not integrated, as now. That possibly is because there is decidedly less distribution to cover the aberrations of production. Also, like it or not, the intensive box office issues of the day, willy-nilly compressed into the American scene, find exhibition, independent or affiliated, in whatever degree, with much common cause.

The ultimate master of the theatre, exhibition, is the direct voice of the customer, and it is making itself heard today as it has not in many years. The movement is not conspicuous. The alliances between the most apparently "affiliated" and the most obviously "independent" are yet to be, or may be never, revealed, but they are actual, real and operative.

The customers who would buy entertainment are the masters.

That is the American way.

THE New York Stock Exchange hit a twenty-four year low with a 129,000 share day, and immediately, possibly just coincidentally, announced a publicity campaign to seek improvement of its status in the public mind. That has been tried before. There is really nothing the matter with the Exchange that could not be cured by a good bull market.

YOU can hear plenty how bad business is, about the darksome outlooks, etc., etc., but it is to be observed that a number of persons have been about this office much of the summer, with cash in hand, seeking, in vain, opportunities to buy or buy into theatre projects. The few offered have been on terms that would make savings bank interest look attractive. No showmen seem to contemplate going out of business.

"PURITY of THE AIR"

THE best thing about this desk is the mail on it. No day opens in this office without challenges to interest, fresh and forthright, from the showmen to whom Motion Picture Herald is addressed. We crave to hear and we do.

"There is a great sounding off from the powers-that-be about the double bill menace," writes Mr. John Wolfberg, assistant manager at Loew's Poli theatre in Springfield, Massachusetts. "Certain individuals have used magazine articles and the radio for a further airing of their views. The purity of the air has not been improved.

"The evils of the industry should not be thrown in the public's face. Criticism from those within the industry should be confined to trade publications. Eventually the public is going to get sick and tired of hearing of our inability to solve our own problems. . . . No one in the industry has the right to make space grabbing statements which capitalize on the industry's woes. . . . In recent years we have lost a large percentage of former movie goers. These are people who have lost interest . . . because of the things they have seen about Hollywood and the things they have read. . . . It started when the movies appeared with a behind-the-scenes story, showing movies in the making. . . ."

HAD they strayed back into the dusty legal and real estate pages of the New York Sun the other night, many grayheaded picturemen would have found a poignant plucking at the harp of memory in an item which said:

"The Board of Liquidation of Fort Lee, New Jersey, responsible under the borough's bond refunding plan for the financial rehabilitation of Fort Lee, announced today that it has obtained at minimum expense a comprehensive master plan for the borough through the cooperation of the Regional Plan Association. . . . This with new revenues from the sale of foreclosed properties promises to restore a balanced budget and to make Fort Lee one of the most attractive residential areas in Bergen county. . . . "

It is a time for remembering, a time for reminding. Twenty-five years ago the lights were gleaming in those cinema highlands up the Hudson.

WHEN in the chill of a September morning, with a whisper of frost in the lowlands of our Connecticut valley, one comes upon a bumble bee dead in the heart of a flower, it is a moment of significance. It is for the bee the end of an era—and lucky for him, drunk with nectar at sundown.

This Week in the News

Theatre Equipment

"CENTURY Projector Model C," is the newest 35mm sound projector on the market. It is sponsored by Sam Kaplan, New York projection unionist and otherwise engaged in theatre equipment.

RCA Manufacturing Company was to announce in New York on Friday consummation of arrangements with Mr. Kaplan to distribute the machine through independent supply dealers in places where Mr. Kaplan has no distributors.

He has had conversations with the Telephone Company's Electrical Research Products with a view toward obtaining a license for Erpi sound heads. International Projector and Motiograph now are the main Erpi-licensed sound-projector manufacturers.

Besides any Erpi or RCA sound-head licensing, Mr. Kaplan is understood to be developing a sound system of his own.

Erpi gets Century distribution in South America and India.

Century Projector Corporation supplants the old Samuel Kaplan Manufacturing and Supply Company. Larry Davee, formerly of Erpi, and recently with Motiograph Projector of Chicago, will be Century field representative.

RCA Manufacturing on Friday also was to confirm a story previously published here announcing the extension of its sound manufacturing and servicing to include other theatre equipment, making available to certain independent supply dealers a new Brenkert film projector and lamp and a line of theatre screens, including a new "Magic Screen," for which it claims new reflective and sound transmission properties. The Hurley Screen Company, of New York, will supply RCA exclusively.

Admitting its inability to afford the expense involved in developing its system to keep pace with the higher fidelity sound advances in the field, Ultraphone Sound Equipment, this week notified exhibitors using its reproducers that it had disposed of its business to RCA, that RCA would service Ultraphone users and would carry a stock of Ultraphone parts, and that Frosch Theatre Supply Company, of Minneapolis also would stock parts.

Walter E. Green, president of National Theatre Supply Company, in New York, Monday, described four new developments for projection equipment: "Simplex E-7 Projectors," "One-Kilowat Type Simplex High Lamps," "Walker Molded Plastic Screens," "Bausch Lomb Super Cinephor Lenses"—all to be incorporated in "a new unified projection program."

Bioff to Rest

WILLIE BIOFF will leave the Chicago city jail at noon next Friday, September 20th, completing a six months' term on an old pandering charge. During his incarceration, he continued at the head of Hollywood's studio unions, and it is generally believed that from the jailhouse he directed many an order relating to the business of his unions via long distance telephones to his lieutenants in Hollywood.

From the vicinity of the Chicago jail it was learned Wednesday that Bioff will go direct to his California ranch estate, to rest and sun for a while before turning attention to studio unions and the pending matter of a Federal trial on U. S. income tax matters, for which he is under indictment in Los Angeles.

Nazi Pressure

THE Nazi order forbidding Paramount Pictures to do business in Germany or other Nazi-dominated countries, officially became effective Wednesday, and as in the cases of other U. S. distributors previously barred, the State Department was unable to take any effective action to counteract the order.

Representatives of several of the companies which have had difficulty with Germany have conferred with State Department officials concerning the matter, but it was pointed out that under the present state of affairs there is nothing the U. S. Government could do.

The Department, however, is compiling a "record" of German discriminations against United States business, in the hope that after the war it may be possible to enter into negotiations with Germany for an amelioration of conditions.

Administration officials in Washington frankly have little confidence in the possibilities of arriving at an amicable solution of these and other problems with the Nazi government, and there is a definite feeling in the Capital that in the event Germany is the final victor in the war United States trade with all of Europe will be greatly circumscribed.

Saunders Returns

INTERNATIONALLY known as the "father of exploitation" and credited with popularizing the term as synonymous with motion picture promotion, Claud Saunders, creator and head of the industry's first field exploitation force, at the old Famous Players-Lasky, now returns to the firing line on the staff of "Rick" Ricketson, president of Fox-Intermountain Theatres, headquarters at Denver.

Political Sides

MORE picture personalities chose sides this week in the Presidential political campaign.

Robert Montgomery is heading Hollywood actors campaigning for Wendell L. Willkie. There will be a mass meeting next week, with Mr. Willkie scheduled to address as many screen personalities as Mr. Montgomery and aides can round up. Assisting him are Mary Pickford, who is sponsoring a "first voter's" league; Frank and Ralph Morgan, Leo McCarey, George Murphy, Ann Sothern, Roger Pryor, and Morrie Ryskind. Walter O'Keefe, chairman of the entertainment division of the Republican National Committee, said Tuesday there were plans for national network broadcasts.

Meanwhile, this week, Charles L. O'Reilly and his assistant, Jack Connolly, were expected on the coast, to campaign in the film industry for Mr. Roosevelt.

Mr. O'Reilly was named chairman of the motion picture division of the Democratic National Committee by national chairman Edward J. Flynn. Mr. O'Reilly is head of the Sanitary Automatic Candy Corporation, of New York; was president of the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce and served on the National Recovery Act Code authority.

James P. Clark, head of the Horlacher Film Delivery Service, of Philadelphia, is serving as chairman of that city's Democrattic Committee, and Vincent G. Hart, formerly with the Hays office in New York, is assisting Edwin Jaekle, chairman of the New York State Republican Committee.

About "Pastor Hall"

UNANIMOUSLY ruling that "Pastor Hall," anti-Nazi film made in England, distributed by James Roosevelt in the U. S. with a foreword by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, would "wield undesirable influence and is of an exceedingly controversial nature," the Chicago censor board banned the picture on Monday.

On Tuesday James Roosevelt said through a spokesman in Los Angeles that he would take steps to ascertain by what authority the police were empowered to impose the ban and secondly by what standards of analysis the picture had been adjudged controversial.

The same censor board passed "Blitzkrieg in Poland," Nazi film showing the invasion of that country. Lieut. Harry M. Costello, head of the Chicago Police division under which the censor board operates, said, "I am certain that the charges bandied about that this board is pro-Nazi are entirely without fact or foundation." He added, "The ordinance under which the censor board operates, specifies just what we can or cannot reject."

Decree vs. Talent Pool

WHILE the Department of Justice proceeds to effect an anti-trust suit consent decree settlement with the "Big Five" defendants for distribution-exhibition (see page 15), a mystery has developed over what the Government intends doing about other matters in the original bill of complaint which have not figured in any settlement documents to date.

There is, for one, the matter of the Government's demand that the majors in Hollywood break up a talent pool alleged to exist for preventing independent producers from obtaining the services of stars and directors while they are still "good box office."

Inquiries Tuesday at the Department's headquarters in Washington on the Government's intentions in this connection brought forth a terse "No comment."

Opera Burgeons

A SPECTACULAR promotion campaign for the advancement of music and of the Metropolitan Opera in New York began Wednesday with double-spread announcements in several newspapers of a plan to "distribute" records of a dozen operas, one each week, to the public.

All potential customers in the area are invited to go each week to one of the New York Committee for Music Appreciation's 14 distribution stations and on payment of $1.75 receive "what experts consider the very heart and core of each immortal opera" on three or four double-faced 12-inch records. Customers are to sign an agreement not to resell the records at a profit. Also record-players which plug into radios are being offered for $4.75.

The plan is possible because "world-famous operatic artists and conductors waived every penny of their royalties and prominent music manufacturers have reduced every charge and every item of profit to what they consider their barest practical operating minimum," the announcement said. The sponsoring committee, headed by Dr. John Erskine, will turn over any surplus which remains after expenses of the campaign to the Metropolitan Opera Guild.

Producer Merger?

THE future of what has been characterized as the "Little Hays Organization," which would afford Frank Capra, David O. Selznick, Walter Wanger and other "major-independent" producers advantages of co-operation paralleling those for which the major studios maintain the Associated Motion Picture Producers, this week appeared destined to be merged with the latter organization.

Following a series of preliminary discussions between business managers of the independent producers, commencing several months ago, after Messrs. Capra and Selznick formulated the project, it was made known that plans for admitting the independent producers to membership in the AMMP on a limited basis had been discussed.

Harry M. Warner is chairman of the committee of AMMP considering the matter. For some time independent producers have been seeking a voice in labor negotiations and other problems affecting the picture industry.

Disputes 'Escapists'

FILM producers who believe the screen market demands "escapist" entertainment were disputed by Dean George H. Chase of Harvard University, visiting the David L. Loew-Albert Lewin production, "Flotsam," last week in Hollywood.

He told Mr. Lewin, Harvard graduate and long-time friend of his: "The days of purely escapist motion pictures are numbered. Young men of college age, who are about to serve—or perhaps even die for—a very real cause, want no such dainty a diet. They are demanding a solid core of relevance to this swiftly changing world in which they live and are apt very soon to play vital parts."

New Air Waves

THE Federal Communications Commission Wednesday filed with the State Department its proposed reallocation of broadcast frequencies, and set March 29th next, as the date for their application, simultaneously with the giving of effect to the North American Regional Broadcasting agreement, under which they were developed.

Changes in frequencies will affect all but 85 of the 862 stations now operating, moves ranging from 10 to 40 kilocycles, with 614 stations being required to move up 20 kilocycles.

The broadcasters now are being apprised of their new allocations and have been given until October 15th in which to register any exceptions to the Commission's agreement.

U.S. Camera Scale

THE International Photographers of Motion Picture Industry, the newsreel cameramen's union, on Wednesday assailed the low wage scales listed by the United States Civil Service Commission for photographers and technicians needed by the War Department.

Charles Downs, business agent for the union's New York Local, Number 644, said that the scales meant "cutting our salaries all to hell"; that his local had protested to the Civil Service Commission, in Washington; that it had also protested to Senator Robert Wagner, of New York, author of the Wagner Labor Act, and to local representatives in the House; that locals in California and Chicago were protesting to their Congressional representatives; and that the international brotherhood would go on record against the salaries listed.

The Civil Service lists, typically, a head motion picture cameraman at $2,600 per year. The union scale is $12,500.

Mr. Downs advised union members to take examinations for the posts but not to accept positions. In this way, members will be qualified if the situation changes.

EXHIBITORS OPEN ATTACK ON NEW PRACTICE OF 'JUGGLING' ADMISSIONS

New Jersey Allied Claims Plan Will Breed Ill-Will but Ohio Independents Praise It; Allied of Connecticut Is Opposed

Independent exhibitors are starting to complain about the growing practice of distributors asking that admissions be raised to a recommended scale on certain selected pictures. Although no increase in rental is asked, the distributor receives more income through percentage arrangements. Some exhibitors have indorsed the policy but others oppose it on the grounds that the public does not want to pay increased prices.

Opposed in New Jersey

The first organization protest against the policy of raising admissions came Monday from Allied Theatre Owners of New Jersey, an affiliate of Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors. The position of the association was formulated at a meeting held a week ago Wednesday and a statement explaining the viewpoint of the members was sent on Monday to the sales managers of the distributing companies.

At a regular luncheon meeting at the Hof-Brau Haus, New Haven, Tuesday, Allied Theatre Owners of Connecticut went on record as being unalterably opposed to raising of admission prices for presentation of any feature pictures. It was the consensus that this procedure would inevitably react unfavorably on regular programs. Lawrence C. Caplan, executive secretary, was authorized to draw up a letter of protest to all distributors and to the trade press. The next meeting will be held September 24th.

Allied of New Jersey said, "It has been the experience of these subsequent run theatres that the juggling of admission prices in the past has been found to be injurious over a period of time." Other reasons listed were that the policy would tend to convey to the theatre patron that all other pictures were inferior and that admission prices of subsequent run theatres have become standardized so that the patron on leaving his home with his family well understands the amount of money he is to spend for the evening's entertainment.

"Sufficient burden has already been placed on the low income patron through the Federal Admission tax," Allied of New Jersey continued. "The good-will created by the theatre in its neighborhood, usually its greatest asset, will be irreparably damaged by increase of admission prices even on a certain few pictures." In houses where the program was changed frequently it would be impossible to charge a different price for each picture according to its merit, the statement continued.

It was also asserted that the gross receipts on pictures played before and after the increased admission engagements would be lower and that "The plan takes away one of the few remaining rights of the exhibitor to run his own business, that of setting his price scale."

Charles Skouras, head of the Fox West Coast circuit was scheduled to discuss in New York this week with National Theatres executives his announced plan to raise admissions on "Brigham Young", "Strike Up the Band" and "Down Argentine Way". Mr. Skouras was encouraged by the results of the increased admission policy on "Boom Town". He will increase prices on the three named films at Loew's State and Grauman's Chinese in Hollywood, it was reported.

Other exhibitor groups which approve increased admissions on outstanding pictures include the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio and the Independent Theatre Owners Association. Three weeks ago in approving the plan for "Boom Town" the ITO of Ohio bulletin said.

"Exhibitors should cooperate in this instance. But," it warned distributors, "before urging exhibitors to increase their prices to the public, be absolutely sure the picture justifies it—and then follow the Metro plan of permitting the exhibitor to decide for himself."

The ITO bulletin pointed out that increased admission prices make the public appreciate the better motion pictures which are sold as "superlative entertainment." It was claimed that increased admission prices on certain pictures could wipe out the loss of business suffered abroad by the distributors.

The pictures, yet to be released, proposed for increased admission prices include, "Brigham Young", Twentieth Century-Fox; "Fantasia", Walt Disney; "The Great Dictator", Charles Chaplin-United Artists; and "North West Mounted Police", Paramount. The policy was also tested with "All This, and Heaven Too", Warner Brothers-First National.

MGM Cites Increased Grosses for 26 "Boom Town" Higher Admission Tests

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's home office in New York this week cited results of the first 26 test runs of "Boom Town" in support of its comparatively new policy—which is growing as an industry practice—of inducing exhibitors to raise their admissions for certain selected pictures recommended by the distributor.

Taking "Boys' Town" and "San Francisco," two of its "big grossers" of recent years, as pictures which it believes to have had comparative drawing possibilities. MGM compares the grosses of the three for the first week in 26 identical situations where each production played. To be borne in mind, of course, in considering "Boom Town's" gross increase, is the factor of its higher admissions. Following is the comparison, each figure representing the percentage of normal business—normal being 100 per cent:

	"BOOM TOWN"	"BOYS' TOWN"	"SAN FRANCSICO"
Kansas City	314%	141%	205%
St. Louis	278	155	169
Atlanta	336	140	194
Houston	327	177	161
Memphis	341	118	210
Bridgeport	262	168	164
Canton	271	160	146
New Haven	190	150	144

New Orleans	272	155	188
Los Angeles (State)	237	166	171
Los Angeles (Chinese)	255	165	161

"Boom Town" grossed $367,478 as against $283,568 for "San Francisco" and $263,329 for "Boys' Town" in the first full week of advanced price engagements in 21 key cities, MGM reported, adding that the film had a 100 per cent holdover record in its first 35 key city openings.

VAUDEVILLE BOOKINGS FOR SEASON SEEN HOLDING AT LAST YEAR'S LEVEL

Full-Time Stage Policy To Be Used in Few Houses; 100 Affiliated Circuit and Independent Theatres Booked

No important additions to the number of theatres playing a combination policy of vaudeville and pictures are being made this season. About 100 theatres have announced a policy of vaudeville and pictures, with about 200 additional houses set to follow next month, most on a part time basis. The small number of theatres now adhering to a policy of straight vaudeville is not expected to be increased.

No Increase Expected

Arthur Fisher, a New York independent booker, who books the two Harry Brandt full-week houses, the Flatbush in Brooklyn, N. Y., and the Windsor in the Bronx, N. Y., said:

"The set-up for the new season is about the same as last season. There may be some increase in the number of theatres booking vaudeville, but on the whole there is only a slight difference. The possibility of an increase in the number of theatres playing vaudeville depends almost entirely on the business garnered under the present straight picture policy.

"If business drops, some exhibitors will turn to vaudeville as a bracer. If, on the other hand, business remains stationary, there will be no incentive to experiment with vaudeville."

Major circuits report the situation unchanged, with few exceptions.

RKO, for instance, has dropped shows at the Palace, Chicago, a former full-week spot, that is now playing straight pictures. Indications are that the circuit is making money with this policy or at least losing less money than hitherto. There are no immediate plans for resumption of vaudeville in that city.

Warner Brothers, also, may lose a major stand this season, if the musicians' local and the chain do not reach an agreement on the Earle Theatre, Philadelphia. Another uncertain Warner vaudeville stand is the Stanley, Pittsburgh. Last season, the theatre played vaudeville regularly, but this season the policy may call only for occasional shows or name bands. The first show in the Stanley will be headed by Mickey Rooney, opening September 14. After that, however, the policy of the house remains indefinite.

Paramount, however, reports no important change in its vaudeville policy for the new season. Occasional shows are being booked into the Michigan, Detroit, and Buffalo, Buffalo, plus its regular Paramount, New York, and Oriental, Chicago.

Loew's, which has been presenting vaudeville at the State, New York, and Capitol, Washington, for a number of years, contemplates no important additions.

If an attraction of major importance comes along Loew's is expected to book it into the Capitol, New York, and State, Cleveland, but not otherwise.

Warner Brothers, which, last year, had the most vaudeville playing time of the affiliated circuits, does not have the same situation this season. Missing from the booking set-up this year, are some one- and two-day neighborhood spots around Philadelphia, which are, to a great extent, affected by the difficulties with the musicians' union.

The picture for the independents, however, shows a slight improvement.

Edward Sherman, independent booker, has added the Royal, Baltimore, a colored house which opened Sunday, September 1, with "Fats" Waller headlining the show. The Tower, Camden, N. J., opened as a split-week house, but goes into a full-week policy soon.

Arthur Fisher's newest acquisition as an independent booker is the Metropolitan, Providence, half or full-week, operated by Ralph Snyder, Boston independent.

Name Bands Sought

Unless there's a strong influx of film names for personal appearances, or perhaps, reduced revenue on the straight picture policy, there's little incentive for theatre operators to book stage attractions, bookers pointed out. At present, bookers are on the lookout for name bands with box office appeal.

The two Brandt houses resume straight vaudeville September 12th, using name bands as the nucleus for their shows. Originally it was a four-house operation, two having dropped this policy. Art Jarrett and his new band and Sally Rand, the erstwhile fan dancer, are booked to open the new season at the Flatbush, Brooklyn. Cab Calloway and Jimmy Dorsey follow.

Although the new season is not yet completely under way, nearly 100 theatres have made vaudeville commitments. Of this number, 85, representing the bulk of the larger houses in the country, are being booked from New York. Bookers say that potential vaudeville buyers are waiting to close picture deals before tackling the vaudeville problem.

Network Bureau Books Theatre

A sidelight on the vaudeville situation is the announcement that CBS will book the Riverside, Milwaukee, the first time in the history of radio and vaudeville business that a network artists' bureau has done this. Shortage of film product in the city is said to have compelled the theatre to change its policy.

Absence of acceptable stage units also has compelled RKO to enter the production field. RKO is lining up talent for a unit to open the Colonial Theatre, Dayton, September 27th. Dave Bines, producer at the Palace, Cleveland, will stage the show.

In Chicago, it was reported that the vaudeville situation will remain the same, unless the supply of double features decreases greatly, whereupon a boom in unit productions is expected.

No Sunday Vote In Philadelphia

There will be no Sunday film referendum in Philadelphia at the November election, for on Thursday, September 5th, the deadline for filing the necessary petitions, the Lord's Day Alliance, which had announced it planned to make a battle at the polls to stop the operation of Sunday motion picture shows, suddenly reversed its policy. The Reverend William B. Forney, general secretary of the Alliance, announced the abandonment of the original plan, deferred probably until the municipal election next year.

"Because of Politics"

"Because of present political conditions in Philadelphia, because this is a presidential year, because of war and various other reasons," he said, "we fear that if a referendum were forced this November, the Sunday question might be made an unpleasant one in the election. I feel we would have had no difficulty whatever in obtaining thousands more signatures than the necessary 40,000, and we did not postpone the fight because of any lack of signatures. We simply felt that a local election would provide us a better opportunity for making the issue clear."

Adjoining Philadelphia, eight Montgomery county communities which defeated Sunday films five years ago will vote in November on the referendum. Petitions have been filed in Norristown, Jenkintown, Abington township, Ambler, Conshohocken, Narbeth, Pennsburg and East Greenville.

Dispute in Gulfport

For the first time in approximately 10 years, Gulfport, Miss., houses have discontinued Sunday performances following a misunderstanding between them and the Gulfport Post, American Legion, sponsors of Sabbath shows on a 10 per cent proceeds basis. No threats had been made by either city or county officials to uphold a time-worn blue law against Sunday show leaving the operation-legion quarrel the only known cause for the shutdown.

N. L. Carter, assistant general manager of Paramount-Richards Theatres of New Orleans, operators of the Paramount and Anderson said after the closing that his organization had contributed all they cared to the American Legion, and "If this group feels that they must have outside assistance it should come from somebody else besides Paramount-Richards. We have been carrying the torch long enough."

Legion heads merely said that they would no longer serve as a medium for motion picture houses at Gulfport to operate on Sunday.

Rensselaer Renews Battle

The long fight to legalize Sunday motion pictures in Rensselaer, N. Y., the only city in the state without this privilege, is to be renewed September 18th when the common council is expected to pass an ordinance allowing exhibitions from 2 P. M. to midnight. The council passed a similar ordinance last year, but it was vetoed by the then mayor.

U. S. AND EXHIBITORS UNRECONCILED ON BLOCKS-OF-FIVE DECREE CLAUSE

Three Exhibitor Polls Shooting at Government's Demands for Small-Block Sales; Negotiators Working on Final Decree Draft

Theatre owners and Department of Justice officials in midweek remained unreconciled on the blocks-of-five feature sales provision of the proposed consent decree settlement of the Government's New York anti-trust suit in equity.

Department officials in Washington admitted that the exhibitors' protests against the clause, lodged last week at formal hearings (MOTION PICTURE HERALD, September 7, page 12), had been laid before the "Big Five" defendants who are to sign the decree, but gave no indication that they were prepared to compromise the issue.

Giving effect to the protests voiced at the hearings, exhibitor organizations, led by the MPTOA, Allied of New York and the New York ITOA, this week rushed to poll every exhibitor in the country for his opinion, in time to use the "evidence" in intervention when the Government and the defendants present the decree to the Federal Court in New York for approval—the presentation to be made by October 7th, the deadline before trial.

Arnold Reported Firm

Meanwhile, Thurman Arnold, assistant attorney general, was represented in Washington this week as feeling that the five-picture block represents the best possible solution of the block booking problem, that it disposes of exhibitor complaints of forced season buying and of the distributors' contention that single sales would be economically impossible.

Convinced of this, it was said, there is little likelihood that he will be moved by the exhibitors' objections, and there also appears to be a feeling in the Department that some of the showmen are a little unreasonable, in that the five-film block is merely experimental and can be eliminated if it is found unworkable.

On the other hand, Edward R. Kuykendall, MPTOA president, intimated he was not satisfied with the Department's position, and there is no doubt that some of the exhibitor organizations which were represented at last week's general meeting will take advantage of the Department's invitation to go into court next month and tell Federal Judge Goddard about it when the decree is presented for court approval.

Some changes are expected to be made in the proposals before they are whipped into shape for formal presentation to the court, but Department representatives refused to hazard a guess as to what they would be. It is not expected, however, that they will change the proposals in any of their important aspects, although even that may occur if someone has some acceptable idea as to how some of the present friction between the principals may be eliminated.

Congressional Action Rumored

Meanwhile, there were suggestions in Washington of a move to make the five-picture block the rule for the entire industry by Congressional action. Reports were heard at the Capital that if Congress is still in session when the consent decree is adopted, the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee will be asked to amend the now-sleeping Neely anti-block-booking bill to conform. Thus, the five-film block would be made applicable to the "Little Three" companies not parties to the consent decree.

These reports brought up the point that Allied States, which appears not to oppose the five-picture block, will remain in a good strategical position, where it can revive the Neely bill, which it sponsored, next session, if it appears desirable to make further changes in the selling practices of the industry. It is pointed out that if the decree provisions prove unsatisfactory, Congress can readily deal with the matter. There is, of course, nothing in a court action to prevent Congress enacting any legislation it deems desirable.

The most important consent decree development of the week in Washington was the evidence of great weariness with the case on the part of Department officials, some of whom have spent many months in an effort to bring it to a conclusion. The Department undisguisedly is anxious to settle the matter, and some of its officials believe that all branches of the industry are equally eager to dispose of the controversy.

"Final" Draft in Work

While exhibitors this week were pushing their protests against the blocks of five provision, attorneys for the Government and the "Big Five" defendants were working on the "final" draft of the consent decree.

Representatives of both sides hope to put the proposals agreed on "in principle" in legal form within a week so that the decree may be submitted for the final decision of both Thurman Arnold and Robert Jackson, Attorney General.

On Tuesday the decree drafting committee met at the New York office of Donovan, Newton, Leisure & Lumbard, counsel for RKO. The committee includes: for the Government, Robert Sher and Robert L. Wright; for the defendants, Robert Perkins, Warner Brothers; Ralston Irvine, RKO; Fred Pride, Twentieth Century-Fox; Bertram Shipman, National Theatres; Louis Phillips, Paramount, and Stanley Thompson, Loew's, Inc.

The principal work is putting the clauses in legal language. One exception is the arbitration section since some work must still be done on the arbitration machinery.

Officials of the American Arbitration Association and attorneys for the "Big Five" have resumed discussions of procedure on arbitration to be followed under the decree.

The Department contemplates that the consent decree be in effect for three years, allowing for revisions at any time, based on changes recommended by anyone signing the document. The first year would be experimental, and at the end of that period both sides would confer on recasting parts found unworkable or otherwise in need of attention.

The Government is preparing to amend its original bill of complaint to embrace all that is covered in the decree and to eliminate any conflict between the two. The amended complaint may continue to include Columbia, United Artists and Universal, the holdouts, or the Government may file a separate complaint against those companies.

The escape clause in the pending decree now puts the burden of proving block-booking and blind buying illegal on the Government since this is what it will have to prove against the so-called "Little Three" within nine months after the decree becomes effective or the block-of-five and advance trade showing provisions become null and void, according to a Government spokesman.

New Units Add Protests

Adding to the numerous exhibitor organization protests already filed against the blocks-of-five clause were those filed this week by Northwest Allied and Allied Theatres Owners of Iowa-Nebraska.

The former telegraphed Attorney General Jackson charges that the clause would create "chaos" in the industry, asserting that independents' opposition to it was "unalterable." The clause, the telegram added, "will multiply and increase block booking evils, increase film rentals, prevent elimination of undesirable pictures, and work extreme hardships and penalties on the small independent exhibitors scattered throughout the Northwest at great distances from Minneapolis distributors' headquarters."

The Iowa-Nebraska exhibitors suggested substitution of cancellation, with minimums of ten, 15, and 20 per cent. The unit called the blocks-of-five clause "disastrous."

Max A. Cohen, New York Allied leader and circuit owner, at his offices in the New Amsterdam building Thursday, September 5th, declared he would "fight by law" to prevent the Department of Justice from settling the trust suit by any decree which embodies selling in blocks of five.

The legal battle would be an intervention at the hearing on October 7th, before Federal Judge Goddard, and the intervention, he said, would be based on his poll of 13,000 exhibitors, which Mr. Cohen began this week.

Mr. Cohen added that he had asked the sales managers and executives of the major companies, by telegram, to aid in securing cancellation privileges, rather than the blocks-of-five provision.

Mr. Cohen protested the treatment accorded

LEGAL STATUS OF INTERVENTION CITED

Allied States of New York, Wednesday night, issued the following statement, giving the opinion of Jacob Schechter, New York attorney, on the rights of exhibitors in intervening in the consent decree settlement:

"In our opinion motion picture exhibitors have the right to intervene in the pending equity suit brought by the United States against the leading motion picture producers and distribtors for violation of the anti-trust laws.

"We feel that valuable rights of the exhibitors will be adversely affected by certain provisions of the proposed consent decree, and unless an opinion is afforded to the exhibitors by way of intervention in the pending suit, to be heard in support of their claims, and in defense of their rights, they will be divested of such rights without due process of law."

No other official opinion or method of procedure of intervention has been as yet outlined by the Department of Justice or attorneys.

exhibitors at the Department of Justice hearing last week. He said he and other exhibitor leaders, had not been given sufficient time to present their views. He added that, in his opinion, the Department chiefs had not listened carefully, either.

It was understood that Mr. Cohen's legal advice had been that consent of the Department was not necessary for intervention.

Kuykendall Starts Poll

The results of another protest made by Mr. Kuykendall to Mr. Arnold, in Washington, Tuesday on the exhibitors' opposition to the block-of-five clause were not disclosed. Meanwhile, Mr. Kuykendall started to poll members of the MPTOA executive committee on their views, as a statement sent out over his signature, charged that 98 per cent of exhibitors in the country were opposed to the clause.

Mr. Kuykendall, following his conference with Mr. Arnold, declined to comment but said that he agreed "for the first time," with Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur of the Motion Picture Research Council, who protested to Attorney General Jackson against acceptance of the proposed consent decree with its provision for block-of-five bookings.

The course to be followed by the MPTOA in case the Government fails to alter the provision, will depend upon the result of the Kuykendall poll.

"There must be a cancellation privilege if the decree is to be acceptable to the theatre owners of this country," Mr. Kuykendall said in his statement, "and while I have no authority to say so, it is my opinion that the distributors themselves would accept a reasonable cancellation privilege, so that the exhibitor could buy in sufficient quantities and yet be protected by cancellations."

The ITOA of New York held a meeting Wednesday at the Hotel Astor, when objections to various provisions of the proposed consent decree were discussed. All exhibitors, whether members or not, were invited.

The ITOA is also seeking exhibitor opinion on the block-of-five provision. A ballot asks exhibitors to express their preferences on the question: "I prefer buying in blocks of five or not buying in blocks of five."

In referring to this phase of the question, the independent group stated, "The ITOA is on record with Thurman Arnold, that this provision is against the best interests of independent exhibitors, that it should be eliminated and in its place should be substituted a cancellation privilege of sufficient scope to allow the buying of pictures in block and still give exhibitors a modicum of safety in allowing them to pass up those pictures they do not want."

The results of the poll will be forwarded to the Department of Justice.

Harry Brandt's ITO on Wednesday voted full powers to a committee, to take "affirmative action" to prevent adoption of the selling-of-pictures-in-blocks-of-five. On the committee are Mr. Brandt, Leo Brecher, and Milton C. Weisman.

Settle Milgram-Warner Trust Suit Out of Court

David Milgram's $110,000 anti-trust suit against the Warner Philadelphia houses and the major distributors was to be settled out of court in that city this week. Morris Wolf, Warner attorney, confirming the settlement report, said "All that remains is reducing to terms that which we have discussed."

Mr. Milgram, head of the independent Affiliated Circuit, filed suit last March. Hearings were scheduled to begin in Federal Court the week of September 30th. It revolved about the zoning arrangements of the Warners' Bromley and Grange theatres and Mr. Milgram's Walton and Rialto theatres.

The rumored settlement terms call for reception of product by the Affiliated houses one day after Warners', and for an Affiliated suburban house formerly getting half of Twentieth Century-Fox product, to get all.

The Milgram case was the first of four local anti-trust actions to reach court stage this season. Three are still unlisted. They are the suit by the Carman Theatre, filed two years ago, since which time it has gone into receivership; that by Henry Friedman, operator of the Lansdowne Theatre, who filed last November, for $150,000 damages; and that by the Harub Amusement Corporation, operators of the Admiral Theatre, which filed last January, for $225,000 triple damages.

Action on Crescent Trust Case Believed Near

Hearing of the government anti-trust suit against Crescent Amusement Company affiliated exhibitors, and 11 film distributors is believed near following the filing on Friday, September 6th, of the defendants' answer to all charges, and a request for dismissal. Judge Elmer Davies of the U. S. District Court is expected to set an early date.

In addition to a blanket denial of all other allegations made against it in the suit filed on August 11, 1939, Crescent Amusement Co., in the answer, denied affiliation with the Lyric, Strand, Cumberland, Enterprise, Rockwood, Cherokee, and Kentucky exhibitors' combines in Tennessee and Kentucky, and with the Muscle Shoals Theatres, Inc., of Alabama, to the extent of operation and control; admitting only that Tony Sudekum, president of Crescent Amusement Co., and, in some cases, his associate, K. C. Stengel, own "50 per cent or less voting stock" in the various combines.

Crescent and its affiliates, with the 11 distributor defendants, asked complete dismissal of the suit, denying the following charges: "That for five years the defendant exhibitors continuously combined with each other and with each of the defendant distributors unreasonably to restrain interstate trade and commerce in motion picture films and to monopolize and to attempt to monopolize the exhibition of motion pictures and the operation of motion picture theatres in Crescent towns and in other towns of Tennessee, Alabama, Kentucky, Arkansas, and Mississippi in violation of Section 1 and 2 of the Sherman Act * * * ."

Defendants listed in the answer filed Friday were: Crescent Amusement Co., Lyric Amusement Co., Inc., Nu-Strand Corporation, Cumberland Amusement Co., Strand Enterprises, Inc., Rockwood Aumsements, Inc., Cherokee Amusements, Inc., Kentucky Amusement Co., and Anthony Sudekum, R. E. Baulch, and Kermit C. Stengel.

RKO Answers in Schine Trust Case

RKO last week filed answers to the charges by the Government, in the anti-trust action in Buffalo Federal Court against the Schine circuit, affiliated interests and the majors. It was the tenth defendant answer.

Like the others, it denied violation of the Sherman anti-trust act, and, in substance, followed the reasoning of other answers. The RKO answer also seeks dismissal of the suit.

Two weeks ago, among others, Universal and Schine answered; and the latter setting a separate defense, alleged that the Government complaint failed to state a claim upon which relief could be granted against the defendants, because it failed to state facts sufficient to constitute a cause for action.

Answers of most companies contended that the Federal Court lacked jurisdiction because the Government did not prove that any of the defendant companies were in interstate commerce.

Particulars Denied to Majors in South Dakota

The Minnesota Amusement Company, Wellworth Theatres, and the majors have been denied a bill of particulars in the $523,000 anti-trust case against them by a Sioux Falls, South Dakota theatre owner, Arthur Johnson. The denial was issued in Deadwood Federal Court, that state, by Judge A. Lee Wyman.

Mr. Johnson sued in May, charging a combine of the defendants to force him from business in Sioux Falls and Aberdeen.

Cassil Suit Hearing Expected Monday

The preliminary hearing on the suit by Frank and Eugenia Cassil of the Rialto, St. Joseph, Missouri, against the majors and the Dubinsky Brothers circuit, will be heard next Monday in Kansas City Federal Court. The Cassils are suing for almost $500,000 under the anti-trust laws.

The anti-trust suit of Frank Koppelberger, of LaCrosse, Wisconsin, against United Artists, Twentieth Century-Fox, Paramount, Minnesota Amusement Company, and the Wellworth Theatres circuit, is scheduled for trial this month at Madison, capital of the state. Mr. Koppelberger, charging a conspiracy to drive him from business, seeks $1,050,000 triple damages.

Warners' Golf Tournament

Some 200 golfers from Warner Brothers employees and guests were to turn out for the Warner Club's annual golf tournament at Old Oaks Country Club, Purchase, N. Y., Thursday.

Carl Leserman, assistant general sales manager, was master of ceremonies at the dinner following the tournament. Fifty prizes were awarded.

ARNOLD WRITES ABOUT TRADE RESTRICTIONS

Thurman W. Arnold, assistant attorney general of the U. S. and head of the Department of Justice's anti-trust division, discusses what he considers restraints of trade, including block-booking of motion pictures, in his book, "The Bottlenecks of Business", a review of which appears on page 24.

The chief reference to the film industry by Mr. Arnold is the statement, "The moving picture cartel grew up under government neglect; it is going to take years of expensive litigation and loss to stockholders to straighten it out."

Most of "The Bottlenecks of Business" is devoted to an explanation of the Sherman Act and to situations where Mr. Arnold feels it should be applied.

WAR BOOMS BUSINESS AT CANADIAN THEATRES

Naval, Air and Army Bases in Nova Scotia, New Brunswick Increase Attendance

War activities are responsible for increased business at the theatres in the cities and towns used as army, air force and naval bases on Canada's Atlantic coast.

Boom in Halifax

Topping the list is Halifax, N. S., where all of the local theatres are participating in a decided boom. Halifax is the only convoy base for steamers from Canada and the United States, bound for the British Isles, and is Canadian naval headquarters for both the Canadian and British fleets. It is also the first outpost in the Canadian army and air force defense, and a record garrison is being maintained in both artillery and infantry. Theatres in Halifax are the Capitol, Orpheus, Family, Community, Oxford, Casino and Gaiety.

Across the harbor from Halifax is Dartmouth, site of an air force base. Business at the Mayfair and Dundas has increased considerably. At Kentville, N. S., there is a suburban army camp of about 3,000 men, who are being trained for overseas duty and they have provided heavy business for the local theatre.

At Moncton, N. B., 27 new buildings are being erected for a new training base for the air force and seven buildings for an army camp. About 2,500 men are at work on these projects and when they are completed about 5,000 men in the air force and army will be stationed there. The Capitol, Empress and Imperial are doing capacity business and a new theatre is to be built.

In St. John, N. B., there is an army training base and a minor naval depot plus a minor air force station. Conditions at the theatres—Capitol, Mayfair, Strand, Empire, Regent, Community, Gaiety—have been improved but not nearly to the extent prevailing in the sister city of Halifax.

A new army training centre is being established at Fredericton, N. B., which is expected to be highly beneficial to the Gaiety and Capitol theatres. At Sussex, N. B., a permanent camp is being erected and will be used for winter as well as summer soldiering. The lone theatre is expected to reap a harvest.

At Amherst, Truro, Pictou, in Nova Scotia: Chatham, Woodstock, Campbellton, Edmundston, St. Stephen, in New Brunswick; Charlottetown, on Prince Edward Island, army camps have been established on small scales and the soldiers have helped theatre business at all local theatres.

A new air force base has been established at Yarmouth, N. S., and new airports are being built at Pictou and Lebert in Nova Scotia; Chatham in New Brunswick, and Summerside on Prince Edward Island. An air base of minor type prevails at North Sydney, N. S.

In addition to the construction and equipping and occupancy of the army, navy and air force bases, contracts for war materials have been and are being executed in Halifax, St. John, Moncton, Amherst, Truro, Fredericton, Campbellton, Windsor, Dartmouth, Sydney and Glace Bay. All contribute importantly to the improved patronage at the theatres in these centers.

Shows in Army Camps

The local theatres, however, do not draw all the men for soldiers' theatres have been established in military camps all over Canada with 22 of them being operated by the YMCA, which has installed 22 modern projection machines and has enrolled the services of 22 licensed operators. The Knights of Columbus and the Canadian Legion also are playing a big part in providing film shows for the Dominion's soldiers.

The Canadian film industry and the soldiers' organizations are cooperating in this work on behalf of the men through a special committee of which two of the leading officials are N. L. Nathanson, president of Famous Players and Colonel John A. Cooper, president of the Motion Picture Distributors and Exhibitors of Canada.

Red Cross Drive

The Canadian Motion Picture War Services Committee, sponsored by the Canadian Picture Pioneers, will participate in the Canadian Red Cross drive to raise a $5,000,000 fund. The drive starts September 23rd. Theatres will provide lobby facilities for the receipt of Red Cross subscriptions from patrons, and in addition will work in close cooperation with local Red Cross societies.

The Red Cross campaign enlistment is the second film industry contribution to Canada's war effort. In the first, 977 theatres raised $716,014.35 through the sale of war savings stamps and certificates.

To Erect Hospitals

The Canadian Government plans to erect hospitals and convalescent homes across the entire Dominion and the industry's committee will concentrate its efforts toward raising funds for this particular purpose.

Plans have been laid for a big rodeo in Toronto in November by the committee to raise war funds. The event will probably be staged in the large Coliseum of the Canadian National Exhibition, subject to the permission of the military authorities who are making use of the arena for army training.

The main attraction is to be Gene Autry, Republic western star, who has consented to making a personal appearance as a contribution to the cause, the date of the show having been fixed in November to enable Autry to make the trip to Toronto without cancelling any of his regular bookings.

Trailer on Bond Issue

Canadian exhibitors have been asked to cooperate with the Government by exhibiting trailers for the new three per cent Government bonds offered to the public.

Three young British actors of Hollywood, Patric Knowles, Colin Tapley and Robert Coots, have enlisted in Toronto in the lowest rank of the Canadian air force.

Colonel Cooper and his family are doing their full share in the war effort, three sons already officers in the Canadian Active Service Force.

Paramount Meets In Kansas City

Both Barney Balaban, president of Paramount Pictures, and Y. Frank Freeman, vice-president in charge of studio operations, attended a two-day district sales managers' meeting at the Muelbach Hotel in Kansas City Wednesday and Thursday. Neil F. Agnew, sales manager, presided.

Mr. Agnew called this special meeting to decide the company's sales policy on Cecil DeMille's new "North West Mounted Police." Reactions from division and district managers as well as home office executives were to determine whether this production will be roadshowed or distributed with increased admission proviso. Others on hand were Robert M. Gillham, G. B. J. Frawley, Charles Reagan, Oscar Morgan, J. J. Unger, M. S. Kusell and Alec Moss.

District managers attending included: W. H. Erbb, Boston; H. H. Goldstein, Cleveland; H. W. Braly, Dallas; G. A. Smith, Los Angeles; Allen Usher, Indianapolis; M. A. Milligan, Toronto, and R. C. LiBeau, in Kansas City. Also, eight exploiteers: Clinton Bolton, Atlanta; William Brooker, Philadelphia and Washington; Don Chambers, Boston; J. M. Joice, Cleveland; Jack Daily, Dallas; Ralph Ravenscroft, Los Angeles; C. Krueger, Chicago, and Bill Lansburg, who covers Kansas City.

The final day of the session on Thursday the sales executives viewed some finished product. In this group of pictures, in addition to "North West Mounted Police," were "Christmas in July," co-starring Dick Powell and Ellen Drew; "Arise, My Love," starring Claudette Colbert with Ray Milland; "There's Magic in Music" with Allan Jones and Susanne Foster; and partially completed versions of "Second Chorus," starring Fred Astaire and Artie Shaw and his orchestra, the Jack Benny-Fred Allan release, "Love Thy Neighbor" and "Cherokee Strip," starring Richard Dix with Florence Rice.

They also were to see "World in Flames," documentary newsreel feature of nine reels, to decide whether it should be released now.

Young Hits Exhibitors; Quits ITOA Post

Because of the inability or unwillingness of independent exhibitors to face common issue with a united front, E. S. Young, who operates the Central Theatre, Kansas City, announced, this week, that he was resigning as president of the Independent Theatres Owners Association for Kansas City.

The ITOA recently reorganized after a long period of inactivity.

Riotous Theatre Protest

A race riot followed the replacement, this week, of a Negro theatre manager by a white, at an Elizabeth City, North Carolina, theatre.

PARAMOUNT FIRST FILM STUDIO TO TURN TO TELEVISION PRODUCTION

DuMont Transmitter Ordered for Lot in Hollywood; CBS Color System Criticized by Competitors as Impractical

Paramount Pictures becomes the first motion picture company to follow the suggestion made by James L. Fly, Federal Communications Commission chairman, two weeks ago that film studios experiment with television production. A special mobile television outfit for studio use has been ordered by Paramount from the Allen B. DuMont Laboratories, television affiliate. This is in addition to the regular television station for Los Angeles to be operated by Television Productions, Inc., Paramount company, and also equipped with a DuMont transmitter.

Meanwhile color television, shown to the press last week by the Columbia Broadcasting System, has further confused the television outlook, with the commission chairman indicating that the CBS development might delay the selection of definite standards and commercial operations. Representatives of CBS competitive television companies expressed disappointment in the color system, holding that it is old and not practical at this time.

Theatre Television Predicted

Theatre television, starting some time in the coming year, was predicted by Ralph Beal, head of the Radio Corporation of America's research department. Other companies, including Dumont, Baird and Scophony, also are working on large screen television, to be suitable for use in theatres. Present indications are that theatre television, at least at first, will have to be exclusively black and white, because color requires so much light, it was said.

Color television will be carefully considered when the time comes to pass on commercial operation, desired by most companies to help finance developments according to Mr. Fly. He added that it was too early to say whether color television would reach such a state by the time the question of standards is considered.

Mr. Fly explained that to receive color, television sets must be equipped with a motor and a revolving color disc, but that the ordinary television set can pick up such pictures in black and white. He could not say, however, whether this factor would be an influence in giving television the "go-ahead" signal in advance of color perfection.

Commission members believe that color and other recent developments in television, which later this month they expect to see demonstrated in various laboratories, demonstrate the wisdom of the action in rescinding orders which would have permitted commercial operation beginning September 1st. Had those orders not been repealed, Mr. Fly declared, the industry today might be frozen at a point far short of the perfection which is expected to be attained when standards are officially adopted.

Television interests, outside the FCC, were not so enthusiastic this week about the CBS color television. The work had been carried on for some months in secret and after the announcement was made and Mr. Fly praised the results some observers thought that perhaps Dr. Peter C. Goldmark, CBS chief television engineer, had found a new system which would make color television practical at this time.

Color television, it was generally admitted, is a goal which must be sought and ultimately reached to develop the possibilities of the medium. But, television engineers with competitive interests, pointed out privately this week that the CBS system was fundamentally the oldest and simplest color method and was well-known for years.

The results in the CBS color television demonstration were considered very good, as reported in last week's issue of MOTION PICTURE ties, it was said, make color television impractical at present. According to experts the prospects of color television in motion picture theatres are quite remote.

Color film can be transmitted by television and received in small pictures at the present time, the principal limitation being extra cost. It was said that live talent shows, though predicted by CBS for the end of this year, are not possible because the light necessary for color television could not be endured by performers.

Color Deprecated

Allen B. DuMont said that while color television was an ultimate goal, black and white presented enough problems at the present time. The CBS color development introduced no new principles and does not seem to have commercial importance at present on account of cost and other facts, he added.

The DuMont receivers, he said, since they are flexible, received a black and white picture when the CBS color tests were made. But he remarked that the quality of the black and white pictures was not good. Mr. DuMont would not predict whether the CBS color announcement would delay the work of the industry television committee in setting standards.

Paramount has ordered a television outfit which will use a wire hookup for its studio in Hollywood, Mr. DuMont said. "I do not know just what they will use it for," he remarked. But he added that it could be set up on a set and the producer or other executives could see what was happening from the office.

Mr. DuMont said that work was progressing at a rapid rate on the New York studio and equipment was also being made for the Chicago, Los Angeles and Washington stations. The Chicago station will be operated by Balaban & Katz. Within a short time tests will be made from the site of the New York station, atop 515 Madison Avenue. This week a pole was added to the tower above the 42nd story of the building and the antenna of a 50-watt transmitter will be set up on the pole for the tests. The 1,000 watt station will be finished in about a month and then a month or so will be used for tests.

Sees No Conflict with Screen

Mr. Beal of the RCA research department predicted that although television would use many of the motion picture's technical advantages the screen would stay ahead of television for many years to come. He believes that ultimately there will be two classes of television service, one for theatres and the other for homes. Programs could be sent to theatres on frequencies not used for home receivers or over special telephone wires. RCA is continuing its work on large screen television designed for theatres but Mr. Beal would not say when it will be ready.

Gerald Cook, North American representative of the British Broadcasting Corporation, after seeing the demonstration of CBS color television said, "If television broadcasting had been launched in color, it would now be a universal medium of entertainment and instruction, occupying a position comparable to that of present-day radio. It is understatement to say that Columbia's color television is 'astounding.' It is a miracle! The effect is stereoscopic and crystalline in clarity."

No Plans in Chicago

Elmer C. Upton, assistant auditor for Paramount in the Balaban & Katz offices in Chicago and Paramount's television head in that city, said no plans had been made for any television studio or a site selected up to this time. The FCC has extended to October 2nd the date for filing information about Balaban & Katz' television plans. The call letters of the station will be W9XBE. William Eddy, chief television engineer, has arrived in Chicago to begin preliminary work on the television station.

The Allen B. DuMont Laboratories has applied for full membership in the Radio Manufacturers Association. Mr. Fly at his press conference on Monday said that the application had been filed and the Association reported that action has not yet been taken. The RMA had sponsored the television standards of 30 frames, 441 lines, used by RCA-NBC but their stand was attacked by the DuMont company which has insisted on flexible standards.

CBS PATENTS ASSIGNED TO MARKIA SUBSIDIARY

Peter C. Goldmark, chief television engineer for the Columbia Broadcasting System, who developed the CBS color television, assigned a patent granted him last month on a system which combines sound, television and facsimile broadcasting and reception to the Markia Corporation of New York City. Markia, to which presumably the color television patent would be assigned, if and when granted, was identified this week as a wholly owned subsidiary of CBS.

The principal television patents in this country are reported to be held by the Radio Corporation of America, the Allen B. DuMont Laboratories, Philco Farnsworth and a few others.

COAST ACTORS BOLT LABOR COUNCIL; AFL OPENS NEW MEMBERSHIP DRIVE

Threatening Musicians' Fight and Buzzell Reelection Reported To Be Factors in Withdrawal; Nick-Weston Trial Started

For the second time in a year, and apparently climaxing a long planned move to wrest actors' unions from the power of the American Federation of Labor, the Screen Actors Guild last week withdrew from the Los Angeles Central Labor Council.

At the same time, the AFL moved to consolidate its position in Hollywood by the appointment of Aubrey Blair to organize an estimated 9,000 industry workers, mostly on the coast, who do not belong to the Federation. Mr. Blair said these workers would be inducted into present internationals whose jurisdiction applied, and that new locals might be formed.

Music Fight Is Factor

No official reason was given for the withdrawal but it was reported in Hollywood that Guild leaders were dissatisfied with the reelection of J. W. Buzzell as Council's executive secretary. It was said early this week that the move also might be a reflection of concern by the Guild and other actors' units over the possible consequences of the fight between the American Federation of Musicians and the American Guild of Musical Artists.

That fight, which started when James C. Petrillo, Music Federation president, ordered instrumentalists of the Guild to join his Federation by Labor Day "or else," affects the screen actors' union because both are members of the parent actors' union, the Associated Actors and Artistes of America.

It is reported that Guild leaders fear the fight will reach the floor of a forthcoming AFL convention and that, even with all actors' union support, the Four A's might lose.

All Four A's unions may not support the Actors' Guild in leaving the AFL, it is indicated. The American Guild of Variety Artists and the Actors' Equity, both strong Four A's unions, may oppose inasmuch as both depend for organizational and operative efficiency upon the cooperation of other AFL unions.

The first withdrawal of the Actors' Guild from the Los Angeles Central Labor Council occurred late last year, when the Council supported Bioff's fight against extradition from California to serve a Chicago jail term.

The Music Guild's application in New York supreme court for a permanent injunction to stay Mr. Petrillo from barring Guild members from employment on radio, in concert halls, and on recordings was scheduled for Thursday, September 5th, and then was postponed to September 17th, at Mr. Petrillo's request. At that time, it will be heard by Justice Aaron Steuer, son of the late Max D. Steuer.

In New York last week, Local 802, largest in the AFM, went on record as upholding Mr. Petrillo.

Nick-Weston Trial Starts

The trial for violation of the Sherman antitrust and the Federal anti-racketeering laws of John P. "Big" Nick and Clyde Weston, deposed president and business agent, respectively, of the St. Louis projectionists' union, Local 143, began on Monday in that city's Federal Court, before Judge Caskie Collet. More than 100 witnesses are to be called by the Government, which secured the 57-page indictment through a Federal Grand Jury in June. The indictment lists 12 charges relating to negotiations of the two men with city theatre owners during 1937 wage talks.

First witnesses were local exchange managers. Robert Thomsen, business manager of the local, took the stand Tuesday, testifying the two men had ruled "with an iron hand," and tracing wage negotiations.

Nick has been suffering from arthritis and has been at Hot Springs, Arkansas, for treatment several times since his virtual retirement from union affairs. Weston has been working in an Illinois town as an operator.

Bioff Ends Jail Term

Still the leader of the Coast IATSE, and of the Conference of American Federation of Labor Studio Unions, Willie Bioff was scheduled to emerge this week from Chicago's Bridewell Jail. He will have served approximately six months of the prison term originally pronounced in 1922, for pandering. He faces trial, probably in Los Angeles Federal Court next month, on an indictment charging him with evasion of Federal incomes taxes.

In Scranton, Pennsylvania, the petition of a local CIO operators' union for a discontinuance of a temporary injunction which restrained its members from picketing Comerford-Publix theatres was denied last week by Judge William Leach.

Herb Fox has been reelected president of the Philadelphia projectionists' Local 516. Kem Young is treasurer, and Al O'Donnell, secretary.

Cincinnati operators and theatre owners last week reached a wage agreement, after several weeks negotiation. The contract is for three years and is retroactive to September 1st.

A two-day strike of Providence and Cranston, Rhode Island, projectionists against the Empire and Bijou theatres in the former city and the Park and Palace, in the latter, was settled last week. A dispute over back wages was resolved, and a new contract signed.

Actors Guild Meets Sunday

Class A members of the Screen Actors Guild will convene Sunday, September 15th, at the Hollywood Women's Club, 7078 Hollywood Boulevard, for their annual meeting and election.

Matters to be discussed will include the industry's adjustment to economic conditions caused by the war and to the federal consent decree, and public relations, such as the use of actors' names in connection with charges of subversive radical activities.

Frank Morgan, who served as guild president for three terms—he was the first president, in 1933, and was elected again in 1939 and reelected in 1940, is retiring as president but has accepted a nomination for another three-year term on the board of directors.

Edward Arnold has been nominated by the guild nominating committee to succeed Mr. Morgan.

Other nominees of the committee were: First vice-president, George Murphy; second vice-president, Paul Harvey; third vice-president, Walter Abel; recording secretary, Lucile Gleason; treasurer, Porter Hall; directors, Mr. Morgan, Lucile Gleason, Russell Hicks, Boris Karloff, Claude King, Robert Strange, Roy Gordon, Tim Holt, Louis Jean Heydt, Heather Angel and Lydia Westman.

Three Networks Face Strike by Artists After Union Negotiations Collapse

National, Columbia and Mutual broadcasting systems in midweek faced their most serious labor trouble of all—a strike by the 10,500 air performers and announcers of the American Federation of Radio Artists, whose representatives and those of the networks were unable to negotiate a new contract for all sustaining programs to repalce the one which expired Thursday.

Mrs. Emily Holt, executive secretary of the union, and George Heller, associate executive secretary, expected their members would ratify a strike vote at meetings in New York on Thursday and in Chicago, Los Angeles and San Francisco on Friday.

A spokesman for the broadcasters said pay increases averaging 20 per cent had been offered to the union, and that the companies did not see "why that isn't enough."

Lawrence W. Lowman, vice-president of Columbia, and Mark Woods, vice-president of NBC, represented the broadcasters at Monday's meeting. An informal committee from the advertising agencies, whose contract with the union for commercial programs does not expire until Feb. 12, 1941, attended.

Actors Equity, in New York, Tuesday voted full support to the AFRA in "any action" taken.

Intending to pay more attention to labor conditions in the radio industry, the Federal Communications Commission has appointed Sidney B. Spear, formerly assistant to the legal adviser for the U. S. State Department, as attorney specializing in employment and labor problems.

While labor problems heretofore have been the sole concern of Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, FCC officials have come to the conclusion that some of these matters may have a bearing on licenses and have decided that it would be necessary to set up a special small unit to deal with them.

MAJORS EXTEND PLANS FOR SPECIAL FIELD HANDLING OF NEW PRODUCT

"Northwest Police" Will Open in Chicago October 25th after Canadian Premiere; Warners, Goldwyn Announce Plans

"Howards" in Philadelphia

More than 1,500 persons, including Frank Lloyd, Martha Scott, exhibitors and circuit executives from the territory covered by the Philadelphia branch, and members of the press attended a special trade showing of the Frank Lloyd-Columbia "The Howards of Virginia" at the Carmen theatre, Philadelphia, Sunday, September 8th. Harry Weiner, branch manager, and the exchange sales force, were hosts.

The production had its world premiere at the State, Byrd, Westhampton and Capitol in Richmond, Va., September 4th as reported on page 33 in MOTION PICTURE HERALD last week.

"Northwest" American Premiere

The American premiere of "Northwest Mounted Police" at the Chicago theatre, Chicago, October 25th, will follow by four days the world premiere of the film at Regina, Canada.

Cecil B. DeMille, producer of the film, and members of the cast, which is headed by Gary Cooper, Madeleine Carroll and Paulette Goddard, will attend the Chicago opening, and will be broadcast over station WGN.

National exhibition policy for the film, including the possibility of several roadshow engagements, was to be decided at a meeting of Paramount district and division managers Wednesday and Thursday in Kansas City.

"Dreaming" in Arkansas

The RKO Radio release "Dreaming Out Loud," starring Lum 'n' Abner, had state wide premieres in Arkansas the week of September 5th. In the week the film opened at seven theatres in four cities, Little Rock, Hot Springs, Fort Smith and Mena.

In Little Rock Lum 'n' Abner made personal appearances Friday, September 6th, being greeted by some 2,000 persons on their arrival at the airport. The arrival was broadcast by station KGHI. Governor Bailey and Mayor Satterfield proclaimed the occasion Lum 'n' Abner Day and the Governor held a reception for the stars which was attended by C. G. Hall, secretary of state; Judge S. M. Barney, executive secretary to the Governor; Earl Page, state treasurer; Otis Page, state land commissioner; county and city officials and the press, totaling 125 persons.

The Chamber of Commerce tendered a luncheon with 350 persons in attendance headed by the Governor, Mayor, and prominent guests including RKO Radio branch managers Al Avery, T. R. Thompson and C. W. Allen; theatre owners, including John Rowley, Max Pruniski and Ralph Noble and producer, Jack Votion.

Republic Autry Contest

Republic is planning a promotion in connection with the personal appearance of Gene Autry with the World Championship Rodeo at Madison Square Garden, New York, October 9th to 27th.

In this promotion all theatres in the New York area playing Gene Autry attractions within the designated weeks, will be allowed to sponsor a contest for boys and girls, the winners to meet the cowboy star and be his guest

Morris Epstein, New York exchange manager, estimates that there will be over 400 theatres active in this promotion, which was set up by Dave Whalen, home office publicity director.

$400,000 for "Pride"

Although "Pride and Prejudice," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, could have been held over for a fifth week at the Radio City Music Hall, since the film grossed $96,000 for the fourth week, MGM agreed to withdraw it in order that the theatre could alleviate its booking situation.

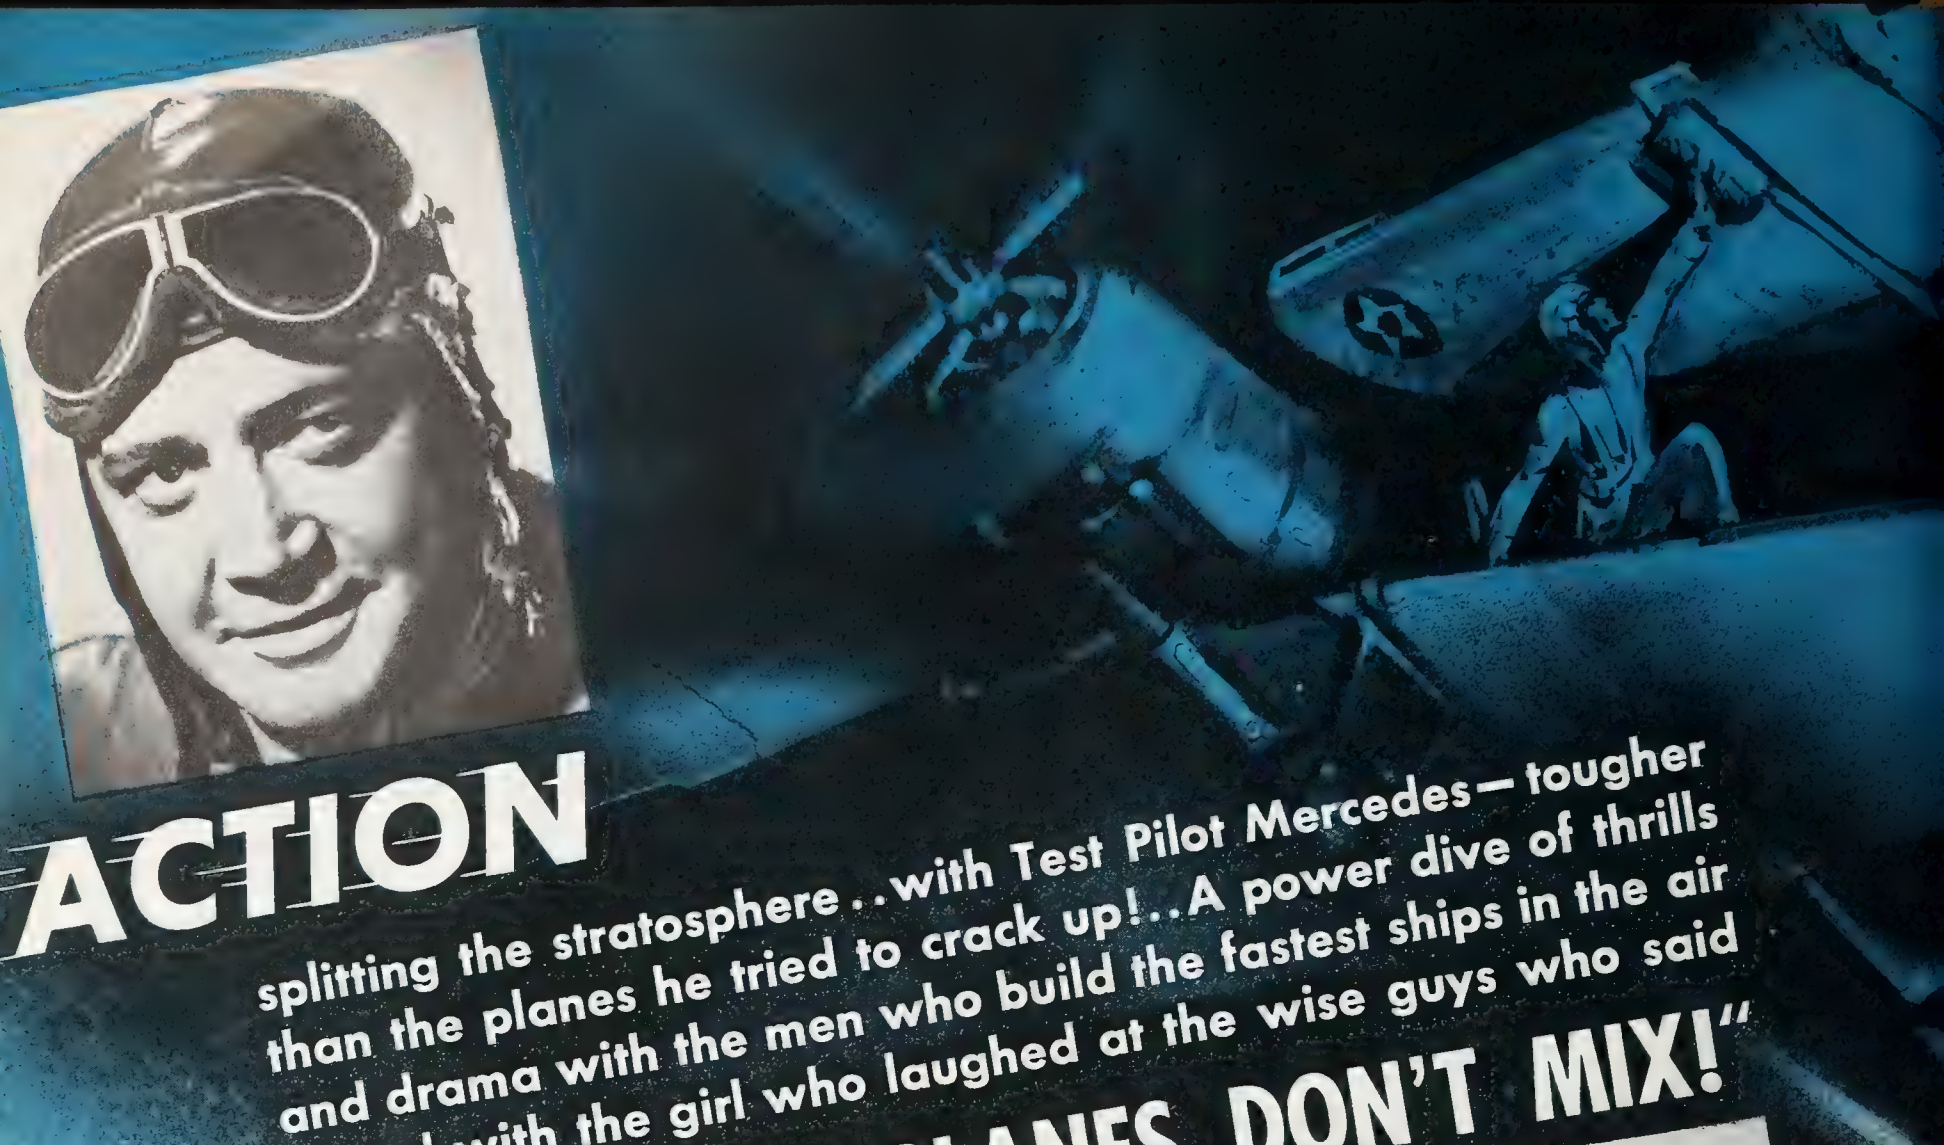
The picture grossed almost $400,000 in its four weeks at the Music Hall. The only other pictures to play more than three weeks at the theatre were "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," "Rebecca" and "All This, and Heaven Too."

"Sea Hawk" Gross

For the first time in the history of the theatre, the New York Strand had the largest single days' business of a holdover engagement in the final week, when "The Sea Hawk" grossed more last Sunday, September 8th, than on any previous Sunday in its four week run, according to Warners. The film grossed a total of $185,000 for the four week period.

"No Time for Comedy," the Warner film based on the S. N. Behrman stage success, will open in 237 simultaneous engagements the week beginning Saturday.

"Correspondent" Record



The Walter Wanger production "Foreign Correspondent" has been playing to holdover business in practically every city in which it has opened, following its world premiere in New York's Rivoli theatre, where it grossed nearly $55,000 in its first week to establish a five year record. Holdover business was reported from Loew's theatre, Rochester; Loew's State, Cleveland; Loew's Valentine, Toledo; Loew's Montreal; Elgin, Ottawa, and the Paramount, Asbury Park.

"Rhythm" Held

The Paramount theatre, New York, is holding "Rhythm on the River" for a third week. The film has also secured extra playing time at the Paramount, Portland; Newman, Kansas City; Paramount, Los Angeles; Midwest, Oklahoma City; Saenger, New Orleans; Palace, Dallas; Metropolitan, Boston; Capitol, Worcester; Paramount, New Haven, and Allyn, Hartford. In San Diego the film has been moved over to the Orpheum, in Detroit to the State and in Buffalo to the Hippodrome.

"IT'S AN ILL WIND THAT BLOWS . . ."

Tidal waves accompanying an August hurricane in the Gulf of Mexico brought a new market for exhibitors in southwest Louisiana, who opened their doors to flood refugees, many of them juvenile. These, descendants of old Creole families of the state, had lived in inaccessible sections, had never seen talking pictures nor enjoyed other conveniences of modern civilization. The exhibitors feel they made many converts.

British Exporting Documentary Films

An organization for the exchange between Great Britain and the United States, of documentary and educational 16 mm films of a non-theatrical nature, has been set up within the International Film Centre, with headquarters in Radio Ciy, New York. The British Government recently accepted an invitation to establish a British section of the parent organization and has appointed Richard Ford to head it.

International Film Centre, created to promote international understanding through international interchange of educational films, has been instrumental in bringing to this country films from Finland, Holland, England, Canada and the Latin-American countries. It has also sent selected American educational films such as the documentary, "The River," all over the world.

To Publish Catalogue

Under the direction of Mr. Ford, a summary of 16 mm British films, the first attempt to coordinate the titles of British-made films available for showing in the United States, has been made. The British section of the International Film Centre will soon make public a full descriptive catalogue of films for circulation among schools, colleges, libraries, etc.

The summary provides, for the first time, guidance for those who know of the films by name or reputation but are uncertain where to obtain them. The films have been listed in six broad divisions as follows: (a) Films about Great Britain and British life; (b) Films about Great Britain and British life, owned by the Associated British and Irish Railways and the Cunard-White Star Line, withdrawn from circulation during wartime; (c) Films about London, rural England and British life, and Scotland; (d) Social, economic and documentary films; (e) Gaumont-British films; (f) Films of historical events.

Members of the Board of International Film Centre are:

James T. Shotwell, committee on intellectual cooperation; George F. Zook, of the American Council on Education; Luther Gulick, of the Institute of Public Administration; William Berrien, of Northwestern University; Henry Goddard Leach, of the American Scandinavian Foundation, and Richard J. Walsh, of Asia Magazine.

Leonard, Hyland To Produce

Arthur Leonard and Dick Hyland announced Tuesday the formation of Cinemasters, Inc., to produce industrial and theatrical films. Mr. Leonard has been an independent producer since the closing of Warners' eastern studios where he was in charge of casting and Mr. Hyland has been a member of the Warner advertising department.

Offices of the new company are in the Fox-Movietone Studios, New York. Two hundred shares of no par value are listed with Mr. Leonard and Mr. Hyland as sole officers.

The first production is "Hobby Lobby," a short subject featuring Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and released September 1st which brings the Dave Elman radio program to the screen as the first of a series of six pictures. Columbia is distributing the short.

BOOK REVIEW

THE BOTTLENECKS OF BUSINESS. By Thurman W. Arnold. Reynal & Hitchcock, New York. 335 pages. $2.50.

Although the principal part of this book by the assistant attorney general is devoted to his economic philosophy in general and the benefits of the Sherman Act in particular, several references are made to the motion picture industry. The following is the most important of these: "The moving picture cartel grew up under government neglect. It is going to take years of expensive litigation and loss to stockholders to straighten it out."

Mr. Arnold's thesis is that political democracy cannot survive without industrial democracy and that the latter is being threatened by business, trade, manufacturing and labor combinations which have restrained free trade.

Block-booking of motion pictures is listed in several places in "The Bottlenecks of Business" as a practice which restricts trade. The "outrageous system," as Mr. Arnold calls it, is outlined and a case is given in which a producer is alleged to have used the Sherman Act to prevent independent theatres from organizing a boycott against the company.

Recognizing, however, that the film and other industries have their own special problems, Mr. Arnold says, "You cannot solve the problems of the distribution of steel by the same kind of organization necessary for the effective distribution of motion pictures."

Explanations of Forces

A large section of the book is devoted to explanations of forces which interfere with free distribution of goods and hence, in Mr. Arnold's opinion, result in losses to the consumer and increases in unemployment. The purpose of the Sherman Act is explained in an effort to gain new public favor for the law. This is an amplification of Mr. Arnold's views as expressed in his previous volume, "The Folklore of Capitalism."

The policy and procedure of the Department of Justice in investigations and actions brought under the Sherman Act is discussed at some length. The consent decree as a settlement for trust cases is also explained in a general way but not in a manner which throws any light on the Government's policy or aim in the motion picture suit.

The book is written in a style which is sometimes clear and simple and at other times obscure and repetitious. There is evidence that it was actually written in haste but represented the carefully considered viewpoint of the author. An indication also is given that Mr. Arnold is no longer in complete sympathy with the current New Deal philosophy. In "The Bottlenecks of Business" he is seeking supporters for the fight for free competition, according to his statements. It seems that his activities as head of the anti-trust division of the Department of Justice have not been entirely understood, or approved, in all Government circles. The book gives an impression, possibly a mistaken one, that it is intended to be not only an explanation for the general public but a defense against critics, at least some of whom are in the Government.—MARTIN QUIGLEY, JR.

Paralysis Spread Hits Box Office

The spread of infantile paralysis in the midwest has affected theatre business all over the area. In Kansas, Dr. F. P. Helm, Topeka, secretary of the state board of health, recommended to health officers in the various counties that they delay opening of schools until the situation improves.

Heavy in Three Counties

Half the 200 cases reported are from three counties, those containing Wichita, Pittsburg and Junction City. Tom Steele, Fox Midwest manager of Pittsburg, reports eight weeks of the "situation" there. He said that one Saturday he had over 700 children, the next Saturday following the report of several infantile cases, he had 14. Children under 15 have been barred from public functions, including the theatre, at several points in Kansas.

Although Ohio is approaching the peak of the worst outbreak of infantile paralysis since 1937, with 200 cases already reported to the State Health Department, at Columbus, the epidemic has subsided at Portsmouth, where church services have been resumed, and the ban prohibiting children under 16 from attending theatres and other public gatherings has been lifted. However, theatres in the Cincinnati trade territory, comprising Ohio, Indiana, Kentucky and West Virginia, continue to feel the effects of health department warnings against children attending theatres and similar assembly places.

Indiana is particularly hard hit, with 309 cases reported throughout the state. Schools and churches have been closed in many towns, and theatres at North Marchester were ordered closed in the past few days by medical and health officials.

Some 15 deaths have been reported in Upper Michigan and Wisconsin has more than 140 active cases. In Marinette, Wis., and Menominee, Mich., opening of schools was delayed for a week and children under 16 prohibited from attending theatres or other places of public gathering.

Missouri Hard Hit

Several theatres in Missouri have been asked by health authorities to close, and many others, because of the falling off in business, "might as well be closed," in the opinion of their operators. One circuit reports the worst business in its history last week. Among the theatres closed are the Lyric, Colby, Kan.; Plaza, Howard, Kan.; Lyric, Cottonwood Falls, Kan.; and Community, Spring Hill, Kan.

Hays Leaves Coast

Will H. Hays was to arrive in New York Friday, in preparation for the quarterly board meeting of MPPDA, scheduled for next Wednesday. Absence from the city of several directors necessitated postponement of the meeting until next week.

Urges Talent Exploitation

William Wyler, Hollywood director, in New York for a business visit, on Monday urged complete exploitation campaigns for directors, writers and other creative film workers whose records of accomplishment justify such campaigns. He believes the result would be the creation of larger audiences for individual pictures. He emphasized that such exploitation of creative artists would supplement the attention given to stars which he recognized are, and will be, the chief attraction at the box office.

BROADCASTERS AGAIN WILL TAP HOLLYWOOD FOR PROGRAM TALENT

Sponsored Shows Scheduled for This Season Will Draw Heavily on Star Names; Many Originate on Coast

Hollywood, again, during this new show season will contribute substantially to radio broadcasting by the national networks, as a source of talent, of production and of program origination.

As a guide for motion picture theatre owners who find radio an occasional, if not frequent adverse influence on their box offices, MOTION PICTURE HERALD lists, in adjoining columns, 61 "key" sustaining programs of national advertisers which open for the new season between September 1st and mid-November, many of which will again call on Hollywood acting, singing and other talent to sell everything from canned goods and gasoline to cosmetics, soaps, shampoos and whatnot.

12 from Hollywood

Twelve of the key programs will originate in Hollywood, representing 20 per cent, a slight drop from the 17 programs, or 24 per cent which were sent from Hollywood last season, out of 72 programs which took to the air for 1939-40 between August 21 and October 31.

Reason for the drop in the number of programs emanating from Hollywood is the growth of the "quiz" programs, which are broadcast from the east, and the increasing attention being paid both by broadcasters and their advertiser customers to news commentators in these war days.

Meanwhile, the motion picture exhibitor, who for years has been complaining, individually and in concert with his state and national organizations, against the use of film stars on the air in competition with their appearances on the screen, has not been heard so far this season.

During the past year, what with suits, codes, legislation, the war, threats of government regulation, labor troubles and whatnot, the question of stars on the radio received little attention from exhibitors.

Bergen-McCarthy Back

When the radio show season opened, last week, such stars as Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy returned to their Chase and Sanborn radio program. "Good News", sponsored by General Foods, made its initial broadcast of the season on September 3rd with Dick Powell, Fanny (Baby Snooks) Brice and Mary Martin, as the chief talent for the program. Last Monday the Lux Radio Theatre returned to the air under the supervision of Cecil B. DeMille and guest stars of the stage and screen. Forthcoming programs will be the Pepsodent-Bob Hope show on September 24th, the "Sherlock Holmes" series starring Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce and sponsored by Grove Labratories on September 29th at which date nine other programs will have the new season premieres.

On October 6th, Jack Benny, Mary Livingston and Phil Harris return to their Sun-

FILM THEATRE PATRONS SOUGHT AS OUTLET FOR MERCHANDISE SAMPLES

Philadelphia Company Organized to Service with Free Soft Drinks, Candy; Tests Made by Pepsi-Cola and Nestles

Manufacturers of candy, soft drinks and other products are being invited to turn to the movie audiences, for the most part already "giveaway" conscious, to dispense their samples instead of street corner, house-to-house or direct mail distribution. The sampling of various food and merchandise product has been done on a limited scale but what is believed to be the first national sampling service to manufacturers has been launched in Philadelphia by the new National Sample Advertising Service headed by P. S. Greenberg, president.

Pepsi-Cola Uses Service

Already, National Sample is dispensing a soft drink, Pepsi-Cola, among movie patrons on a national basis, starting in Philadelphia after tests in 160 theatres in New York and New Jersey. In Philadelphia alone, 60 houses, including some Warner theatres, are being covered. Throughout the country, National Service expects to have Pepsi-Cola sampled in at least 6,000 theatres with a possibility of extending it to 10,000 houses.

There is no charge to the theatre operator, National Service supplying the booth, cooler, drinking cups and beverage. During the first samplings, a girl was stationed in the lobby to dispense the drinks, but that expense has been eliminated now by having a regular house usher take care of the booth.

For several days prior to the distribution of the product sampled, a series of 90-foot sound trailers are shown on the screen, the drink manufacturer supplying the trailers, which are in color and animated, featuring Pepsi and Pete, cartoon strip characters used by Pepsi-Cola in its newspaper comic page advertising. Theatre operators further co-operate in stimulating the sampling campaign with lobby displays and announcements in heralds.

Two Houses at a Time

Sampling at each house is limited to four days on an average, never less than three days and sometimes for five days. Pepsi-Cola furnishes National Service with 25 cases of the drink each day during the sampling. The sampling is done at two houses at a time but when the smaller houses are reached as many as five theatres will be serviced on the same days.

The sampling of Pepsi-Cola is done by National Sample on a contract basis, the entire cost for supply and service being assumed by the soft drink manufacturer. However, the plan for candy sampling calls for the manufacturer to carry the cost of supply only with the theatre operator bearing the service cost. It is estimated that the theatre operator will be asked to pay a penny for each five-cent bar of candy to be campled.

According to Mr. Greenberg, his National Sample Advertising Service was presented to candy manufacturers in June at the annual Confectionery Industries Exposition, and several companies asked for further details. However, it is not expected that any of the candy manufacturers will make definite commitments until the school season is under way.

A candy sampling plan along similar lines is being developed in Philadelphia also by Charles Goldfine, operator of the Alden, Falls and Pix theatres, the latter now under construction. Mr. Goldfine contacted the leading candy manufacturers earlier this month, including Charms and Tootsie-Roll, but no definite commitments have been made.

Mr. Goldfine's plan calls for a test sampling in Philadelphia alone with national distribution dependent on its success there. The manufacturer is to supply screen trailers and five cent bars, which will be sold to the theatre operator at one and a half cents each, one cent of which will be returned to the manufacturer.

Should candy sampling become a fact in Philadelphia, it will make serious inroads in the candy vending machine theatre business. It is estimated that there are at least 2,000 nickel candy vending machines in the city's theatres, practically all operated by the Berlo Vending Company. It is also estimated that each machine nets the vending operator $5 per week, net profit. The theatre operator derives about 30 percent of the machine's gross income.

Nestles Gives Coffee

Sampling movie patrons has been considered the best advertising medium by Nestle's Milk Products, Inc., in introducing its new coffee product, Nescafe. A test sampling has been started in Philadelphia, and according to H. L. Robinson, local manager for Nestle's, the results are highly satisfactory.

Such sampling is not a general practice with Nestle's, and this is the first time that the company has sampled any of its product in theatres.

Already, 12 Warner houses have been covered directly by the company and it will be extended to some 60 Philadelphia houses, mostly Warner theatres. The sampling is done by the company direct with no cost or service charges to the exhibitor. Booth, dishes, and samples are all supplied by Nestle's, the company also providing its own demonstrator. Nor does it ask for any commercial trailer on the screen, although some of the houses sampled have carried slides on their own initiative. The sampling is done in either the lobby or mezzanine. According to Mr. Robinson, several managers have requested a return engagement. The plan is entirely local.

The Sears-Roebuck theatre script plan, issuing cash value coupons redeemable in merchandise at any Sears outlet, is making slow but sure progress beyond the Philadelphia territory, where it was first introduced by a combine headed by Robert Bogatin, attorney, earlier in the summer. Sears has expressed satisfaction with the plan, and approval has been given to extend it throughout Pennsylvania and, eventually, on a nation-wide basis.

Shortly after Labor Day, Mr. Goldfine, who is field representative for the Sears plan and who is developing the candy sampling idea, will visit 30 exhibitors in up-State territories who have signified their interest in using the coupons. Letters were sent to 200 exhibitors, outlining the features of the plan, and the 30 replied that they were interested. In addition, a deal is pending for the Sears coupon to be carried by the Comerford theatre circuit in the up-State territory.

RKO DOCUMENTS WILLKIE SHORT

A complete documentary record of Wendell L. Willkie's appearance in RKO Pathe's "Information Please," has been prepared in scrap book form by RKO Radio and has been shipped to Rushville, Ind., former home town of the Republican Presidential nominee.

The Old Subscribers' Roll Call

In connection with the preparation of the forthcoming special issue of MOTION PICTURE HERALD commemorating the twenty-fifth anniversary of Martin Quigley's service in the journalism of the screen, a recording of the older subscribers to the publications of the House of QP is being compiled.

MOTION PICTURE HERALD is prideful of the fact that its subscription rolls of today include the names of men who have been identified with the motion picture from the earliest days of organized exhibition—some of whose names were first inscribed on the rolls of Moving Picture World, beginning in 1907 and acquired by The Herald in 1928, and Motion Picture News, absorbed by The Herald in 1930—all today fused into the institution of MOTION PICTURE HERALD.

It is desired to hear from those older subscribers from such a period as fifteen years ago, on back to the beginning. To make response convenient, a reply coupon is offered:

Western Electric Marketing New Speech Equipment

A new line of speech input equipment, custom-built to meet the individual needs of broadcasting stations or motion picture studios, regardless of size or operating requirements, is announced by the Western Electric Company. According to F. R. Lack, manager of the company's Specialty Products Division, the new equipment achieves this flexibility of function by employing the principle of unit construction in both its electrical and mechanical aspects.

A single centralized unit embracing any combination of standard Western Electric apparatus, from a simple channel to an elaborate control system, such as demanded by FM broadcasting plans, may be readily assembled on a "custom built" basis, according to the company.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

THE Community Spirit of most small town theatre managers is something to behold.

Only the other day, Frank V. King, operating the Midland theatre in Newark, Ohio, went to the rescue of his townsfolk and offered his theatre for the annual Farm, Cattle and Livestock Show, when the outdoor fairgrounds were no longer available.

The farmers and the cattlemen, the dairy maids and agricultural experts of the area accepted King's offer with speed, but what speed —and for three days the stage of his theatre was littered with beef heifers and beef steers, Shropshire ewe lambs and Southdown ewe lambs, fine wool lambs and more fine wool lambs, Holstein cattle and Guernsey cattle, cows and more cattle, yearlings and champions —133 of the finest specimens the land thereabouts could produce.

During intermissions of one kind or another, they put on milking contests and quilting contests, contests for cooking, baking, breading and whatnot.

And in midweek, they started all over again, for another three days.

Mr. King and his staff will recover.

Will Hollywood's Screen Actors Guild and New York's Actors Equity Association and the American Federation of Radio Artists take notice of the compaint of their performing brothers in Mexico, where 'hack' singers on the air say they get a mere fifty cents a day. The scale is three songs for half a dollar, but the singing is so spaced out that the songster must spend nearly all day in the studio. That prevents him from doing other work, wants a raise to a dollar a day!

Haven MacQuarrie's new version is "Marriage Club," in which he will ask married couples such dynamitish questions as "Should a woman allow her husband to go out one night a week?", "Is it proper for a wife to go through her husband's pockets at night while he is sleeping?", etc.

Haven MacQuarrie may not know it, but he'll be treading on some mighty dangerous ground.

Londoners at The Cinema

MEMO:

From Aubrey Flanagan, London Office, QP.

Probably you comfortably ensconced New Yorkers wonder what Londoners do when the air raid sirens wail and they are in the middle of the main feature at their favorite cinema. For the most part they stay put! If West End experiences mean anything they'd rather stay in the cinema all night than rush home in a panic.

The other night when the sirens began, at about 9:30 P.M. and the West End houses were crowded, managers had their first real experience of an air raid during actual working hours. In all cases the show went on. Audiences were told they could leave, or stay, as they felt. Most stayed. At closing time a new problem arose—what to do about it. Bill Pepper of the Warner theatre invited his patrons to the lower lounge, where he served coffee and sandwiches, had music played, organized games, fraternized in his white tie and tails—and wore a tin hat atop his head to ward off falling plaster.

At the Odeon theatre, Manager Bill Thornton had an audience of Lords and Ladies and the Lord Chamberlain, all invited to the premiere of Fox's "Lillian Russell." When the show ended, at 11:00 oclock, Bill went to the stage, told his guests that the air raid alarm was still on, that he didn't want them to go and that he'd rather they stayed, but if they felt they just had to leave—well, five hundred of them stayed, 500 of London's top aristocracy.

The Odeon organist had a number of tunes to rehearse for the next day's show, and did so to the delight of the Lords and their Ladies. There was dancing and community singing. And, reports Bill, "Until you have heard a Dowager Lady and an Odeon doorman singing 'Roll Out the Barrel' in close harmony, you have no idea what latent genius British democracy hides."

But even the aristocracy have to sleep. The Odeon visitors did not mind whether they were assigned to sleeping quarters in the bar or the lobby or on the stairs. From the stage they pulled drapes and backcloths, rugs, mats and old costumes to comfort the limbs of Mayfair. The Lords were distributed on one side, the Ladies on the other.

On the Lord's side, a retired General took off his shoes. On the other, a Marchioness loosened her girdle.

"At two thirty in the morning," said Thornton, "I walked down the main stairs into the vestibule, picking my way through slumbering debutantes sprawled down the steps. My doorman was seated on the bottom step in earnest argument with a distinguished diplomat. The diplomat had on white tie and tails, also a tin hat, and was smoking a five-bob cigar 'borrowed' from the doorman."

(The Government in London, Monday, ordered the closing of theatres in central London and in the suburbs, on the heels of Hitler's terrific bombing.)

THE Secretary of War Stimson will soon pass on the proposals of Philadelphia movie exhibitor Charles Goldfine, to organize American game-hunters into a home-defense unit. Goldfine, who operates the Alden, Pix and Falls theatres in Philadelphia, and is a crack marksman in his own right, wrote to President Roosevelt, calling attention to the fact that there are at least 3,000,000 game shooters, toting rifles for the sport, who could be organized into "a standing army of minute men."

BRITISH FILM INDUSTRY TAKES STOCK FOLLOWING YEAR OF WAR

Theatres Voluntarily Observe Curfew; 116 Cinemas Close in Twelve Months; Credit Bank for Industry Favored

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

With twelve months of total war now passed the British industry takes stock, measuring its problematical future in terms of the past year. There are two schools of thought, that which considers the present situation far from satisfactory and the other which, all told, is grateful for survival at all. Both would seem to have a germ of truth.

Voluntary Curfew

London cinemas are temporarily observing a voluntary nine p. m. curfew. The outer London area is not included in the curfew although some other districts affected by bombings are observing earlier closings. However, the country generally is operating under normal conditions, with the Minister for Home Security convinced that there is no need to alter the situation.

Before last weekend 116 British cinemas had closed in the 12 months period of the war. Over the weekend people leaving a London theatre were hit by a bomb and a trade show on Tuesday was nearly cancelled by a delayed action bomb. There are no evacuations from Wardour Street and work is going on calmly at the studios. Conditions otherwise remain surprisingly normal. Trade in the aggregate is probably not greatly below the previous 12 months period.

Production, on the other hand, is infinitesmal. At the moment of writing not more than a round half dozen films are on the floor, only one of them aimed obviously at a world market.

Subject to severe financial control foreign distributors are currently operating under difficulties, fifty per cent of their monies frozen under the Exchange Control Regulations, and their investment in British production virtually limited by this last, their whole activties menaced by a covertly threatened but emphatically planned Films Commission.

Films Commission Contemplated

Not the least significant factor in a necessarily cursory survey of the present scene is the threatened Films Commission, indication of which has already been given in MOTION PICTURE HERALD. No official statement has been made upon this, and all consideration and discussion has been carried on behind rigidly locked doors. Despite the Governmental silence, a silence observed no less firmly by the Members of the Films Council who have been discussing it, it would seem that a Films Commission with wide powers has been in the mind of the Board of Trade president, and that legislation towards this end has been the subject of examination and discussion by officials of the Board of Trade and Members of the Films Council. With it is tied up the Credit Bank, planned and promised for the purpose of giving British producers the option of that material assistance for which they have long been crying.

No details, of course, have been published but powers envisaged include control over foreign investments, over acquisition of theatre properties, over film hire prices and over theatre admissions. They would also provide machinery for financing independent productions. Detached reporting compels the judgment that such a Commission would probably pass over to an independent, or a partly-trade body virtual control of the industry with its essentially foreign constituents and a predominantly foreign commodity. Any such proposal would be regarded with alarm by American interests here until certain obvious and emphatic safeguards had been given.

ALLIED INTERESTS FINANCE COMPANY

A group of British and Allied personalities associated with the entertainment business have formed a new company in Britain — Pan-European Films Limited. It is claimed that the company will be financed by Allied interests having the support of their respective governments. A representative board of directors will be appointed and a production program launched dealing with the Allied Forces and Civil Defence work. It is intended that these should be produced for overseas' audiences as well as for home consumption.

Favors Credit Bank

It is known that in mid-July Sir Andrew Duncan, following the presentation to the Trade of the Alternative Quota Scheme a little earlier, had attended a Films Council meeting in person. He came probably to answer in person the complaints and recommendations of certain trade sections that his Alternative Quota proposals were inadequate and that there was no provision for a Credit Bank. Sir Andrew made it clear that he was in favor of a Credit Bank and, further than that, of a Films Commission to administer it and other attendant legislation. He was obviously converted after a careful reading of the findings of the Moyne Committee.

No less significantly Sir Andrew chided the Films Council or certain of its members, without of course mentioning names, for breaches of confidence. He pointed to the premature publication of the Board of Trade plans in certain American and English journals, insisted that members of the Council observe the utmost secrecy in regard to their functions and operations, pointed to this as a statutory duty. Since then over the whole of the Films Council operations has been a silence which if not necessarily discreet has been emphatic.

Credit Bank Discussed

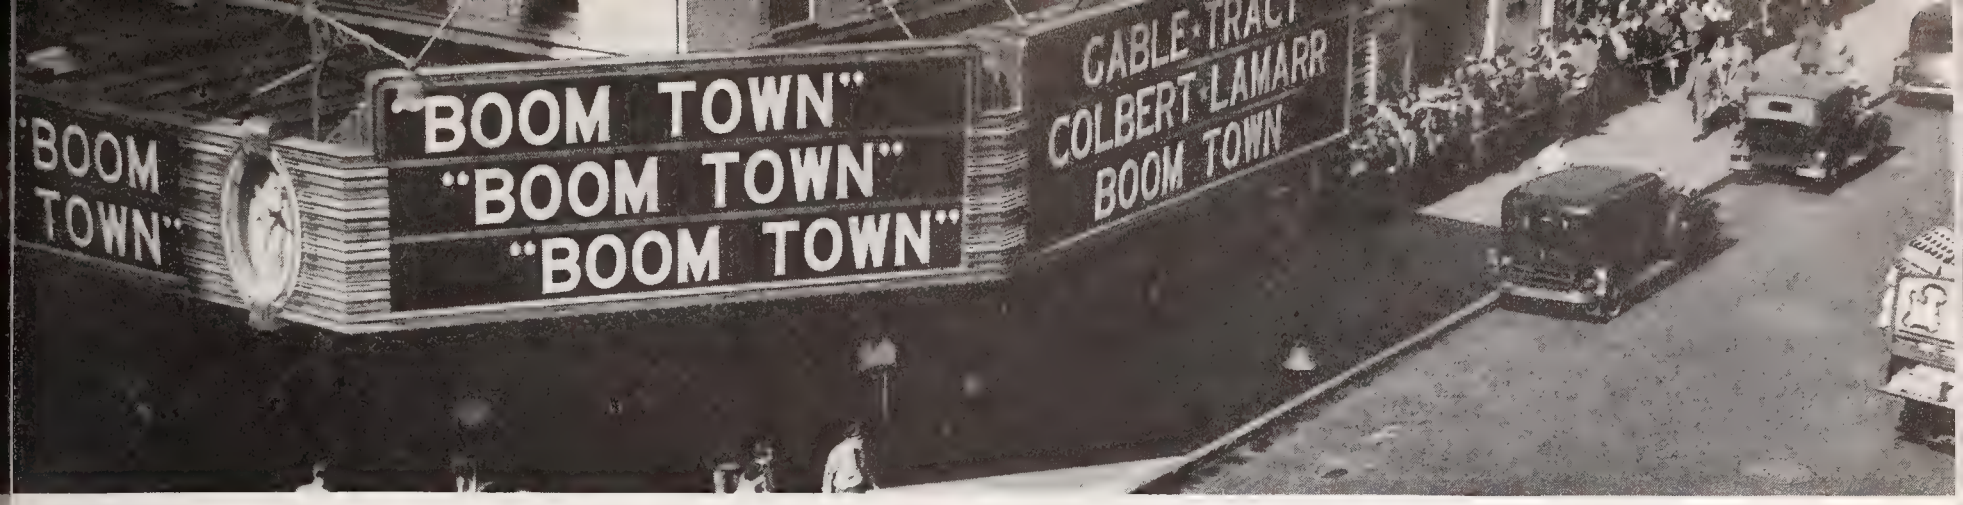
It had not been announced, until it was announced in Motion Picture Daily, that a Committee had been quietly sitting in answer to Sir Andrew's plea to go into the question of a Parliamentary Bill to give practical life to the Credit Bank. On this Committee were members of the Board of Trade, permanent and advisory officials, and a number of people representative not only of the industry but of other interests, lay and financial. Among them was Commander Jarratt of the Gaumont-British Circuit, Captain Richard Norton, studio owner and one time producer; F. W. Baker, British distributor; George Elvin, secretary of Associated Cine Technicians; Simon Rowson, the industry's advisory expert to the Board of Trade; Miss Kilroy of the Board of Trade Film Department; Professor Arnold Plant, economist and academic layman, and, not least significant, Mr. Eugene Palache, city banker and a leading member of the old Threadneedle Street firm of Helbert, Wagg & Company, Ltd. Mr. Palache's role is probably not the least vital among all this galaxy. Also on the Committee was David E. Griffiths, representing in solitary state the interest of the American organizations, who are the foundation of the British trade.

It would seem to be clear, and indeed it has been admitted by Government officials, that the only thing which has prevented the institution of a Credit Bank has been the uncertainties of the War situation. Probably if the fear of invasion was removed the whole matter would take an immediate impetus. It is not unlikely that if the situation clears an appropriate bill would be ready and presented to Parliament to be rushed through without any delays in drafting or in the legislative processes.

Production Stalling

Meanwhile the production situation here has reached a condition very near to stalemate, and this in spite of the persistence of certain British producers that they are "doing very nicely, thank you." The British Film Producers' Association has recently disbanded as a direct result of lethargy on the part of some of its members and resignations on the part of the others. There is now no British producers body.

The considerable and drastic limitation of production has been compelled by the fact that the American interests here have not been permitted to use their frozen dollars to sponsor British production after October 31st when the Exchange Agreement expires. The recent Order 892 permitted them to use such monies until that date. Beyond that date the future is completely dark, for no agreement has been announced and no permit extended from then onwards. It is true that certain preliminaries have been made, but as the matter at present stands from October 31st monies received by the Americans for trading in this country would be completely "frozen" in Britain.



Government circles have complained, a little jaundicedly, that the Americans are far behind with their Quota production for the current year. "The current year," of course, does not expire until March 31st, 1941, and there is no doubt that as far as the major American companies are concerned they will meet their legal production commitments. Since it is impracticable to launch worthy or ambitious production programs on a two months' basis it would seem likely that, unless a new Exchange Agreement is achieved with a permit to use frozen dollars for British production the American contribution to British films will be limited to single features, or, as they are locally known, "quickies."

Exhibitors are not blind to the dangers of this situation and Charles Metcalfe, one of the more thoughtful in the exhibitor group, has announced the exhibitor fear of the return of the "quickie," pleading, however, that the speedy establishment of a Credit Bank would ease the situation.

Meanwhile the date limitation of Order 892 is approaching, and without this barrier being removed the Americans have little alternative. The Board of Trade are known to be sympathetic. The difficulty would seem to be with the Treasury.

Higher Admissions Urged

Support is increasing in exhibitor circles for the view that there should be no half measures in meeting the new entertainments tax and that seat increases set up to incorporate the new duties should be courageous rather than timid. The London district group have for instance circularized their members asking them not only to abolish the sixpenny minimum but to put it up at least to eightpence. In the north western areas, which includes Liverpool and the adjacent industrial and residential towns the sixpenny seats will be raised to ninepence.

"BOOM TOWN's ON BROADWAY! HOORAY!"

"GABLE! TRACY! COLBERT! LAMARR! OH BOY!"

"ADVANCED PRICES? WHO CARES!"

(As we boom to press, the perspiring Capitol management reports "Boom Town," held over 2nd week, is doing the biggest business in years. And from other cities comes news of holdovers in the 3rd, 4th and 5th weeks. Your town will soon be a Boom Town!)

City for Conquest

(Warner Brothers)

New York Cross-Section

Moving at times with the speed of an express train and again slowing to the tempo of the prose-poem which Frank Craven speaks in his "Our Town" manner by way of keying pace and pitching theme, this study of New York life in terms of action and ambition, failure and faith, despair, determination, right, wrong and in-between, gives showmen many varieties of entertainment to sell and many means of selling it. Produced in the pattern of the "Symphony of a City," which is played near the close of it, the picture switches from fast to slow, from gaiety to gloom, again and again, but never loses its way nor misses its point.

John Wexley's screen play, wrought with dexterity from a novel by Aben Kendel, starts a number of tenement children on their chosen ways up from the gutter, takes them to the heights and brings all but one of them back again. James Cagney plays a truck driver who turns boxer to win a fame he thinks will bring his sweetheart back to him and, blinded, ends the film selling papers. Ann Sheridan plays the girl, whose ambition to see her name in lights as a dancer takes her from him and who returns after descent to burlesque to join him at his newsstand. Arthur Kennedy, as his brother, whose education in music he finances at a sacrifice to himself, is in the finale the one among the several who started in the slums who secures his hold on fame. Elia Kazan stands out as the one who started on the crooked path and found a bullet at the end of it. Frank Craven portrays a tramp given to philosophy and soliloquy who wanders into and out of the story, uttering observations about New York which the other characters proceed to substantiate.

Those sections of the story which emphasize action, the boxing sequences, dancing sequences, a gang ride and other episodes of conflict, build a tension that holds through the performance of the symphony, a composition of quality by Max Steiner, to the ending wherein the sweethearts, separated by their quest for fame, find peace and union in defeat.

Direction by Anatole Litvak accounts for smoothness in a story featuring contrast and change of pace, unity in a plot woven of numerous strands. William Cagney was Hal B. Wallis' associate producer.

Wyoming

(MGM)

Wallace Beery Rides Again

Wallace Beery rides again and shoots and kills and amuses the while, in this sequence of adventurings located in Wyoming a little after the Civil War, and shortly before General Custer, who appears in the story, marched his men to their doom on the Little Big Horn. In this, as in other appearances during recent years, Mr. Beery is both badman and hero, gunman and defender of right, and this time he ends, after having put villainy and villains to rout, in the toils of romance as personified by Marjorie Main, lady-blacksmith with emotions to match her profession.

The story is inclusive of most of the situations and incidents employed in westerns adown the years, not forgetting the attack by Indians and the rescue by cavalrymen, these coming at a point toward the end of the picture at which unexpectedness adds to their effectiveness. Prior to this there have been a train-robbery, a stage-robbery, several trigger-contests, all won by Beery, rustlings, plottings, thwarting of plottings and two romances, all relieved by sequences in which Beery dips back into his youth to deliver up again the fruits of his experience in the field of humor.

The players associated with the star match his pace, Miss Main contributing an accompaniment surpassing any he's had since the late Marie Dressler shared leads with him. Leo Carrillo is given second billing but figures in the film only at the beginning and end. The production is beneficiary of the sepia-tinting process the studio employs on occasion, a treatment emphasizing in this case the grandeur of the scene against which the picture was filmed.

A Milton Bren production directed by Richard Thorpe, it is from a story by Jack Jevne prepared for screen by himself and Hugo Butler.

Adventure in the Southwest

This is a tale of adventure and mystery, action and thrill, full of fight, risk, danger and death, directed by the Sam Wood of "Goodbye Mr. Chips" in a manner setting it apart from other films in kind, present and past. It offers a number of familiars in roles unlike any they've had before and two newcomers in portrayals that dominate interest. It compares to no product of even date and it gave a downtown-Los Angeles preview audience a change of diet welcomed in terms of applause.

Scene of the story and screen play by Frank Butler is a town north of the Mexican border called Santa Marta. To this town of adobe shacks and many killings come three adventurers (played by Fred MacMurray, Gilbert Roland and Albert Dekker) bringing a newspaper publisher, driven from the town prior to opening of the picture, and his granddaughter, 13. They enforce sale of the publisher's next edition at $1 the copy, incur the wrath of the populace, install one of their number as sheriff, prepare to leave for other fields of venture but delay their departure when the child they have protected is murdered, to avenge her in a battle with the murderer and his cohorts. It is a sequence of strange, baffling and thrilling incidents that is bundled together in the foregoing synopsis, executed with spirit, resolution, dispatch and a touch of humor.

MacMurray, Roland and Dekker, the last playing an ex-pugilist and strong-man fond of talking about his past and keeping his knuckles in training, ride out of the picture and across the horizon at end of the picture as if to other adventurings beyond. Betty Brewer, the 13-year-old whose first film this is and whose second will be "The Roundup," is killed toward the end of the film after endearing herself to the audience—a means by which D. W. Griffith used to make a star out of a newcomer in every picture.

"Lum 'n' Abner," of radio fame, squabble constantly, play checkers or just sit. Very little happens in Pine Ridge, but when it does "Lum 'n' Abner" have their collective hand in it, although the acceleration from the norm varies but a trifle.

A poor girl is run down by a hit-and-run driver, a boy is saved from death by a makeshift oxygen inhalator and the appearance early in the story of a drummer at the store with a facility for gab are the exceptions that prove the rule. There is a modicum of romance with Frances Langford and Robert Wilcox, the principals. Incidentally Miss Langford sings only one song, "Dreaming Out Loud," Frank Craven plays a hard working and beloved country doctor and Bobs Watson is the small boy saved from death. Other characters are of the variety commonly called typical.

Three Men from Texas

(Paramount-Sherman)

Western

"Three Men from Texas," 31st of the "Hopalong Cassidy" series produced for Paramount release, is regarded by the producer as his best of the group. The picture contains more action, suspense, comedy, pictorial beauty than any of the previous offerings, which is to say a lot, considering the fact that the series' star, William Boyd, ranks in second position among Money Making western stars in the MOTION PICTURE HERALD-Fame poll of exhibitors.

Joining Boyd and his pal, Russell Hayden, as a permanent feature of the group is Andy Clyde, as comedian, and his first appearance was the occasion for much laughter from the preview audience. Included among the support are Morris Ankrum, Thornton Edwards, Esther Estrella and Morgan Wallace.

Norton S. Parker, veteran western writer, turned out an original screenplay, based on the Clarence E. Mulford characters, which is a marvel of compactness, clarity and action. Lesley Selander, the director, accomplished his assignment with conciseness.

The story deals with "Cassidy" and "Lucky," Texas rangers, going to California to oust a gang stealing property from settlers who have Spanish land grants.

Rainbow Over the Range

(Monogram)

Western Melodrama

This Edward Finney presentation of Tex Ritter as emissary of justice in the days when rustling ravaged Arizona assays a deal more fighting and somewhat less singing to the reel. Songs are but two in this subject, one by Fleming Allen giving the picture its title, another by Johnny Lange and Lew Porter filling in. There is, however, another touch of music in the performance of a cowbell solo by a cowhand.

The story, by Rolland Lynch, Robert Emmett and Roger Merton, has to do with the rustling of horses from a ranch owned by a girl and her brother and coveted by the local bigwig. The hero arrives as a U. S. Marshal intent upon putting an end to the stealings and if necessary the lives of those engaged in them. He attends to both matters with the Ritter aplomb.

First of New Series

The opening round for the new season's brain busting tournaments of this quiz series is notable for the inclusion of a more than the usual amount of humor if not for the presentation of "humdinger" queries. Prefaced with a new format for introductory credits, staged in a new setting and equipped with better camera and sound adjustment, the initial number will be a welcome addition to this popular series of combined intellectual and entertainment fare. The queries consist of interrogations on baseball, stage, song and pronounciation items. The usual panel of the smart set, Messrs. Adams, Kieran and Levant, is on hand with Anna Neagle as guest expert. The final question, more in the line of a gag, is the laugh highlight of the amusing session, when the experts are each presented with a baby doll and then proceed to have a diaper derby, all accompanied by high class wit and resulting in some laughter provoking baby tailoring demonstrations.—Running time, 11 minutes.

The reformation of a "smart aleck" is the morality business of this latest Leon Errol comic offering. Errol is pictured as one who insists on standing on his constitutional rights when apprehended in any wrong doings, such as unlawful tree surgery to city property, passing traffic signals, parking in restricted territory and attempting to bribe his way out of summonses. To teach him a lesson, a mock trial is held and during the judicial proceedings Leon becomes victim to charges of being a wife beater, an income tax dodger and an assault perpetrator. Commonwealth Group In Three Divisions

Managers of Commonwealth Amusement Circuit met in Kansas City Wednesday and Thursday to plan operations for the 15 weeks between September 15th and December 28th. Each theatre has been given a quota and all will receive an extra week's salary if it is reached, according to C. A. Schultz, head of the organization.

The 35 theatres have been divided into three divisions: Western, including all theatres in Kansas with the exception of Lawrence, under M. B. Smith, supervisor, of Garden City, Kas.; Eastern, all theatres in Missouri and Iowa except Columbia, Mo., under Bob Shelton, supervisor, of Warrensburg, Mo., and a Central division, to include Columbia, Mo., Lawrence, Kas., and theatres in Arkansas under supervision of the home office.

Managers took up such subjects as advertising, theatre fronts, supplies, product, and particularly special campaign weeks for the 15-week fall drive.

H. V. Kaltenborn, famed radio commentator and student of propaganda methods, and Major George Fielding Eliot, outstanding U. S. military analyst, agree that "a way must be found to show Baptism of Fire to the American public."

SAYS H. V. KALTENBORN:

"As Americans, we must be prepared in our minds as well as in our arms. Baptism of Fire was produced to inspire terror in the prospective victims of German aggression. We must learn how to meet and resist Hitler's propaganda as well as his airforce."

SAYS MAJOR ELIOT:

"When incorporated in 'THE RAMPARTS WE WATCH', the Nazi film Baptism of Fire takes on a meaning which the Germans did not foresee. Instead of terror it inspires in the hearts of free men and women a hatred of Nazi methods and a grim resolution to defeat them!"

Herman Robbins, 20 Years Servicing Film Theatres

His 1,700 Employees, Supply 13,000 Exhibitors

HERMAN ROBBINS, president of the co-ordinated National Screen companies: National Screen Service, Advertising Accessories and National Screen Accessories, is rounding out his 20th year with this unique theatre advertising service for motion picture exhibitors.

Actually his career in motion pictures dates farther back, to the first days of the old Fox Film Company, in 1914 so that he comes naturally by his membership in "The Picture Pioneers," that band in New York counting 25 years or more in the industry.

The original Robbins company of the trio of companies which he heads—National Screen Service—has already passed its 21st year during which it is generally accredited with maintaining steady expansion, until now, through 1,700 employees and 33 branches the company serves more than 13,000 theatres.

Started as Copy-boy

He started as a copy-boy under the famous "gold dome" of the World Building on Park Row, New York, with the now legendary New York World. He graduated into the ranks of that group of newspapermen who covered the metropolitan beats and made newspaper history for more than a generation. The Harlem, Yorkville, Chelsea and City Hall beats were all familiar to Robbins. And it was there at the World that he met W. R. (Winnie) Sheehan who invited him to join him at Fox Film as his assistant. But Robbins persuaded Sheehan to give him a sales post and that was the beginning of a long rise in the field.

It was only a short while before Robbins got his first promotion to the post of Fox branch manager, then sales manager, eventually general sales manager.

Trailers Developed

About this time a new and unique screen advertising business was just beginning to spread its wings—the production and distribution of what is now called a motion picture trailer, a method then of announcing "coming attractions" that overshadowed the old-fashioned slide. So Robbins joined with Joe Pollak, Toby Gruen and the late Akiba Weinberg to develop new sales angles and wider distribution for the film advertising business which eventually became National Screen Service. And there he has been for 20 exciting years, the last 11 of which have been at the head of the company.

Herman Robbins' colleagues and co-workers say that in all of his 20 years at National Screen, he has never until now let his name be attached publicly to anything even resembling a "drive" or "sales campaign." "Herman Robbins Twentieth Anniversary Testimonial" is what they call it over at headquarters at 630 Ninth Avenue, in the Film Building, on New York's Film Row, and Sales Manager Samuel Dembow reports that in one way or another all members of the 1,700 headquarters and field staffs will in one way or another participate in the 15-week period between September 15th and December 28th, the campaign weeks.

HERMAN ROBBINS

The first of three regionals to launch the drive was held at the Astor Hotel in New York Wednesday and Thursday, September 4-5.

State Censor Says Hollywood Is Lax

Mrs. Edna R. Carroll, chairman of the Pennsylvania Board of Motion Picture Censors, charged the Production Code Administration with laxity in recent months and blamed the slackness of supervision in Hollywood for an usual amount of cutting and deletions in pictures viewed by the State censor board in recent months. As a result, she said, the work of the board has been delayed and pictures are being held up. In keeping with the policy of the board, Mrs. Carroll would not disclose which pictures necessitated censor shears.

"They are letting them run wild," said Mrs. Carroll this week in Philadelphia, blaming the "laxity" on the European war and the attempt by Hollywood to make up for its lost foreign market.

Mrs. Carroll boasted that the present board was the most liberal one the State ever had and even the most reasonable one in comparison with other similar bodies throughout the country. She previously complained about the Code Administration last spring when "Typhoon" was reviewed.

National Decency Legion Classifies 10 Pictures

Of 10 pictures reviewed and classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the curent week six were approved for general patronage, two were listed as unobjectionable for adults and two were cited as objectionable in part. The films and their classification follow.

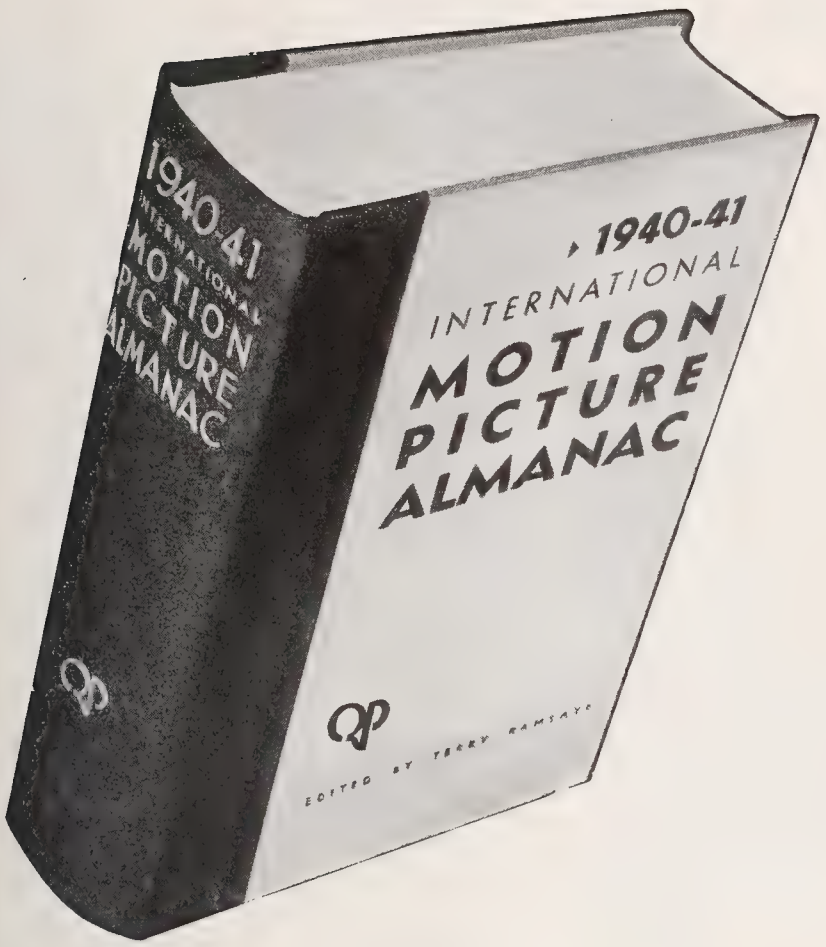
More Nazi Pressure



Acting on the request of the German legation, Costa Rica officials have banned the showing of MGM's, "The Mortal Storm," known by its Spanish title as "The Fatal Hour." Nazi legation officials asserted that the picture's theme is "offensive to Germans."

"Mortal Storm," depicts the story of the effects of the Nazi regime upon a typical non-Aryan family.

Spanish Versions Contemplated

Warners are contemplating a plan advanced by William Keighley, director, to make Spanish language versions of pictures currently shooting, with the same sets but with Spanish speaking actors. Mr. Keighley proposed that he supervise the production of "Four Mothers," which he is currently directing, in the Spanish version, with Mexican producer-director Ramon Nunez handling that version.

COWDIN HITS TAX BILL AT SENATE HEARING

Universal Chairman Points Out Inequalities of Excess Profits Proposal for Small Companies

J. Cheever Cowdin, chairman of the board of Universal, represented motion pictures, joining sectors of American business, big and little, in protesting on Thursday of last week against the proposed excess profits tax at a hearing of the Senate Finance Committee at Washington. About 50 persons from various businesses declared that the bill, as approved by the House of Representatives imposed unfair burdens on certain firms and, furthermore, was "too complicated." Three weeks ago Universal filed a brief protesting against the bill with the joint Senate-House finance committee. (See HERALD of August 24th, page 14.)

Would Pay 47% of Net

Universal would have to pay a tax of more than 47 percent of its estimated net income, in spite of the fact that the company would derive no direct benefits from defense or government contracts, according to Mr. Cowdin. He said this was almost double the tax rate imposed on the majority of other corporations by the same bill, which he termed inequitable, discriminatory, and, in effect, confiscatory. He added, "The company has no objection to paying whatever taxes the country may require, providing all other corporations pay a like percentage of their net profits."

To prove his point that the bill is "obviously disastrous to any normally growing company, which is the backbone of America," and particularly unfair—as now written, to Universal, Mr. Cowdin quoted the following table of net earnings of the company, after Federal income taxes:

YEAR	PROFIT	LOSS
1932	.....	$1,250,283.00
1933	.....	1,016,893.00
1934	$273,068.00	.....
1935	.....	677,186.00
1936	.....	1,835,419.00
1937	.....	1,084,999.00
1938	.....	591,178.00
1939	1,153.321.00	.....
1940 (partly estimated)	2,025,000.00	.....

"The effect of the bill, as drawn, would be disastrous on Universal," Mr. Cowdin said. "It was compelled to borrow on a short term basis, during its years of losses, and currently owes over $4,880,000. It owes accrued and unpaid dividends of approximately $2,958,000 on its preferred stocks. It has a sinking fund requirement on its first preferred stock which must be met. How is it possible for the Company to meet these requirements, if it has to pay over forty-seven per cent (47%) of its earnings to the Government?"

Recommends Amendments

Mr. Cowdin made the following specific recommendations for amendments to the bill: that earnings on invested capital be computed at eight instead of five per cent before the tax applies; that corporations be allowed to select the results of any one of the last four years as the base for determining excess profits, instead of the formula provided in the House measure, and that corporations be permitted a credit of eight per cent on their gross business before the imposition of any tax; that consolidated returns be permitted.

He said further, "If these specific suggestions are not acceptable, I urge your committee in its deliberations to work out a tax bill which will eliminate the inequitable and discriminatory features of the measure under consideration.

"If it is the purpose of this Bill to tax excess profits resulting from government or other war-time contracts, then the inequalities and discriminations existing in the present draft of the Bill should be eliminated. However, if in reality the purpose of this Bill is to raise a specific or certain revenue to help meet government necessities—let's frankly face it, and increase the normal rate on all corporations sufficiently to make up for any loss in revenue resulting from the elimination of such inequalities and discriminations," Mr. Cowdin concluded.

Cases to Be Adjusted

Senator Alben W. Barkley, majority leader, remarked, following the testimony of Mr. Cowdin, that some sort of a tribunal would be set up under the bill to adjust "hardship cases."

Under the bill, as passed by the House, profits may be computed upon the average earnings for the 1936-39 period or upon the invested capital over that period. In the latter alternative the levy would start at 20 percent of the first $20,000 excess profits and run up to 45 percent over $500,000. Corporations computing their tax on the basis of invested capital are to be allowed a credit of seven percent on capital up to $500,000 and five percent in excess of that amount.

A number of relief provisions were incorporated in the bill by the House, under which corporations which suffered during the base period from floods, fires or other losses which were not covered by insurance are to be allowed to add those losses to their income in computing their base-period average, and corporations which suffered capital losses will be permitted to reduce the amount of invested capital to the extent of earned capital lost. Under this latter provision, if a corporation with an invested capital of $100,000 earned $10,000 in one year and lost $20,000 the next year it would be considered as having an invested capital of $90,000.

Bill Structure Undetermined

The final structure of the bill has not yet been determined. On Monday the Senate changed the requirements on amortization of factories built for defense purposes, eliminated the special ten percent excess profits tax on "war-contracts," a flat exemption of $10,000, instead of $5,000 and authority for corporations to include tax exempt bonds as invested capital if the interest is reported as income for excess profits tax purposes and a requirement to include partially tax exempt bonds.

Herman, resigned, and J. A. Pritchard, Memphis branch manager, takes over the post vacated by Baron at Charlotte.

"U" THIRD QUARTER NET IS $780,802

Consolidated net earnings of Universal Pictures Company, Inc. and subsidiaries for the thirteen weeks ended July 27th, constituting the third quarter of the company's fiscal year, amounted to $780,802 before Federal income taxes and special amortization reserve, J. Cheever Cowdin, chairman of the board, announced Monday. This compares with a net profit of $250,417 in the corresponding quarter of last year and a net loss of $184,964 in the third quarter two years ago. All sterling balances included in the latest earnings are taken in at the official rate.

Net earnings for the thirty-nine weeks ended July 27, 1940, on the same basis amounted to $2,161,804, as compared with $989,995 in the thirty-nine weeks ended July 29, 1939, Mr. Cowdin said. Two years ago in the corresponding period the company experienced a net loss of $773,247.

It was reported elsewhere that Universal's net earnings for the fourth quarter, ending October 27th are expected to be about $250,000, giving the company a net profit of $2,025,000 for the year.

Monogram Shift To Coast Begins

Monogram Pictures began moving its sales and executive offices to the Coast this week with the departure from New York on Monday of Lou Lifton, director of advertising and publicity, and of Madeline White, secretary to W. Ray Johnston, president of the company. Mr. Johnston and Edward A. Golden, general sales manager, are already established on the Coast, at the company's new quarters in the International Studio, Hollywood. Other Eastern personnel will depart for Hollywood this week and next.

Scott R. Dunlap, head of production, will remain at the Talisman Studio, in Hollywood, old site of the company, it was learned. Other Monogram producers will work from International. Monogram's lease of the studio includes an option to purchase at any time during the lease.

Mr. Lifton will direct advertising in the new setup, and Bill Peirce, former coast director of advertising and publicity, will handle publicity only. Directors of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, of New York, tendered Mr. Lifton a farewell luncheon on Friday, September 6th; and, that afternoon, personnel of the New York office paid respects to Mr. Lifton and Miss White, at an office party.

Senate Approves Walker For Postmaster General

Frank Comerford Walker's nomination to succeed James A. Farley as United States Postmaster General was approved last week by the Senate, without opposition or debate.

The oath of office was taken Wednesday by Mr. Walker before President Roosevelt. Associate Justice Stanley F. Reed of the Supreme Court administered the oath.

Mr. Walker is president of Comerford Theatres, Inc., and of Comerford Publix Corporation, and is general counsel for the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America. His theatre duties are being assumed by his aide of many years, J. J. O'Leary.

The late M. E. Comerford, founder of the circuit of that name, was Mr. Walker's uncle and it was as general counsel and manager of Mr. Comerford's theatre interests that he entered the film industry actively in 1925.

Mr. Walker is the first film executive chosen for a presidential cabinet. He will relinquish the position of general counsel of the MPTOA.

ASCAP REJECTS BMI CHALLENGE TO DEBATE

John G. Paine Sees no Subject or Need; Both Sides Claim Added Membership Support

The "utter futility" of a public debate between ASCAP and Broadcast Music, Inc., on the controversy raging between the two over music, was pointed out by John G. Paine, general manager of ASCAP, in a statement issued Tuesday in New York, although it had been hinted that the latter organization might accept the challenge, offered by BMI.

New Members Cited

Mr. Paine said in part:

"I cannot see any subject of debate between ASCAP and BMI, unless perhaps, it would be on the question of which has the better repertoire, and which offers the most services to band leaders, vocalists, broadcasters, sponsors and the public—not in promises, but in results.

"For example, 39 new members joined ASCAP in August, and 118 have been admitted since January 1st. Many more will be added before the end of the year.

"The only question between ASCAP and the radio broadcasting industry is the contract which ASCAP has sent to every station and every chain as the basis for licensing after this year. The contract does not involve BMI in any way, shape or form. Discussions of contracts are not as a rule matters of public debate, but matters of orderly business procedure and negotiations."

The challenge to debate originally came to BMI from Irving Caesar, president of the Song Writers Protective Association. In declining, Sydney M. Kaye, vice president and general counsel, informed Mr. Caesar that his group's quarrel was not with the song writers or publishers, but with ASCAP.

He declared his willingness, however, to debate the issues of the controvery with ASCAP, before a group of broadcasters, ASCAP members and song writers.

New ASCAP Members

Some 39 composers and authors were added to the roster of the ASCAP at the last meeting of the Board of Directors, the largest number ever admitted in a single month, it has been announced by Gene Buck, president. Among the new members are:

Meredith Willson, Fred Waring, Nancy Hamilton, Sammy Timberg, musical director for Max Fleischer cartoons; Gladys Shelley, Louis Prima, Dick Jurgens, Ella Fitzgerald and others.

Meanwhile, BMI announced that the following nine radio stations had been added since September 1st: KOB, Albuquerque, N. M.; WKBN, Youngstown, Ohio; WGAN, Portland, Me.; WOPI, Bristol, Tenn.; WHOM, Jersey City, N. J.; WOMI, Owensboro, Ky.; KHAS, Hastings, Neb.; KDRO, Sedalia, Mo.; KBND, Bend, Ore.

Hearing has been set in Federal Court, Omaha, for October 5th, when attorneys for ASCAP and the State are slated to file a stipulation in connection with the record of litigation involving the state's anti-ASCAP law, to be forwarded to the U. S. Supreme Court. The State of Nebraska is appealing from the Federal statutory court's decision declaring the law unconstitutional.

Broadcast Music, Inc., is no longer trying to obtain the music catalogues of the Miller, Robbins, and Feist companies, also of New York, and controlled by MGM, a BMI spokesman said on Tuesday.

The negotiations for these catalogues were started several months ago, as BMI, established by the National Association of Broadcasters to supplant the American Society of Composers, Authors, and Publishers as a music source for radio, screen, and stage, attempted to build up not only a group of music writers, but a reserve of music catalogues from ASCAP and non-ASCAP music publishers.

Difficulty of raising enough money to meet the MGM-Robbins terms, and then the possible legal difficulties which might arise, were cited for the dropping of the negotiations. Several weeks ago, a plan was broached whereby the Columbia Broadcasting System, a subscriber to BMI, would acquire the MGM catalogues, and then resell, later, at cost, to BMI; but this too, apparently, has been dropped.

Tronolone Replaces Frankel at Pathe

Daniel Frankel, sales manager of Pathe Laboratories, is no longer with that company as of last week, ending an association dating back to 1930. He is succeeded by Nick Tronolone, who has been with the company for the past four years.

For five years before joining Pathe Mr. Frankel headed his own distribution concern in Europe, being franchise holder for Metro and old DeMille-Pathe before returning to the United States in 1930 to join Pathe International. When the parent, Pathe Exchange, was sold to RKO in 1931, he remained with Pathe in charge of foreign activities as well as the subsequent liquidation of foreign branches. He then returned to New York to distribute Pathe reissues.

Mr. Tronolone started in the industry as a cameraman and later operated his own laboratory. He was in the Consolidated Film Industries sales department for 12 years prior to joining Pathe. For the past few months he has been in charge of Pathe's New York laboratory.

William Baer, formerly Mr. Tronolone's assistant, will assume charge of the New York laboratory. Mr. Baer has been with Pathe Laboratories for the past three years, prior to which he was with Pathe News for 17 years.

N. Y. Paramount Booked to January

The Paramount theatre, on Broadway, has completed its booking schedule for the rest of 1940, according to Robert M. Weitman, managing director. Following "Rhythm on the River," which started a third week Wednesday, the following films have been booked in the order named: "Rangers of Fortune," "I Want a Divorce," "Victory," "Arise, My Love," "Northwest Mounted Police" and "Love Thy Neighbor," the Jack Benny-Fred Allen film, which will conclude the year. Various name bands will appear in conjunction with the pictures.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

First National

TORRID ZONE: Pat O'Brien, James Cagney, Ann Sheridan, Andy Devine, Helen Vinson—Good action picture that had some draw. Should please. Running time, 88 minutes. Played August 16-17.—Rudolph Covi, Covi Theatre, Herminie, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ANOTHER THIN MAN: William Powell, Myrna Loy—Very good entertainment which was enjoyed by all my patrons. Two popular stars in a good story. Can recommend this one for any spot. Running time, August 17.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

BOOM TOWN: Clark Gable, Spencer Tracy, Claudette Colbert, Hedy Lamarr—The Criterion never plays a picture for more than one week but "Boom Town" was so good that it ran the picture for three weeks and to pleased, capacity business. 'Nuff said and the picture is just splendid. Running time, 116 minutes. Played August 29.—William Noble, Criterion Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General patronage.

GONE WITH THE WIND: Clark Gable, Vivien Leigh, Leslie Howard, Olivia de Havilland, Hattie McDaniel—The best kind of entertainment, even for a small spot of 250 people. Although not a money maker for the exhibitor, every theatre, even in the small communities, should play it. Exquisite color and tops all product. Running time, 228 minutes. Played August 28.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

LUCKY NIGHT: Robert Taylor, Myrna Loy—Pretty good for our farm lads who don't appreciate sophisticated love. We did well account of having our annual beauty contest picking "Miss Tilbury."—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

PRIDE AND PREJUDICE: Laurence Olivier, Greer Garson, Mary Boland, Edna May Oliver, Maureen O'Sullivan, Ann Rutherford—Good picture but poor business. Not a small town picture. The women liked but the men walked out. Running time, 118 minutes. Played August 28-29.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

TWENTY MULE TEAM: Wallace Beery, Leo Carrillo, Marjorie Rambeau—This was okay but we have had better Beery pictures. He is very popular here and always does well by us. The story seemed weak in this feature but Beery and Carrillo are always good. It did better at the box office than "Young Tom Edison" or "Edison, the Man." Business above average. Running time, 83 minutes. Played August 18-19.—S. L. George, Mountain Home Theatre, Mountain Home, Idaho. Rural patronage.

WATERLOO BRIDGE: Vivien Leigh, Robert Taylor—Very fine production that stirs the emotion. A deep and tender love story moves swiftly to a cataclysmic climax; a romance sacrificed to the war fury gods. Believing her fiance killed in France, the girl becomes desperate and disillusioned and becomes a "How you kid" girl. Her lover returns to confront the girl with a problem that offers only one solution. Play it by all means. Running time, 107 minutes. Played August 30-31.—Rudolph Covi, Covi Theatre, Herminie, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

WATERLOO BRIDGE: Vivien Leigh, Robert Taylor—Here's sure fire entertainment. Everyone satisfied. Taylor's best since his first, "Magnificent Obsession." Running time, 108 minutes. Played August 18-19.—Frank J. Margiotta, Beacon Theatre, Long Island City, N. Y.

WE WHO ARE YOUNG: Lana Turner, John Shelton—Putrid.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

Paramount

BISCUIT EATER, THE: Billy Lee, Cordell Hickman—Here's one they all liked. Had no way to sell it but we did not hear an adverse comment and saw quite a few hankies among the women. It's a good entertainment and the subject appeals to almost everybody. Business fair. Running time, 80 minutes. Played August 16-17.—S. L. George, Mountain Home Theatre, Mountain Home, Idaho. Rural patronage.

BUCK BENNY RIDES AGAIN: Eddie "Rochester" Anderson, Jack Benny, Andy Devine, Ellen Drew—Benny's radio show drew a very good piece of business but "Rochester" provided all entertainment. Suggest giving him 50-50 billing with Benny. Running time, 85 minutes. Played August 4-6.—Frank J. Margiotta, Beacon Theatre, Long Island City, N. Y. General patronage.

COMIN' ROUND THE MOUNTAIN: Bob Burns, Una Merkel.—This is just a palooka. You can't say anything else for it. The lines are stupid and the acting with the exception of Burns and Merkel is very indifferent. It missed out completely. Our folks like Burns but they didn't like this picture. Skip it if you can. Running time, 62 minutes. Played August 23-24.—S. L. George, Mountain Home Theatre, Mountain Home, Idaho. Rural patronage.

THOSE WERE THE DAYS: William Holden, Bonita Granville, Judith Barrett, Ezra Stone—Another picture evidently produced for double billing. These producers had better sell their racing stables and polo outfits and try and earn the fabulous salaries they are reported to get. I can't help but think that they are not in there pitching else we would not have had the percentage of poor pictures this season and it has reached the all high mark, if I remember right. They squawk about losing the foreign market. They, in my opinion, are not concentrating on the one outlet they have, the home one. Incidentally, on this five picture thing that Arnold is forcing on the industry. Why don't the exhibitors go after their Senators and Congressmen?—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

UNTAMED: Ray Milland, Patricia Morison, Akim Tamiroff—Good picture with excellent color. Thought the story a bit weak and Patricia Morison not too strong but our folks liked it and said so. The outdoor scenes were very good and the color beautiful. Business average but way under a year ago. Running time, 82 minutes. Played August 4-5.—S. L. George, Mountain Home Theatre, Mountain Home, Idaho. Rural patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

CARSON CITY KID: Roy Rogers, George "Gabby" Hayes, Pauline Moore, Bob Steel—Roy Rogers not as popular as Gene here but we did above average week-end business, sending them away satisfied.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

GAUCHO SERENADE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, June Storey—A natural. Thanks, Gene. Regards to you, Smiley. Thanks for your letters.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

GIRL FROM AVENUE A: Jane Withers, Kent Taylor—Good picture and good business. Running time, 70 minutes. Played August 30-31.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

MAN I MARRIED, THE: Joan Bennett, Francis Lederer, Lloyd Nolan, Anna Sten—Fair picture but poor business. Customers said too much German talk in it. Running time, 76 minutes. Played September 1-2.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

MARYLAND: Brenda Joyce, Walter Brennan, Fay Bainter, John Payne, Charles Ruggles, Hattie McDaniel, Ben Carter—This with "Swanee River" is perhaps the two best pictures that Fox has hit with. And the colored race is to the front again in Hattie McDaniel and a number of colored boys that did not get credit, especially the character known as "Shadrach."—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

RETURN OF FRANK JAMES, THE: Henry Fonda, Gene Tierney, Jackie Cooper, Henry Hull, John Carradine, J. Edward Bromberg, Donald Meek—A better than average picture, not historically true in every particular but intensely interesting and both very funny and exciting, even thrilling. Fonda, Miss Tierney, Jackie Cooper and the entire cast were excellent in their various parts. The writer saw Frank James at the Laclede Hotel in St. Louis many years ago and, being a telegraph operator, could read the Morse code as depicted by telegraph sounder on the screen. A most excellent picture and well worth seeing. Running time, 90 minutes. Played August 30-September 4.—William Noble, Criterion Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General patronage.

SAILOR'S LADY: Jon Hall, Nancy Kelly—Another bad one. They were pressing for laughs. All through the picture they did not materialize. The customers are getting scarcer and scarcer and I am telling Hollywood they will have to pick them up and lay them down in the coming season if we are to recapture the clientele that have been steadily driven away by poor product. And if you think they don't know the poor ones, you are under a delusion. They are smart and wise as they should be, a lot smarter than the producers that turn out the clucks they refuse to support.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

SAILOR'S LADY: Nancy Kelly, Jon Hall—Fair comedy which pleased on family night. Running time, 62 minutes. Played August 27.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

United Artists

OF MICE AND MEN: Burgess Meredith, Lon Chaney, Jr., Betty Field, Charles Bickford—Here's grand acting but no business. Terribly long. Can only be played as part of double with something very hilarious and light or else taken too seriously. Running time, 106 minutes. Played July 24-25.—Frank J. Margiotta, Beacon Theatre, Long Island City, N. Y. General patronage.

Universal

ALIAS THE DEACON: Bob Burns, Mischa Auer, Dennis O'Keefe—Just an ordinary picture that failed at the box office. Bob Burns doesn't draw. Universal has slipped for us this year so far. Running time, 73 minutes. Played August 28.—Rudolph Covi, Covi Theatre, Herminie, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

DARK RAPTURE: Armand Denis, Leila Roosevelt—A feature travelogue with diversified opinion. Nothing big. Played it Foto-Nite so did all right.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Warner Brothers

SATURDAY'S CHILDREN: John Garfield, Anne Shirley, Claude Rains—Not so good. Just so so. Made the mistake of playing this on A time. Running time, 101 minutes. Played August 18-19.—Rudolph Covi, Covi Theatre, Herminie, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

VIRGINIA CITY: Errol Flynn, Miriam Hopkins, Randolph Scott, Humphrey Bogart, Alan Hale—Splendid entertainment for rural folks and all my patrons, although not the picture that "Dodge City" was. These outdoor pictures are the ones that draw the small community crowds. The scenery in this feature is excellent and I can recommend this one as tops. Running time, 10 reels. Played August 22.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

At the height of her career, she was reported receiving $2,000 per week. When sound films achieved popularity, hers receded, and she appeared only in bit parts. Miss Chadwick was divorced from William Wellman, director, in 1932.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

GETTING NEARER

The test campaign for individual pictures, long advocated by this department, comes another step nearer realization with the fancy job done on Universal's "Mummy's Hand", in Utica, New York, and told about elsewhere in this issue.

First screenings of the feature assured Universal that the right kind of "boom boom" behind it would bring in much above usual grosses. To prove it, Utica was selected as a representative "trial-horse", Warners' Avon, the theatre. Charlie Smakwitz, district chief, came on with Jules Curley, zone publicity head, to back up Manager Arnold Stoltz. Completing a quartet of hard-hitters, from Universal's home office arrived Milt Crandall—and the big guns went into action.

The resulting returns caused the Universalites to grow lyrical and, better yet, to set up similarly aggressive exploitations in other situations where the boxoffice findings in the test campaign will encourage local theatremen to open the throttle wide and "go to town".

Such an experience should go a long way in convincing observant industry heads that obstacles in the way of general test campaigns can be removed, especially in the face of such promising results. After all, the motion picture essentially is no less a consumer product than toothpaste or cereal, new brands of which are definitely "road-tested" for buyer-appeal before they are launched on the national market.

THE "HOAX" CAMPAIGN

Because newspapers gave motion pictures little if any publicity in the early days of exploitation, it was considered good form to try and crash the dailies with "hoax" stunts of one kind or another. That school of showmanship has long passed. But evidently not to the entire satisfaction of theatremen who "pull one out" every now and then for reported excellent returns.

Currently noted on another page is the "Dalton" hornswoggle authored by Gay Hower and Hap Hasselo, at the State, in Worthington, Minn. By their own admission, the Round Tablers were properly told off by the civic authorities, but they also noted that the public, in crowding the theatre, took the stunt for what it was intended.

Though "hoax" stuff is generally regarded as dated, this column is not overly critical of the "fool 'em" campaign put over ingeniously and where no scars are left. In these times of too, too conventional and ofttimes montonous selling, due allowances are to be made for exploitation that aims to blast when blasting might be the answer.

THE SHOWMAN TAKES OVER

When the fair grounds were discovered to be unavailable for the annual livestock show of Licking County, Ohio, Manager Frank V. King, of the Midland, in Newark, saved the party by holding three days of matinee and night judgings on the theatre stage as added attractions to his regular show. Though the proceedings were of necessity abbreviated, limitations of time and space were not allowed to handicap the event unduly. King saw to it that everything was professionally "up to snuff."

In the issue of August 3, was reported an advance outline of what the Round Tabler had planned. With the finished campaign now on hand, Jim Cunningham gives it full space in his "Asides and Interludes" column of this issue. It is fascinating and required reading.

By the very nature of his calling, by temperament and instinct, your theatreman is well equipped to embark with enthusiasm and assurance upon projects, civic or otherwise, that would dismay the ordinary mortal.

WHERE THE CROWD WAS

Took a walk a few nights back. Looked in windows, at theatres, stopped for a beer. The windows were interesting, the fronts were usual, the beer was cold. Folks just came and went. No excitement. Nothing happened.

Turning a corner, progress was stopped by a crowd gathered around a street vendor. He was demonstrating one of those moving animal toys which ran around the sidewalk. The audience enjoyed the show.

Psychological tests prove that animated displays attract some twelve times more attention than the stationary. The street "pitcher" and his wares are offered in evidence.

Round Table In Pictures

On "Sporting Blood" at the Paramount, Waterloo, Ia., Manager Bob Fulton planted a "bookie" out front with blackboard carrying list of horses in the picture. To each person picking the winner of the big race guest tickets were awarded.

Effective was the miniature lobby setpiece constructed by Round Tabler Bill Elder in advance of "Our Town" engagement at Loew's, in Harrisburg, Pa. Conversation balloons were spotted strategically from the windows of the various houses and stores. Animation was supplied by means of lights shining through the windows.

If not inspected too closely, what might pass for a horse-drawn chariot was driven through the streets of Buffalo by two youths dressed in Roman togas as part of Dick Walsh's publicity for "Boys from Syracuse" at the Lafayette. Additional publicity was gained when the boys were arrested for driving without licenses, papers picking up the stunt for gag stories.

'Westerner' Date Hooked to Contest

The personal appearance of typical Texas girls from cities all over the state is set to feature the world premiere of "The Westerner," in Fort Worth, on Sept. 19, at the Worth and Hollywood, the visitors selected through judging contests recently concluded by theatres of the leading Texas circuits and their local papers. The competitions were sponsored in over 50 communities through a series of eliminations in which the winners were brought together at the theatres for the finals, entrants wearing sports costumes for the judging.

For the premiere, the winners are to be attired in typical Western regalia—cowgirl boots, riding skirt, blouse, jacket, gloves and ten-gallon hat, which the theatremen generally promoted from local merchants in exchange for advertising. At the opening, the girls will act as hostesses to the stars and other celebrities on hand for the occasion, and during the premiere at the theatres will compete for the title of "Typical Texan 1940," with Gary Cooper on the judging committee. The girl selected for these honors will be brought to New York for a day at the Texas State building at the World's Fair.

Included in the complete campaigns arranged for the contest by Interstate and Texas Consolidated were trailers, lobby posters, newspaper features, application blanks, etc. Other circuits cooperating in the same manner were Jefferson Amusement, Robb & Rowley, Okay and representing Loew's was the Houston unit. All unmarried girls between 18 and 24 were eligible, the rulings requesting that applications be accompanied by recent snapshots.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Numerous Street Stunts Aid Caldwell on "Hardy"

Street activities arranged by Wally Caldwell at Loew's Valentine, in Toledo for "Andy Hardy Meets Debutante" included new model car appropriately bannered, which toured the streets ahead and during run. Through cooperation of local florist roses were distributed by attractive girl to women at busy intersections, card attached read "Third anniversary rose from the Hardy Family." Pictures were taken for papers. Promoted birthday cakes with card were sent by special messenger to editors and critics of local dailies, record and radio machine was planted in lobby playing hit tunes from the picture and candid camera tieup included usher carrying a one-sheet banner on his back and life size cutout of Mickey Rooney, passersby being invited to have their picture taken with the star.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Skinner's "School Days"

Assistant manager Skinner at the Fox Theatre, in North Platte, Nebraska, cashed in on the theme and background of "Tom Brown's School Days" by tying in with merchants for window displays in which school supplies were exhibited. The windows carried a liberal sprinkling of accessories and the exploitation was timed to catch the attention of youths just reporting back to school from their summer vacations.

The "Daltons" Come to Town and Cause a Lot of Buzzing

Arriving at his desk of a recent morning, the editor of the Worthington, Minn., daily found a crudely written, misspelled note, tied to two one-dollar bills. It read: "Grat, where are you hiding? Get in touch with us at the old place," and was signed "The Daltons."

The next day, every business man in town received a small card to which was attached a 22-calibre bullet. Hand-written copy here read; "A dangerous thing to deal with," again signed by "The Daltons." The police then took a hand and two mornings later, the startled citizenry was confronted with a brown-clad dummy, hooded in black and hung from a tree in the court-house square. By now, more than a few fingers pointed at Manager Gay Hower and Hap Hasselo, publicist, at the State Theatre, who promptly denied any knowledge of the "doings."

Final act in the teaser campaign was an imprinted calling card distributed house-to-house which noted that the Daltons had called and were sorry to find the folks not home. The community thus stirred up to a proper pitch, the theatremen spilled the works by inviting the press to a showing of the trailer for "When the Daltons Rode," and write they were very nice about the plant, as attested to in the newspaper accounts. They further explained the campaign in a vigorous two-column ad which also praised the picture as worthy of such high-power ballyhoo.

The Round Tablers escaped with a thorough reprimand from the city fathers but found that when the populace got over the excitement there was a lot of agreement generally that the campaign was worthwhile in building up the date, as proven by the excellent business the picture brought in.

Book Tieup Aids Austin on "ATAHT"

Through tieup effected with the book department of local department store, Frank Austin at the Fairmont Theatre, in Fairmont, West Va., window displays of copies of "All This and Heaven Too" were featured as part of his campaign for that picture. In addition to window and counter displays, specially imprinted bookmarks were distributed with each book purchased. State College cooperated by posting signs on main bulletin board and also distributing the bookmarks. Newspapers came through with serializations and art work, colored exchange heralds were used by stores, and special letter over Austin's signature was mailed to members of women's clubs, doctors, etc.

For "Dr. Cyclops," Austin started a teaser campaign week ahead with inch boxes running in cooperating paper reading: "Be Careful—Dr. Cyclops is coming!" Stunt was climaxed with contest opening day offering cash prizes and tickets to those submitting best 50-word letters on their most embarrassing experiences.

SEPTEMBER BIRTHDAY FOR DONALD DUCK

Donald Duck's birthday, just celebrated, on Friday, the 13th, by exhibitors, will continue to be spotlighted during the rest of the month on other dates for the Disney character. Advertising material to build the occasion features a miniature pressbook by RKO, with a cover suitable for linecut reproduction, distributed to theatremen and newspapers throughout the country.

Special Screening Held At Park on "Flag Speaks"

Effective was the campaign put on for "The Flag Speaks" by Ray Wernimont, manager of the State and Borge Iversen, assistant at the Paramount, both in Cedar Rapids, Ia., for its showing at the latter house. Highlight was a public screening held in local park under the auspices of the American Legion. So impressed were the local papers that, in a reported unprecedented move, they ran special ads at no cost to the theatre. Also contributing their services were the Light and Power Company which ran a separate line into the park, city authorities giving permission for free use of lights and equipment. Week ahead giant banner was placed in a prominent spot in the park calling attention to the showing, together with playdates.

Spot announcements were planted over WMT, local club presidents announced the screening at meetings and leading industrial organizations planted bulletins in their factories. Newspapers gave feature space to their reviews, and in the regular theatre ads copy for the short received prominent mention.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Selette's Spook Show

Only the strong-hearted found courage to enter the Albany Theatre, in Albany when Eddie Selette played his combination "Walking Dead" and "Old Dark House" recently. Entire front was dressed in all green lights, light paper skeletons dangled from under the marquee and illuminated skeleton masks were strung along the entrance and in box office window. Dummy on operating table with special copy was planted at sidewalk with two headless dummies, and entire staff was dressed in interne uniforms during run.

SHOWMEN'S LOBBY LAFFS

Patron: Excuse me, gentlemen, but is this the hit show advertised in today's paper?

Baseball Contest Arranged By Barcroft for "Night"

Tying up with local clothing store, Johnny Barcroft, RKO publicity director in Columbus, Ohio, for "They Drive by Night" at the RKO Palace, conducted a baseball contest whereby announcements were made nightly over WFOL on the store's "Sports Parade" program giving full details of the contest and picture plug. Guest tickets in this connection were awarded to listeners picking the greatest number of baseball winners in the National League, American League and American Association. Other radio coverage included a half dozen one-minute featurettes over WCOL with gratis picture plugs, and Hollywood commentators over WBNS and WHKC also used feature material on the picture.

Safety campaign included the parking of a wrecked truck in front of the theatre with police guard, car appropriately bannered, Ann Sheridan autographed fan photos were distributed and newspapers were supplied with feature stories for use in advance and during run.

Folks were treated to the rare sign of three lads dressed in Grecian outfits who rode a chariot drawn by two horses down the main streets, this as part of Barcroft's ballyhoo for "Boys from Syracuse." Chariot properly bannered is reported to have attracted considerably. Music tieups included window displays of old and new tunes with setpieces and title sheets used for counter displays, while bandleaders whipped out their old arrangements from the stage hit and the new songs from the screen play which were dedicated to "The Boys," on opening night.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Boyle's "Pride" Contest

"A Mother Asks Advice" was the title of a contest planted in the Syracuse Post-Standard by Joe Boyle, assistant manager of Loew's, in that city, as part of his "Pride and Prejudice" contest.

Readers of the paper were required to send in solutions in one hundred words to a problem posed by Mrs. Bennet (the mother in the film) on how to get suitable husbands for her five daughters. Cash prizes and guest tickets were awarded to the winning entries.

Parade in Buffalo Honors 'Ramparts'

Herald inserts in Life and Time magazines, a local first-time, spotlighted the campaign arranged by Charlie Taylor, Buffalo Theatres ad head, for "Ramparts We Watch," at Shea's Great Lakes, the date otherwise emphasized by a giant street parade put on with the American Legion.

The procession, taking place on the morning of opening day, was composed of units from the Legion, the "40 and 8" box car, Army and Navy units, Sea Scouts, among others. In line also was Col. Clarence Stowell, who appeared in the picture and was brought to town for personal appearances at the theatre. Here, a special front was constructed, carrying out the red, white and blue theme, with Army and Navy flags strung from the upright to the marquee.

Bulletin board cards were planted in all factories in the area, Taylor additionally hanging the cards, properly stamped and addressed, on mailboxes in the downtown area for street attention. Post cards were mailed to Legion members, Boy and Girl Scout troops, personal announcements made at lunch and civic club meetings. Midget telegram messages were included by Postal.

The newspaper campaign starting with teasers, was highlighted with an opening half-page type ad, entitled "A Motion Picture Only Americans Will Like," and selling the thought that the attraction was one that every American should see.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Pearlstein Searches For "Lucky Partners"

Manny Pearlstein, Warner ad man in Cleveland, won newspaper breaks, including the front cover, when he tied in with the Cleveland Press on "Lucky Partners" for that date at the Hippodrome. The basis of the promotion was a contest in which those entering wrote letters as to why they considered themselves lucky in their selection of partners for life. Letters were limited to 100 words and were mailed to the "Lucky Partners" contest at the Cleveland Press.

The major prize was a three-day, all-expense-paid trip for two persons to Niagara Falls, with first-class accommodations at the King Edward Hotel. Additional prizes of 25 pairs of tickets to the Hippodrome were awarded to other contestants.

CRITICS BREAKFAST ON "BREAKFAST" TIEIN

On the morning that "He Stayed for Breafast" opened at Warner's Earle and Boyd, Philadelphia, Ev Callow tied in with a leading downtown hotel to deliver breakfast to the home of each of the local critics, the trays holding printed cards personally addressed with the information that the "eats" were on the stars of the picture.

The stunt caused a bit more commotion than usual in that it was duly noted by all the columnists with appropriate attention to the date.

'Mummy's Hand' Excites Uticans

Termed "public shocker No. 1," and the picture that "makes a sissy out of Frankenstein," Universal's new horror-show, "The Mummy's Hand" was introduced at Warners' Avon, Utica, N. Y., with a campaign aimed to scare the locals for a week of Sundays, and that brought in highly gratifying grosses. Under the supervision of district manager, Charley Smakwitz, a strong newspaper campaign was knitted together, the front decorated in an Egyptian tomb motif framing a sarcophagus with a mummy inside lighted by green spots.

Working with Jules Curley, zone ad head, Manager Arnold Stoltz fashioned a smelling salts card giveaway for the timid, distributed envelopes carrying sticks of gum, copy advising "don't chew your nails when you see," etc. Giant cutout green heads, colorfully lettered, were planted on posts and light standards in the business section, on flag-poles leading to the theatre. Other "stop-em" gags included a lobby first-aid station with nurses in attendance, a mystic mummy hand moved via magnet on a plate of glass in a lobby setpiece.

On hand from the Universal home office, Milt Crandall, that old-time power-house, broke into the tough local dailies with a number of smart features topped with an offer to buy a mummy for exploitation on the picture. Crandall knew that the section, the center of the famed Mohawk Valley, was the final resting place of countless embalmed redskins and the theatremen were all set for the many calls that poured in, in answer to his request.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Circularizes Newlyweds On "Lucky Partner" Date

Since so much prominence is being given in the nation's newspapers to the daily lists of "war" marriages, Manager George French, Publicist Bill Morton for "Lucky Partners" at the RKO Albee, in Providence, tied in on this natural by circularizing the marriage list with letter reading: "Congratulations on your choice for your Lucky Partner and accept the best wishes of this theatre on your forthcoming marriage. Speaking of Lucky Partners, we want you to be our guest to see Ginger Rogers and Ronald Coleman in," etc., etc.

Theatremen also tied up the Providence Amateur Baseball League, which has a membership of 1,000 and is composed of 64 teams by dubbing two boys on each team who had scored a lucky play, "Lucky Partners," and presenting them with passes to see the show. This rated gratis radio time and newspaper space. While an exclusive bathing pavilion at Narragansett held a movie ball Saturday night before opening, 24's, 6's and 3's were spotted. Numerous merchants came through with co-op ads and windows, jewelers featuring Libby Glass used in the picture, utilities company tying up a range and electrolux as lucky partners in the kitchen, etc., etc., and newspaper coverage included full page of fashions on Ginger Rogers in the Sunday paper, stories used in 20 suburban papers on opening and art used daily two weeks ahead.

THE FINISH LOOMS

That the exploitation possibilities in the current releases have been definitely recognized by theatremen in the field is distinctly to be noted in the wide listing of winners in the current period of the Awards. (Below) Concentration on the laughs in "Great McGinty" at the Colonial, Richmond, Va., was decided upon by Al Nowitsky in confining copy to a few lines on the comedy in addition to the credits. Romance was sold through the close-up at top, with atmospheric art in keeping with the story. Size: 90 lines on 3 columns.

THE CHART

Productions are listed under distributors. Features in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed as "Coming Attractions." Parenthesis after title denotes audience classification: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following classification are production numbers. Dagger (†) indicates the 1940-41 season. Asterisk (*) after title denotes first appearance.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures.

When a production is reviewed the running time is as given by the studio and this is denoted by an asterisk (*) preceding the number. When the home office has established the running time for national release, the studio figure is changed. Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions or repairs to the film may cause variations.

ADMISSIONS

ONCE again, in new guise, all of the issues between production-distribution and exhibition have rekindled in controversy over pressures on admission price control.

This admissions controversy has flamed up—with all of its price-fixing implications—curiously enough just as the trade practice document, known as the "consent decree," was alleged to be about the end of the Government's anti-trust suit that was to settle everything.

The question of admission prices, their "juggling" and inferential control by production-distribution dictation, puts up emphatically questions of exhibition policy, which in some well grounded opinions can be solved and decided only by exhibitors—with decisions as various as are their local conditions.

That means once again that there is another "remote control" movement.

Also, within the larger question of controls, is the problem of exhibition with its public. One position is that the motion picture is a habit, dependent on the consistent, repeated, patronage of its followers. It is contended that these customers, a majority of them being wage earners, want to know what they are going to spend when they set out for the movies. The other position is that every film show is another and new entertainment enterprise, a new proposition to the public and that there will be acceptance of a variable price based on the entertainment value of the picture—the acceptance being on the assumption that picture goers are all, or mainly, shoppers.

THESE issues and the current debate are, obviously enough, a primary consequence of the breaking of scales upward for "Gone with the Wind" and secondarily a re-excitement of the issues by the advocacy, if not enforcement, of advanced scales for "Boomtown," merchandised under the same auspices.

There is, it must be observed, considerable difference between the products concerned. "Gone with the Wind" was extraordinary in every aspect, including an exceptionally long period of special promotion of book and picture, resulting in a very special position in the public mind. "Boomtown," on the other hand, excellent picture as it is, is rather in the category of the star-flooded, double-portions-of-talent items like "Grand Hotel" and "Dinner at Eight."

Neither of these current pictures can be expected to represent a norm on which a national policy of exhibition admissions is to be erected. That can be considered made apparent enough, just incidentally, by the fact that "Boomtown" is the top of a double bill in Loew's State in Providence, Rhode Island, and is playing single bills in many independent houses. Meanwhile Wednesday it was said M-G-M had decided on a single bill policy for "Boomtown" in metropolitan New York.

There is considerable evidence, and always has been, that the best authority on how to run a theatre in any given situation, and that includes admission prices, is the local exhibitor—the retailer who deals with the customers the year around, and ever under an implied quota that he must on his own account continuously do the best job he can for his box office, in which the rest of the industry shares.

NOW that we are going into the big army business, with posts all about the country, filled with young men who will be taking their civilian entertainment habits with them, there may well be an eye to keeping them for customers through the training period, too.

Being a bit mindful of how certain external interests, quite as full of enterprise as social purpose, tried in amateur fashion to tend to the matter in the days of the World War I, it will be appropriate to let this job of showmanship be handled by showmen this time.

It is likely that amply able authorities on the show business and how to do it will be found available, and cooperative, in every training area.

ABOUT "MR."

A LETTER to PM, New York's eccentric daily, which will print most anything, complains about the title "Mister". The complainant seems to feel that there is class distinction in it, and that it is in consequence pretty bad.

There really is a sort of distinction involved. In the United States it has about the equivalent meaning that Citizen acquired in the French revolution, and signifies a little less, classwise, than "The Hon." does in British practice, class conscious democracy.

It is the practice of the best journalism, in the United States, to give the recipient of attention his full name—John Smith—the first time his name appears, and thereafter to refer to him as Mr. Smith, unless he be a very Capone, en route to iron gates.

You are "Mr." in the Herald.

PHOTOPLAY MERGES

AT year's end Photoplay Magazine, long ago in its youth, and under the administration of the late Mr. James R. Quirk, dominant among the fan publications of the screen, is to go into merger with Movie Mirror, at ten cents the copy. Photoplay has for some years been a Macfadden publication, like the Mirror. The merged magazine will, says the announcement, "retain the Movie Mirror popular tempo." Contemporaries of Photoplay's prideful years of its beginning and its long career of capable attention to the better product in behalf of the upper ranges of the screen audience will be regretting its passing.

SEVEN years ago Wednesday Sime Silverman was laid away in the peace of Cypress Hills, and this week again by their annual custom the faithful of his Variety office and familiars of the Broadway he lived and loved went out to honor his memory and keep it green. He was, and is, one not to be forgotten.

This Week in the News

Those Statistics

MGM, through Art Schmidt writing from "the press agent's corner" of the advertising and publicity department, in New York, chides movie editors and columnists who have taken Dr. George Gallup's statement that 32,000,000 potential customers go to the theatre infrequently as a sign that the industry is decaying.

The position taken by MGM was that the original industry figures for attendance were probably too high: "Where did they get that much-quoted basic figure of 85,000,000 movie fans? Who ever said the movies have 85,000,000 average weekly attendance? The answer is an assignment for Philo Vance, not a research job," Metro claims. "It is impossible to arrive at a figure of movie fans, from available information. Neither has it been possible to gauge weekly attendance with any accuracy. Theatre attendance may vary more than 300 per cent from week to week with different attractions." MGM concluded that the industry was not as "sick" as poll figures might suggest, for "this business, with nothing but shadows to sell, shouldered its way through the depression in much better style than steel, or railroads, or many others of the more solid industries."

AMPA Honors Quigley

THE first meeting of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, in New York, for the 1940-41 season will honor Martin Quigley on his 25th anniversary as publisher of Motion Picture Herald, Leon J. Bamberger, AMPA president, has announced. The luncheon session will be held Wednesday, October 2nd at the Hotel Edison in New York.

Double Defense

Y. FRANK FREEMAN, vice-president in charge of Paramount studio operations, stressed the importance of the trend away from double bills at the meeting last week of Paramount executives and Western district managers in Kansas City, and in the course of the discussion national defense, probably for the first time, was given as a reason for eliminating double bills. It was suggested that a patriotic contribution would be made, if double features were dropped, since cutting the average double bill show from three and a half hours to two and a half hours for a single "would release a tremendous amount of collective time for work on activities vital to defense."

The story of the industry's preparations to serve the Government in the cause of preparedness appears on page 13.

Consent No Settlement, Says Jackson; Exhibitors Take Decree Fight to Court

Pressures, threats and opinions converged from several directions this week on the proposed consent decree settlement of the Government's New York trust suit, on the eve of the completion of a final document in time for court approval on the October 7th deadline. The decree is understood to have been placed in the hands of Attorney General Robert H. Jackson in Washington Tuesday.

Earlier, Mr. Jackson had made it clear that the acceptance of a consent decree by the court would not finally end the case. All it would do, he explained, would be to suspend it during a three-year trial period, that the results would be closely watched and if the interests of exhibitors were found to be insufficiently protected further action would be taken.

The Attorney General's participation in the settlement will be confined to his passing on the decree as finally promulgated, the matter continuing up to then in the hands of Thurman H. Arnold, assistant attorney general.

As of midweek, a subcommittee of defense and Government counsel in New York was giving the document the legal phraseology it requires for court presentation. The negotiation state had been passed, and, despite the countrywide protests of exhibitors against the blocks-of-five and advance trade showing sections, there are no important changes expected between now and delivery of the decree to Federal Judge Henry W. Goddard, in New York, in two weeks.

Before deciding on acceptance of the decree or a rejection which would return the case to trial, Judge Goddard may hear parties not directly involved, such as complaining exhibitors.

In this connection, organized exhibitor opposition to the blocks-of-five clause, confined heretofore to resolutions, statements and appeals to Thurman Arnold, crystallized along more tangible channels on Tuesday when independents of Ohio petitioned Judge Goddard not to approve the decree while it contains the five-block sale provision, because "it will cause inestimable chaos and will multiply manyfold the disadvantages under which independent owners are now compelled to operate their theatres, will increase rentals and prevent the elimination of undesirable pictures". Complaining exhibitors generally want retention of the present bulk sale, with a 20 per cent cancellation privilege.

Organizations this week filing protests against the section included Northwest Allied, United Theatre Owners of Illinois and the Associated Theatre Owners of Indiana, adding to the score already on record. The New York ITOA reports a 100 per cent vote against the section from exhibitors, in its national poll.

Broadway heard Tuesday that Government agents were making informal investigation of the possibility of exhibitor opposition being fomented by the consent decree holdouts, Columbia, United Artists, and Universal.

Arbitration in Canada

AFTER virtually a year of negotiation, the Canadian film industry is creating an organization to discuss and settle clearance schedules and disputes. The organization will be called the National Clearance Board, and will have six members: three representing circuits, and three the independent theatre owners.

When the Board starts functioning, regional boards for the six trade zones of the Dominion will be appointed. The Board will probably be based in Toronto. Representatives of the independent theatre owners will probably be chosen from Western Canada, from the territory East of Montreal, and from the Province of Ontario.

A previous plan for a clearance board, now dropped, had called for two representatives of the distributors.

The present setup was adopted following conferences between N. L. Nathanson, president of Famous Players Canadian Corporation; Harry Alexander, president of the Independent Theatres Association of Ontario; and N. A. Taylor, ITA vice-president.

RKO in Spain

RKO RADIO Pictures has entered into arrangements for the production of a series of pictures in Spain, according to information from Reginald Armour, RKO European manager who has just returned to his Lisbon, Portugal, office from a visit to Madrid. The first subject, for the production of which Spanish authorities are lending cooperation, is titled "El Crucero Baleares."

Mr. Armour reports a substantial betterment in conditions in Spain since his previous visit 10 months ago.

"The progress being made in general conditions in Spain is very encouraging, especially when it is realized that nearly all of the country's heavy industries, factories, power plants, communication systems were seriously damaged or destroyed during the civil war.

"There has been very little material available with which to repair the thousands of buildings which were destroyed. However, rebuilding is making substantial progress. Several of the important theatres in Madrid are in process of being re-decorated and re-seated and some of them are having new fronts constructed. All of this is heroic when you take into consideration the scarcity of materials of all kinds."

From his Lisbon headquarters, Mr. Armour says, he has been able recently to maintain contact, directly or indirectly, with all branch offices in Europe and the Near East with the exception of Poland.

Plays for Films

MARKING the first time that representatives of the three interests have conferred jointly, officers of the Dramatists' Guild, the League of New York Theatres, and representatives of Warners, MGM, and Paramount were to meet in New York Thursday to revive the plan to permit film companies to buy picture rights to a play before the play is produced.

The majors seek three changes: a limitation on the price of picture rights for a play; securing of such rights under option instead of sale; a better formula for closing a play, if it loses money.

Censor Reversal

STATE censors in Pennsylvania Wednesday ordered suppression of the March of Time's "The Ramparts We Watch," although they had previously approved it. The film opened Wednesday morning at the Senate theatre, Harrisburg, and Park theatre, Reading, both owned by Jay Emanuel of Philadelphia.

At noon, Mrs. Edna Carroll, chairman of the state censor board, offices of which are in the Philadelphia building housing Mr. Emanuel's offices, ordered him to cease showing the picture by one o'clock that afternoon, or have it confiscated.

Mrs. Carroll and her board had approved the film on August 9th but in her statement Wednesday she said that since she had reviewed the picture, a new reel had been inserted, scenes, much publicized by March of Time, from the German propaganda film, "Baptism of Fire."

The board action was called "the most outrageous action in the history of censorship," by Mr. Emanuel after he had ordered the film to continue to be shown, the projection booths locked and watched at both theatres, and after he had engaged lawyers in Harrisburg.

Product Peace Deal

A SETTLEMENT of the three-year dispute between Famous Players Canadian Corporation and United Artists in Canada was reported near Wednesday. Famous Players theatres throughout Canada would again play United Artists films, on a split basis, according to the situation in each city.

In 1937 N. L. Nathanson, head of Famous Players which had the UA franchise in Canada, refused to renew it at UA's reported 40 percent terms.

The first sign that the situation was clearing came the other day when the first run Loew theatre in Montreal, one of the 600 houses in the Famous Players chain, booked UA's "Foreign Correspondent." It was reported that in Montreal Famous Players would probably play 15 out of the 25 releases scheduled by UA and the Orpheum, former franchise holder, would take the others.

The deal has not been signed yet but indications are that it will be in time for Famous Players to get first call on Charles Chaplin's "The Great Dictator."

One of the principal reasons for the agreement was said to be due to the fact that the Famous chain bought into the United Amusement and Confederation circuits, large neighborhood groups, and had also made pooling deals in other cities of the Dominion.

Jimmy's Jukes

JAMES ROOSEVELT, the President's son, had his first premiere as a "juke-box" producer on Friday, September 13th, when his first nine three-minute subjects made for the Mills Novelty Company nickel-in-the-slot machines were demonstrated at the Roosevelt Hotel in Hollywood to 1,000 potential franchise holders, including 100 motion picture theatre owners. (The story of the juke box industry today is on page 25.)

Spokesmen for Globe Productions, Mr. Roosevelt's company, and Mills Novelty Company said that exhibitors over a wide area were studying their Panoram Slot-Machine Movie Service with a view to buying franchises in their territories.

The Mills representation to potential franchise holders is that the first year's operation, on a basis of ten machines, would enable the operator to pay the entire franchise and machine cost, all film rentals, service man and manager salaries and still make about $4,000.

The owner of the location where the machine is placed will get 50 per cent or more of the receipts, it was said. Nickel-in-the-slot film machines made by the Mills company sell for $695. Mass production is scheduled to begin December 1st.

CIRCUITS JOIN INDEPENDENTS IN FIRING ON 'JUGGLED' ADMISSIONS

Joseph Bernhard, of Warner Theatres, Calls Practice Injurious; National Allied Singles Out "Boom Town" for Attack

The comparatively new policy of certain distributors pushing exhibitor customers to increase admissions for certain pictures, is boiling a brand new stew, stirred again this week by National Allied and by circuit chiefs, led by Warners' Joseph Bernhard.

Independent owners call it "price juggling," describe it as injurious, in that it conveys the impression that pictures played at regular scales are inferior.

And in this some of the circuit affiliates of some distributors advocating the "juggling" are beginning to openly agree.

Joseph Bernhard, general manager of Warner Brothers Theatres, on Monday raised the question: "If you raise the price on big pictures, they (the public) ask why you don't lower the price on small pictures." Warners had tried the policy on its "All This and Heaven Too."

Urges General Increase

Speaking for Warners' 500-odd theatres, Mr. Bernhard advocated the gradual increase of box office scales generally wherever conditions permit. Operating chiefs of some of the other Big Five circuits are understood to feel favorable to this, Broadway hearing this week that some have under consideration a plan to try to effect cooperation with independents to encourage a "national offensive" for a general rise in ticket prices.

Certain circuit heads disclosed Wednesday that they were studying the matter of "juggling" admissions. John J. O'Connor, RKO theatres vice-president, reported mixed results at his circuit's theatres.

Behind all of the skyward inclinations for box office scales, of course, are distributors' lost rentals abroad and the fact that there can be no promise at this time of regaining what once represented from 15 to 25 cents of the average distribution dollar cashed in New York.

Rumblings of moves upward were heard when the Federal Defense Tax was first considered, months ago, and 95 per cent of theatres, in effect, did increase prices on July 1st.

Accepted by the public, for the most part, as a defense measure, the increase was paid with little protest by ticket buyers.

With this price increase, however, neither Hollywood nor its distribution affiliates realized any advanced income.

And out of this came the idea of some distributors to urge exhibitors to raise admissions further, at least on certain pictures recommended by the distributors. Such policies were set for half a dozen productions, but the first real test came with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Boom Town," which, that company says, is now proceeding satisfactorily, citing holdovers in every one of its first regular release engagements at advanced prices in key cities.

Last week independent owners started to attack the movement. Allied Theatre Owners of New Jersey and Allied of Connecticut fired the opening blasts, on the grounds that, "It has been the experience of subsequent run theatres that the juggling of admission prices in the past has been found to be injurious over a period of time."

Specifically, they claimed that theatre patrons would get the impression that pictures playing at regular prices were inferior, that subsequent run admissions had become standardized so that the patron on leaving his home with his family well understands the amount of money he is to spend for the evening's entertainment.

However, the most formidable attack came this week from National Allied, from its 'committee of five' which is conducting the "Allied Information Department" survey of exhibitors on distributor's prices, policies and procedure for 1940-41. All exhibitors participating have been promised to share in an exchange of information from all others. Identities of those forwarding formal questionnaires are to remain anonymous.

Allied's "AID," self-named, of which Sidney E. Samuelson, Pennsylvania, is chairman; Abram F. Myers, Washington, is general counsel, and Arthur K. Howard, Massachusetts; Don R. Rossiter, Indianapolis, and P. J. Wood, Ohio, are members, this week singled out "Boom Town," for attack, directing a letter of complaint to Wade W. Willman, manager, Loews Indianapolis exchange, at 421 North Illinois Street, in that city.

Cites Rodgers Letter

Citing grievances of non-availability of "Boom Town" to customers who had not agreed to increased admissions, and of price "juggling," the letter to Mr. Willman, a copy of which was sent to William F. Rodgers, general sales manager of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, follows:

"We wish to call to your attention that the methods which your local exchange is following in the handling of bookings on "Boom Town" is contrary to that set out in a letter addressed to the National Allied Aid Committee, by Mr. William F. Rodgers, your General Sales Manager.

"Mr. Rodgers stated in his letter that it was the intention of the company to respect the wishes of exhibitors in regard to raising prices and those that did not see their way clear to raise their admissions for 'Boom Town' would be requested to defer dating the picture until Metro has the opportunity to demonstrate the advisability of its suggestion to increase prices. Furthermore, to ask these exhibitors who do not increase prices to cooperate and not interfere with those exhibitors who are willing to raise prices.

"In addition, Mr. Rodgers also stated in his letter: 'There is no thought, however, on our part that the exhibitor's run, availability, or clearance be disturbed where they do not cooperate.'

"Numerous complaints have come into this office regarding the fact that many exhibitors who have had dates set on this picture have had them set back as many as two and three times and although the picture played in Indianapolis over a month ago and has played some of the larger Indiana cities, it is not being made available to small town exhibitors on their regular availability.

"In many instances where the exhibitors would play the picture within thirty days after the larger Indiana cities, they are being held back as much as sixty days. Could it be that the cause of this is the exhibitor's failure to increase admissions?

"At this particular time, especially after the recent increase in admissions necessitated by the National Defense Tax, we believe that the individual exhibitor is the best judge of whether his local situation will stand for an increase in admissions on certain pictures. . . .

"It is our sincere hope that you will be able to adjust the exhibitor dissatisfaction which has arisen here in Indiana on "Boom Town" and that the 'friendly' company can again be truthfully called the 'friendly' company."

Rodgers Answers Allied

Mr. Rodgers, for MGM, said Wednesday that the Allied complaint had "no basis of fact," pointing out that the letter referred to was written in general terms and cited no specific examples of the alleged practice. Mr. Rodgers further said: "We have had no complaints and the picture ('Boom Town') has not been withheld from exhibitors who have not raised admission prices."

Warners on Juggling

Expressing a viewpoint understood to be held by other operators of major circuits, the Warners' Bernhard statement, issued, on Monday, from the home office in New York, follows:

"Surveying the results of recent increases in prices on specific pictures, Joseph Bernhard, General Manager of Warner Bros. Theatres, declared the public resents a variable price policy by motion picture theatres.

" 'If you raise the price on a big picture, they ask why you don't lower the price on the small pictures,' said Mr. Bernhard.

" 'The way to obtain more money for the theatre as well as the studios, is to do what we have been doing in the Warner Theatres since last September, which is to gradually raise the regular admission prices wherever conditions warrant such increases. Any theatre organization or individual exhibitor that will give the proper consideration to the problem of increased admissions will find that the policy of a raise in regular prices is much more acceptable to the public than an occasional boost.

" 'It is a mistake to under-estimate the intelligence and the shopping skill of the public when it comes to buying entertainment. When you increase the regular admission prices, the public accepts it as part of the general movement of commodity prices; sometimes they're up, sometimes they're down. If the industrial condition is healthy, the town prosperous, the theatre well liked, you will hear very little grumbling about the increase, but when you raise the price on an individual picture, the public thinks you are taking advantage of their special desire to see a certain picture and they resent such action. . . .

" 'Besides, this business was built upon the movie habit. Upon people dropping in to see a movie and not making up their minds to see a particular production."

52% IN NORTHWEST UNSIGNED FOR 1940

Fifty-two per cent of Northwest independents responding to an Allied States questionnaire have not made any contractual commitments with the majors for 1940-41 product, and of the remaining 48 per cent, not an independent responding has negotiated more than two contracts, with the majority of these making only one or two deals.

The "Allied Information Department" of national Allied has circulated questionnaires throughout exhibition in the U. S. to determine sales policies and prices and will later exchange this information between all participants, the exhibitor reporting remaining anonymous.

INDUSTRY READY TO AID U. S. WITH FILMS FOR DEFENSE AND THE ARMY

Distributors, Exhibitors Set Up Coordinating Boards to Aid Work; Radio, Press and Newsreel Cooperation Planned

The motion picture industry was ready this week, following the signing of the selective military training and service bill by President Roosevelt and the proclamation of the first peace-time draft registration on October 16th, to complete arrangements for participation in national defense by carrying news to the public, entertainment to troops and perform any other service, such as making films for instructive purposes, requested by the Government.

Plans Discussed

Defense problems were brought up at the quarterly board meeting of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America held Wednesday in New York. George J. Schaefer, head of the industry's defense council, and other company presidents are scheduled to consider specific plans for cooperation with the Government on preparedness.

Exhibitors in many parts of the country, meanwhile, were being approached by an independent organization voluntarily formed by Paramount theatre partners for the purpose of having exhibitors prepared to offer their screens to the Government in any way requested.

The broad outlines of the industry's plans for assisting the Government in national defense, as explained Tuesday by Mr. Schaefer, include the presentation of information on developments to the public, chiefly through the newsreels and special shorts when needed, and entertainment to the troops in camps.

When required by the Government the industry would be prepared to make and distribute to all theatres special reels. Certain companies might also be called upon to lend their resources for the production of non-theatrical type films which would be exhibited by the Army or Navy for instruction purposes. The task of entertaining the army, drafted from civilian life for a year in military service is also a job in which the motion picture will play a large part.

The Paramount circuit-sponsored organization of exhibitors, according to a home office theatre executive, has been inviting theatremen in the various territories, whether affiliated or independents, to make plans for giving the Government any service desired.

A "Patriotic Service Department" of exhibitors in charge of A. H. Blank, head of the Paramount Tri-States Theatres, was established in July. Since the time the Paramount defense activities, originally conceived by Robert B. Wilby, E. V. Richards and others, has been expanded to the general organization which plans to represent all exhibitors.

It was reported that the Paramount-exhibitor defense group would probably affiliate itself with the general industry defense council.

Various branches of the industry have been preparing for any extra work required as part of the contribution to national defense. Arrangements have been made with laboratories to secure quick deliveries of a large number of prints for national distribution as quickly as possible, if needed. Special advertising, publicity and accessories have also been provided for, if an occasion requires their use.

No Government Liaison

Thus far no one has been officially appointed by the Government in Washington to handle all defense relations with the motion picture industry. Also up to now the film industry has not set up an authority which can bind all the branches and companies in the industry to any specific proposal of the Government. Officials of the MPPDA have represented the industry in certain conversations.

In Washington public relations on defense matters are being cleared through several channels: through the White House, through Robert W. Horton, public relations counsel to the Advisory Commission to the Council of National Defense and through other departments of the Government which have their own publicity offices. Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox has placed under his supervision the public relations of that service. An effort has been made to coordinate the defense publicity coming from Washington but with many branches of the Government, each with its own sphere, it was reported that there would probably always be several sources of information on defense preparations.

On matters which are handled by the National Defense Council, the Knudsen-Stettinius group, newsreel contact is made through Robert Collyer, former script writer for Universal and Paramount News. Mr. Horton, who has been in Government for over ten years and previously worked for Hearst publications, has also appointed a man to handle short subjects. It has been proposed that the Government make several shorts which would be distributed by one of the companies if found to be "theatrical" material.

The first concrete steps towards cooperation with the Government were taken by the motion picture industry four months ago when 15 executives conferred with two Army majors sent to Hollywood. At that time it was suggested that the newsreels offered the best film media for keeping the American people informed of the action being taken to make the country strong.

Newsreels Cooperating

At a meeting of newsreel officials held early in June in New York it was pointed out that the newsreels had been using all material available on national defense and it was more often the Government that would not cooperate with the newsreels. National defense was news, so it was being covered in the newsreels, it was said. However it was decided that the newsreels would attempt to give even more attention to defense developments.

Through the summer Warner Brothers have been making a series of shorts aimed at helping Army recruiting by showing the work of each branch of the military forces. Subjects in this series included, "Service with the Colors," released August 31st, and the following, in production, "The Tanks Are Coming," "March On, Marines!" and others.

Major Nathan Levinson, director of recording, Warner-First National Studios, began organizing in August a special Army reserve unit of studio technicians for services in the event of war.

"Warvets," an organization of former service men has been formed at Warner Brothers studio. A pistol, rifle and searchlight battery group is planned and an ultimate membership of 600 is anticipated. Membership is open to anyone regularly employed by Warner Brothers and not restricted to war veterans.

Early in September various industry executives had conferences with Government officials in Washington on cooperation and exhibitor representatives discussed the matter in New York. In Hollywood officers and directors of the Association of Motion Picture Producers had a defense meeting attended by Will H. Hays at which "there was discussion as to provisions to be made in various studios in event of general military conscriptions."

The Civil Service Commission has asked photographers and technicians to accept immediate positions in the War Department but the wage scales offered were attacked by the International Photographers of Motion Picture Industry union. Under the Government's civil service offer head motion picture cameramen would receive $2,600 per year; the union's scale is $12,500.

Release of "Land of Liberty," film shown at the World's Fairs, which has been cut to about an hour and a half, has been postponed until late in November because of the number of conflicting events before that time, it was said. Profits are to go to the American Red Cross.

Radio, Press To Be Used

While the motion picture industry was preparing for service in the cause of national defense the radio and the press were also getting ready to perform anything requested by the Government. This week recruiting ads were scheduled to be placed in the first of 865 newspapers being covered in the campaign.

President Roosevelt has asked Wythe Williams, radio commentator, to form a "Radio Round Table" to keep the nation in touch with the defense program. The radio program, according to Mr. Williams, will be of one-half hour length and presented probably on Sundays. It will be an "official radio program consisting of interpretations by well-known commentators on the national defense reports of different Government departments." The program will be rotated between the three major networks.

LONDON MGM, HAYS OFFICES DAMAGED

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's London headquarters at 19 Tower Street were severely damaged in an air raid September 11th, according to information received by studio officials in Hollywood. Most of the staff of that office had been transferred to Rickmansworth some time before because of anticipated raids, it was said, and there were no casualties reported.

On Monday night the London Park Lane office of Fayette Allport, Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America representative, was damaged by the explosion of a heavy bomb in the vicinity.

Aubrey Flanagan, of Quigley Publications, 4 Golden Square, London, cabled that the staff was still "holding out"—as of Wednesday.

'WESTERNER' OPENS, 'NORTH WEST' ON HIGHER SCALE, ROADSHOW FOR 'THIEF'

Disney Sets Up Special Staff for "Fantasia"; Fourth House for "Rockne" Opening; First Showing of New "Ramparts"

Samuel Goldwyn's latest United Artists release, "The Westerner," opened Thursday, at Fort Worth, Texas, to more than usual ballyhoo, and featured by another one of those "junkets" for the press, actors, executives and exhibitors.

Meanwhile, Paramount sales executives in Kansas City last week decided upon elaborate openings and advanced prices for "North West Mounted Police."

Walt Disney has established a special publicity staff to concentrate on the latest Disney super-feature, musical special, "Fantasia," to be roadshown.

The March of Time's "The Ramparts We Watch" will have its first public showing in present, revised form, at the Radio City Music Hall, New York City, on Thursday, following a preview and cocktail party Wednesday.

Warner Brothers and South Bend, Indiana, theatre men have arranged that four theatres will show Warners "Knute Rockne-All-American" to the world for the first time in that city, on October 4th.

United Artists has decided to roadshow its "The Thief of Bagdad," in a large manner, and James Roosevelt's British-made, anti-Nazi United Artists' release, was to receive a great hand on its opening, Friday, at Harry Brandt's Globe Theatre, New York City.

"Westerner" at Fort Worth

This week is "The Westerner Week" in Fort Worth, Texas, so proclaimed by its mayor, I. N. McCrary, and highlighting the opening of the Samuel Goldwyn picture Thursday night at the Hollywood and Worth theatres.

Three plane-loads of Hollywood stars and other personalities descended upon that city on Thursday morning, headed by Gary Cooper, Walter Brennan, Doris Davenport and Mr. Goldwyn.

Among newspaper and trade paper men from New York and Hollywood were William Weaver, of MOTION PICTURE HERALD; Sam Shain, Motion Picture Daily; George Morris, Film Daily; Cecilia Ager, PM; Hubbard Keavy and Robbin Coons, Associated Press; Fred Othman, United Press; Paul Harrison, N.E.A.; and Douglas Field, photographer, Life. From New York UA offices, among others, were Harry Gold, vice-president; James Mulvey, Samuel Goldwyn representative; and Lynn Farnol, UA chief of advertising and publicity.

The two mile business district of the city was decorated with flags, shields, pennants and banners. Citizens rode in old stagecoaches, surreys, and buckboards. Hotels featured a "Wild West" atmosphere. The stars and Hollywood and New York executives were greeted by civic officials, accompanied by five bands, and hundreds of cowboys and cowgirls, and also by vintage stagecoaches.

As an accompaniment of the main feature of the day, the "Westerner" cavalcade, school children were given an afternoon holiday and joined the thousands of out-of-town Texans who watched. Before the parade, the stars participated in a radio broadcast, then were motored to the city, and then attended an informal reception at the Worth Hotel, tendered by the Fort Worth Press.

The Worth and Hollywood theatres were flood-lighted for the premieres. There were fireworks, and a radio broadcast. The stars appeared on the stage of the Worth, and Mr. Cooper, star of the picture, crowned the girl who had been previously judged a typical Texas beauty.

Higher Prices for "North West"

In line with the new trend to higher admissions, to gain from this country enough admissions revenue to counterbalance that lost in the collapse of foreign markets, Paramount sales executives decided last week, at a meeting in Kansas City, to ask increased admissions wherever possible, for "North West Mounted Police."

The picture will have its world premiere at Regina, Saskatchewan, Canada, October 21st. This premiere, it is promised, will be one of the largest ever given in Canada.

It will play a number of pre-release engagements after this premiere; and it will be shown only as a single feature, Barney Balaban, Paramount president, said. He remarked that "10 or 12 cities" would be tried.

Robert Gillham, Paramount advertising and publicity director, returned to New York, Wednesday, from Ottawa and Ontario after arranging for a five-theatre Canadian premier of "North West" in Regina, October 21.

The American premiere of the picture will be at the Chicago Theatre, Chicago, October 25th.

"Ramparts" in Music Hall

The March of Time's "The Ramparts We Watch," with revised ending, including some footage from the German Government's "Baptism of Fire," opened at the Radio City Music Hall, Rockefeller Center, New York City, on Thursday, after the "new version" had been shown to the newspaper and trade press at a private showing and cocktail party in the Music Hall projection rooms and executive suite on Wednesday afternoon.

Publicity for "Fantasia"

Walt Disney has formed a special publicity staff to exploit his latest, the musical feature, "Fantasia," which is to be roadshown, and which will necessitate special sound equipment in theatres.

Richard Condon has complete charge of all publicity concerning the picture, from New York and Hollywood. Antoinette Spitzer, for the past two years handling Disney publicity for RKO, will assist Mr. Condon in the East; Janet Martin will continue in Hollywood, as studio press representative. Joseph Heppner, of Metropolitan Photo Service, New York, has been borrowed from that concern, to work exclusively on "Fantasia," as publicity writer. He has already done photographic assignments on the picture, with Leopold Stokowski, in Philadelphia, and has also worked on the Coast.

The picture will have its world premiere in New York City on or about November 14th, and it was expected that the theatre for the premiere would be selected shortly.

The Disney Hollywood studio last week was putting final touches on the film, which is now said to be 135 minutes long.

Four Theatres for "Rockne"

Warner Brothers and the Balaban and Katz circuit this week were considering a fourth South Bend, Indiana, theatre for the premiere on October 4th of the company's "Knute Rockne—All-American." Seats for the opening, at the Colfax, Palace, and State, priced at $1.65, are sold out.

The opening will climax celebration of "National Knute Rockne Week," and will be on the eve of one of Notre Dame University's well-attended football games: that against the College of the Pacific, coached by famed old-time Chicago coach, Alonzo Stagg.

There will be a banquet on October 3d, in the dining hall of the University, featured by a Kate Smith broadcast; and members of Notre Dame Alumni Clubs throughout the country plan to listen in, and then to start for South Bend, for the premiere and the game.

UA Will Roadshow "Thief"

United Artists will screen its Alexander Korda production, "The Thief of Bagdad," on a two-a-day basis, with a $2.20 per seat top admission, vice-presidents Harry Gold and L. Jack Schlaifer said in New York over the weekend, after representatives of UA district and division managers from every section had attended the first special screening.

UA says the picture cost $2,000,000, and represents an advanced use of color. Much of the picture was made in England. However, perhaps the most spectacular shots, in color, are those made in America, and especially in the Grand Canyon area.

"TABU" IS TABOO; CALLED GERMAN

The Non-Sectarian Anti-Nazi League to Champion Human Rights, Inc., this week warned American distributors that showing of the film "Tabu" might aid National Socialist Germany.

The League noted that rights to the film were held by representatives in Germany of the late Herr Murnau, who produced it in 1931 in the South Seas. Paramount acquired the original American rights, which expired in 1936. The League warns that an English version of the film has been made for showing here.

The military alliance between Germany and Italy has put films from the latter under the League's ban.

MAYOR KELLY LIFTS BAN ON ROOSEVELT PICTURE

Apollo Theatre Opening for "Pastor Hall" Arranged After Police Order Is Reversed

Chicago's film censors were ordered this week to rescind their ban on Jimmy Roosevelt's "Pastor Hall," on instructions, telephoned via long distance from an undisclosed point, by Mayor Edward J. Kelly, of the Chicago Kelly-Nash New Deal political machine.

Arrangements were immediately completed for the production to open this Friday at the B & K Apollo. The eldest son of the President is distributing through United Artists. It has had exhibitions in Philadelphia, San Francisco and a few other spots, and is to open in New York on Friday at the Harry Brandt Globe theatre on Broadway.

Protests Made

Protests were made by the Chicago Civil Liberties Committee and other civic organizations against the Chicago Police Censor Board's banning of the picture. Police Commissioner James P. Allman effected the reversal.

Under the city ordinance governing the Police Censor Board, the Mayor can veto an order of the board and issue a permit for the showing of a picture which the board bans.

In the case of the anti-Nazi "Pastor Hall," a factor that caused outside interests to protest was the censor's action in passing the pro-Nazi "Blitzkrieg in Poland," which was approved six weeks ago and is still being shown in a theatre in Chicago's German neighborhood on the north side.

It was also pointed out that on at least six previous occasions, the same censor board had banned anti-Nazi pictures while in several instances they had approved pro-Nazi pictures.

Police Lieutenant Harry Costello, head of the board division, while not a member of the board itself, denied charges that the board was pro-Nazi.

The Mayor was out of town when the censor's banning order was issued, and most of the protests were made to Police Commissioner Allman, who ordered Col. Phillip Crippen, police department personnel director, to view the film. Col. Crippen reported that while there were some scenes that might be construed as objectionable, the film, as a whole, was not liable to "cause any breaches of peace or tend to incite riots."

As a result of the incident, several Chicago aldermen have indicated that at a future council meeting a demand might be made for an investigation of the censor's ruling on "Pastor Hall" and other anti-Nazi films in the past.

On Wednesday Alderman Earl Dickerson, colored, introduced an amendment to the censor ordinance which would not require a permit for any picture which would be restricted to audiences over 21 years of age. However, a sign would be required to indicate its adult rating.

Censorship Elsewhere

"Fools of Desire," for which the New York State Motion Picture Division refused a license and from whose decision an appeal has been taken, was screened last Wednesday, September 11th, in the projection room of the State Office Building, 80 Centre Street, New York, by a sub-committee of the State Board of Regents. A hearing followed.

The appeal was filed by the Syndicate Exchange, Inc., after Irwin Esmond, director of the Motion Picture Division, banned the picture. The distributor of the film claims that the picture makes no attempt to portray lewdness, but merely points out a moral.

Under the title, "It's All in Your Mind," the picture was refused a license in 1938 and has since been revised. Charles A. Brind, Jr., director of the State Education's Law Department, was to have represented the Motion Picture Division at the hearing before the Regents' Committee, which include Susan Brandeis, daughter of the late U. S. Supreme Court Justice Louis Brandeis; Gordon Knox Bell and George J. Ryan.

Tampa Ordinance Planned

An ordinance creating a censorship board for motion pictures and magazines is planned by the City Council of Tampa, Fla. Under provisions of the proposed regulation, the censors would be empowered to ban the exhibition or sale of motion pictures or magazines they deem objectionable. Clergymen will be asked to assist in selecting members of the proposed board.

Suit for $924 has been brought against the Seattle Theatre Censor Board by Clarence Wicks, State Rights Distributor of "Doped Youth," banned recently by the censors, as compensation for loss incurred by Wicks in not being able to exhibit the film locally.

The Detroit censor's ban on "Strange Cargo," with Clark Gable and Joan Crawford, was lifted last week following deletion of "objectionable portions" of the feature. Further changes in the picture are expected before its final release for local showing, it was reported.

The Ohio censors ordered 28 eliminations from an aggregate of 549 reels reviewed in August and rejected 10 reels for the week ending August 30th. During July, 53 eliminations were ordered from 521 reels inspected. In August, 1939, 17 eliminations were ordered from 593 reels.

New York Notes

Taxes Overdue

Possibly indicating general remissness by the city's theatre owners, New York City Treasurer Almerindo Portfolio this week called their attention to the city tax occupancy tax returns, covering the period between July 15, 1939, and July 14th, this year, due on July 15th. Payment of five times the amount due, plus five per cent for each month's delinquency, is the penalty. It will be waived, if returns are forwarded immediately, it is understood. Mr. Portfolio pointed out that all units renting premises for gain are subject to the tax.

University Becomes Exhibitor

Syracuse University on September 26th is scheduled to reenter the exhibitor business with "The Fight for Life," government film released by Columbia, opening for a three-day engagement at the Civic theatre in Syracuse. Professor Sawyer Falk, chairman of the drama department, hopes to present two motion pictures a month. Others scheduled are "The Baker's Wife" and "The First Film Concert."

Distribution Deals

The Baker's Wife, Inc., has set distribution deals with Herbert Rosener Company of San Francisco for the west coast and with Producers Releasing Corporation of New England, Boston, for New England.

RKO Adds Three New York Houses

Three theatres in the Bronx will be added to the RKO metropolitan circuit next month, according to John J. O'Connor, vice-president in charge of theatre operation. The acquisitions are the Pelham, at White Plains Road near Pelham Parkway; the Marble Hill, 232nd Street and Broadway, and the Castle Hill, 1320 Castle Hill Avenue.

When extensive alterations are completed, the three theatres will present first-run double feature shows, playing simultaneously with other RKO houses in the metropolitan territory.

It is planned to have all theatres reopened with special attractions augmenting the screen shows. Stars of stage, screen and radio will assist RKO officials and local civic and social leaders, in dedicating the houses. The theatres were part of the Cocalis chain.

Pittsburgh Variety Tent Wins Legion Trophy

Variety Club Tent No. 1, in Pittsburgh, this week, was presented with a trophy from American Legion Commander Edward Sterling as one of three outstanding posts in Pennsylvania. A special citation was given for the monthly benefit shows presented at the Veterans Hospital in Aspinwall.

Harry Kalmine, post commander, formally accepted the trophy. Among the speakers were Walter Wanger, producer, and Legion leaders J. Guy Griffith and Daniel C. Hartbauer. Mr. Wanger was made a member of the club, and presented with a key to the clubhouse by Chief Barker C. J. Latta.

John H. Harris, national chief barker, announced that 643 turtles had been entered in the National Turtle Derby, to be held September 25th. The club aims to sell 2,500 turtles, proceeds to go to the milk fund.

The Baltimore Variety Club, last week, was host to Mr. Wanger at a luncheon attended by: Louis Rome, Bernard Seimon, William K. Saxton, Mark Silver, Leonard McLaughlin, Lawrence Shanberger, Eddie Sherwood, Howard Burman and Morton Baker.

The producer returned to New York for a few days, this week, before resuming his speaking tour of key cities.

MPPDA Meets, Discusses Issues; Recesses

Directors of the MPPDA opened their quarterly meeting in New York Wednesday and agreed to continue the session on next Tuesday. Will H. Hayes, president, authorized Kenneth Clark, public relations contact, to report to the press that the meeting concerned the "foreign situation," "general industry problems," "Mr. Hays' recent activities in California," he returned to New York last Friday and the "motion picture industry campaign for the Red Cross."

Joe Berenson has been named manager of the Amusement Club of Chicago with headquarters in the Stevens Hotel. The club is the successor to the old CAPA.

"POT O' GOLD", FILM EXHIBITORS' AIR HEADACHE, IS STEWING AGAIN

NBC President Claims Tum's Radio Program, Which Is Starting Second Year, Is Not a Game of Chance

The National Broadcasting Company believes that the "Pot o' Gold," radio program which has been the target of many exhibitor protests, is still an "interesting experiment," according to Niles Trammell, NBC president, who points out that the radio show at which $1,000 is given away to a person who is home when telephoned, became, in its first year on the air, one of the 15 most popular programs, according to the Cooperative Analysis of Broadcasting. The show next week starts its second year.

Idea "Protected"

Mr. Trammell said the network was watching "very closely" the "Pot o' Gold" program and that other programs of a similar nature had been rejected under the general policy of protecting a sponsor's program idea. However he asserted that the Tum's program is neither a game of chance nor a contest based on chance, both of which are banned by the network's rules.

"Pot o' Gold" attained a high rating of nearly 30 shortly after it went on the air according to the Crosley radio reports but has dropped now to 10.1. The show begins its second year on next Thursday.

The CAB semi-annual report showed that Saturday night, long the poorest for broadcasting, had increased greatly in point of listener interest during the year. It was asserted that 61.1 per cent of all radio sets are tuned in during the period from five to eight o'clock on Sunday evening. News programs, as was expected on account of the war, were more popular than last year. The chief trend in programs was an increased interest in dramatic productions which are now second in number to variety broadcasts.

FCC Cites Questionable Scripts

Analysis of 635,843 radio continuities from 697 stations examined by the Federal trade Commission during the fiscal year ended June 30th, of which 2.2 per cent were marked for further study, disclosed that a flat 20 per cent of the questionable scripts were from stations in cities with populations of more than 500,000. Next heaviest offenders were stations in cities of 250,000 to 500,000 population, which furnished 18.3 per cent of the continuities questioned, followed in turn by stations in cities of 50,000 to 100,000, with 17.8 per cent; cities under 25,000, with 17.6 per cent, and cities of 100,000 to 250,000, with 14.4 per cent. In a class by themselves were stations in cities of 25,000 to 50,000, only 11.9 per cent of whose scripts necessitated more than casual examination.

The commission's figures covered only continuities originating with the individual stations and did not include net-work programs.

The three major networks reported that business in August topped grosses in the corresponding month of 1939. NBC gross for the Red and Blue networks was $3,738,262, an increase of 12.9 per cent; the Red grossed $3,072,338, up 12.2 per cent; the Blue total was $665,924, an increase of 15.9 per cent. The eight month total was $32,128,576. CBS grossed for the month of August $2,875,657, an increase of 22.8 per cent and the eight month total was $26,404,427, up 22.2 per cent. Mutual showed an increase of 10.9 per cent with a gross of $227,865 in August and an eight month total of $2,494,370, a rise of 21.9 per cent.

RADIO PERFORMERS' STATUS DEFINED

The Labor Department this week, through Philip B. Fleming, administrator of the Fair Labor Standards Act, defined the status of performers appearing in remote control radio pickups from concerts and hotel ballrooms and from the studio itself.

Mr. Fleming ruled that performers who broadcast from radio studios come under the act while those who are part of a sustaining program picked up from a hotel ballroom or concert hall do not. In the first case it was said that the radio station obtains a distinct benefit from the services of performers who brodacast from studios and being done at the establishment of a radio station is under the direction and control of the station. Control and director of performers in hotel ballrooms and concert halls is exercised by the sponsor of the concert or dance and hence it was ruled that the performers in this case are not employees of the radio station.

The FCC has granted licenses to the following new radio stations: Ottumwa, Iowa, J. D. Falvey, to operate on 1210 kilocycles with 100 watts, unlimited time; San Diego, Calif., Worcester Broadcasting Corporation, to operate on the frequency of 1420 kilocycles with power of 250 watts and unlimited time.

The government of Chile is considering plans for the unification of all radio broadcasting systems. Radio communications are under control of the Director general of electrical services. Stations which had previously broadcast what was called pro-Nazi news in German and Italian have been ordered to transmit only in Spanish and to avoid comments on the war.

FM Station for Loew's

WHN, New York radio station owned by Loew's Inc., has been making plans to erect a frequency modulation (FM) station with the transmitter atop the Hudson palisades, probably on the property of the Palisades Amusement Park, purchased by Nicholas M. and Joseph M. Schenck in 1912. It was at Palisades Park that Marcus Loew and the Schencks began their business association.

Herbert L. Pettey, manager of WHN, explained that the station was the third in the United States to file the 42 page application for a FM permit and that work would begin as soon as the license was granted. The type of equipment has been selected and it is hoped that operation of the FM station can begin by the middle of 1941.

The Loew-owned FM radio station would operate as a separate unit and not merely carry the regular programs of WHN, Mr. Pettey said. He pointed out that only an exceptional program, such as a sustaining musical feature, of WHN would be carried by the FM station. The FM station, he said, would offer the advertiser a definite "circulation" because the area where the station can be received can be accurately determined. Mr. Pettey said there are no blind spots in FM.

Mr. Pettey has been appointed secretary-treasurer of a committee formed by John Shepard 3rd, head of the Yankee Network, to investigation the possibilities of a FM network. No definite plans have been formed but Mr. Pettey said it was thought that any FM network would be owned by the stations on a cooperative basis, similar to that of Mutual.

With 36 FM applications on file and efforts being made to have the forms simplified by the Federal Communications Commission the type of broadcasting developed by Maj. Edwin H. Armstrong is expected to become a commercial business this year. Over a dozen companies are now making FM receiving sets and sponsors can be accepted after January 1st. An FM Magazine is scheduled to begin publication October 10th. At present 22 FM stations are operating on experimental licenses.

FM broadcasting will be emphasized in the Radio Workshop of the College of the City of New York this year. The courses are under the direction of Seymour N. Siegel, WNYC program director, and Nancy Davids, formerly radio consultant to New York University. In the first semester courses will be given in radio survey and station practices, production and script writing.

On Monday W1XPW, FM station owned by WDRC in Hartford, Conn. began operating as a separate unit. For the past year the station has been using WDRC and CBS programs. It was reported that the move was made in anticipation of selling time to advertisers beginning in January on the FM station.

Television Standards Up

Subcommittee heads of the National Television Systems Committee met Monday at New York's Hotel Roosevelt on Monday and a general session was held Tuesday. Preliminary reports were made on the programs made so far and preparations were made for panel meetings during the first week in October.

Between October 15th and December 1st the reports of the eight sub-committees are to be submitted to the main body for consideration. January 1st has been set as the goal for making a complete report to the Federal Communications Commission, recommending television standards and settlement of other disputed points.

Allen B. DuMont said this week that a purely electronic means of color television is already under development by engineers of his organization but considered solely in terms of an ultimate goal far beyond the more immediate problems of black-and-white television. Under the DuMont color television system a special screen will be used for automatically selecting and rendering the elementary colored images in proper sequence, without color wheels or moving parts, it was said. But Mr. DuMont said he believed that for the present the industry had better concentrate on commercializing good black-and-white television before essaying color.

The Don Lee television studio in Hollywood, W6XAO, closed last Sunday for three months while equipment is being moved to the new studio on Mt. Lee.

The Farnsworth Television and Radio Corporation has reported a net loss of $749,741 for the period from January 1st to April 30th. This compares with a loss of $80,951 in the period from December 13, 1938 to April 30, 1939.

Action on the proposed merger of Baird-Television and Cinema Television, Ltd. is scheduled for October 14th in London. The capital of Baird was said to be about $5,000,000 in preferred and common stock. Cinema Television is capitalized for about $700,000. A receiver was named for Baird in November, 1939.

Availability Issue Raised in St. Louis

Another issue in the dispute between independent exhibitors in St. Louis and Fanchon & Marco, operators of the chain of St. Louis Amusement Company neighborhood houses, flared up last week when it became known that Clarence Kaimann, veteran exhibitor, had complained to Warner Brothers on availability of product.

Partner of Wehrenberg

Mr. Kaimann is a partner of Fred Wehrenberg, who only recently declared he intended to fight F. & M. on triple features and on a proposed clearance schedule. Mr. Kaimann and Mr. Wehrenberg together now operate 25 neighborhood houses in scattered parts of the city.

Mr. Kaimann said he had accused Warner Brothers of violating its contract by allowing the screening of films in the Rio, de luxe neighborhood house operated by F. & M. before they were available for his chain in the same part of town, North St. Louis.

He said he has written Gradwell L. Sears, general sales manager, cancelling bookings for his entire circuit of those pictures permitted to play at the Rio and not in compliance with his contract.

The independent exhibitor also said he had discovered that while the price of admission at the Rio was 35 cents, the doorman refunded 10 cents to each customer at presentation of the admission ticket.

The Rio was built by Nat Koplar and Dr. J. G. Probstein and at one time had a booking pact with the St. Louis Amusement Company, operated now by F. & M.

Newsreel Straw Polls Extended

The pre-Presidential election poll of patrons being conducted by Newsreel Theatres, Inc., in its two New York houses, in its Chicago Telenews theatre, and in its Telenews, San Francisco, on Wednesday afternoon, rated the candidates as follows:

	FOR ROOSEVELT	FOR WILLKIE
Embassy, New York.....	47,903	34,933
Radio City, New York....	11,031	19,357
Telenews, Chicago	5,424	5,081
Telenews, San Francisco..	23,987	12,893
	88,345	72,264

The Chicago poll began last week.

In all theatres, ratings are computed by the number of campaign buttons selected by patrons. The buttons are hung on special boards in theatre lobbies.

The straw-poll-via-theatre idea is spreading. The Harris circuit's Pittsburgh newsreel theatre, cooperating with the local Bulletin-Index, is distributing ballots to patrons. In New York, the Journal-American planned to begin an "applause poll" on Thursday using Western Electric sound meters to gauge audience reaction when Roosevelt and Willkie appear in newsreels. One crew, armed with a meter (more crews are to work later), and with newsreel time schedules from the home offices of Loew's, Fabian, Skouras, RKO, and other circuits, will visit theatres daily in neighborhood and Broadway territories.

Complaints About Scales At Wilmington Houses

Complaints from Wilmington, second run neighborhood theatres are being heard as a result of reductions in admissions of two competing theatres, the downtown Grand, a first run second grade film house, and the Strand, a second run neighborhood.

The change at the Grand was made by Warners in connection with the reopening of the downtown Arcadia, which had been closed for the past 18 months, and brought the evening scale down from 25 to 20 cents. The Strand also dropped from 25 to 20 after having increased the admission from 20 to 25 cents some time ago.

Competition from Wilmington Baseball Park operating for the first season, attracting more than 130,000 paid admissions this year, is believed to have prompted the Strand to make the change.

Indies Business Good Says Young

Fred Young, for the last three years manager of the Electrical Research Products, Inc., office in Singapore, British Malaya, and who recently returned to New York to outline Far Eastern business conditions to ERPI executives, said this week anent conditions in the Netherlands Indies that immediately after the German invasion of Holland, business in the Dutch colonies seemed paralyzed, but that it was a matter of days before a complete readjustment was made.

Theatre Grosses Up

The chief relaxation from the strain of the international situation there, Mr. Young said, seems to be motion pictures. He said that Far Eastern theatre managers report excellent business for the last few months; impetus being given to attendance in the larger cities in the Netherlands Indies and British Malaya by the presence of large detachments of soldiers and sailors, the officers with their families.

There are several new theatres in Malaya and the Netherlands Indies, Mr. Young said, the largest being the 1,200-seat Cathay Cinema, which occupies the lower floors of a 16-story Singapore apartment building, the tallest structure in the Far East. Mr. Young said that the theatre, which is ERPI-equipped, is setting the style for new theatre construction and equipment replacement in the Far East.

Sales of American equipment, he said, were further stimulated by the closing of a large German electrical company whose headquarters in Java were abandoned when Germany invaded Holland.

Mr. Young plans to leave from San Francisco in October to take over the direction of ERPI's activities in British India, while David Wight, until recently head of the Shanghai office, will take charge at Singapore.

Altec Sets Deal

Under an agreement reached between Rodney Pantages, Inc., and Altec Service Corporation, Altec will install all Maestro wired music systems in all cities where this music service is now and will be offered. Maestro operates through telephone connections between their studios and customers.

Monogram Reports Loss Of $179,656 for Year

A net loss of $179,656 for the year ended June 29th was reported, Tuesday, by Monogram Pictures, as compared with a net profit of $41,642 for six months ended June 30, 1939. No direct comparison with the previous year is available because the company changed its fiscal year to end on June 30th.

Gabe Rubin, owner of the Art Cinema, is distributing "The Burning Question" through western Pennsylvania. The picture is currently in its 14th week at his theatre, establishing the city's long run record for any film. Mr. Rubin acquired the distribution rights from George A. Hirliman.

Leases Educational Studio

GREEN BACKS DRIVE FOR 100% AFL LABEL ON ALL HOLLYWOOD FILMS

AFL Plans Campaign for 10,000 New Members in Film Industry; Actors Guild To Resist Salary Cuts

With the personal approval of William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor under the prodding of Aubrey Blair, newly appointed AFL organizer for the Hollywood studios, and in the expectation of the return, this week, of Willie Bioff, West Coast IATSE leader, from a Chicago jail, Hollywood's American Federation of Labor unions have opened a drive to unionize the film industry so thoroughly that the title leaders of every picture will bear the credit line, "Made by 100 per cent AFL workers."

Organization Drive Set

The campaign was indicated two weeks ago, by the appointment of Mr. Blair, former executive of the Screen Actors Guild and of the American Guild of Variety Artists, to organize the estimated 10,000 Hollywood workers not yet members of the AFL. This appointment followed meetings and discussions of Hollywood's AFL unions, over the existence of what are said to be CIO inspired small locals, of independent unions, and of the various guilds. It also occurred at the same time that the Screen Actors Guild, evidencing a desire by some actors to quit AFL auspices, withdrew from the Los Angeles Central Labor Council.

Business agents of the AFL Hollywood locals met Thursday, September 12th, and were told by Mr. Blair that his aim was to see that all AFL employees worked only with AFL workers in every department, in every studio.

"Our campaign will not rest," he continued, "until we see the title sheets of every Hollywood-made picture carry a credit line, 'Made by 100 per cent by AFL workers.' Ideal conditions existing for workers in the film industry today were created by the sweat of the AFL. So-called independent organizations have grown up to accept the charity of workers who fought long and hard to establish these conditions and these laws which benefit workers as a whole. Why should not these groups join the AFL, and pay their proper share of the costs of campaigns to obtain and maintain these high standards?"

In introducing Mr. Blair, Nathan Saper, secretary-treasurer of the Transportation Drivers' Local, 399, said the 100 per cent unionization drive had the personal approval of William Green, president of the AFL.

Frank Carothers, secretary of the Motion Picture International's studio basic labor agreement, presided. Others present were J. W. Gillette, international representative of the American Federation of Musicians; A. H. Peterson, organizer for the Los Angeles Central Labor Council; Ray Finnelli, of the Building Service Employees Union; Ken Howard and Edward Cutler, of the AGVA, and Raymond Lehaney, personal representative of Meyer Lewis, western director of the AFL, who had appointed Mr. Blair.

Though invited, Kenneth Thomson, executive secretary of the Screen Actors Guild, did not attend.

Apropos of the new AFL drive, it was announced in Hollywood last week that 30 members of the American Society of Cinematographers had joined the International Photographers, Local 659, an International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees union; and it was also said that the various AFL unions would begin soon to seek affiliation of various writers', set designers', script clerks', and other guilds.

The Screen Actors Guild will "forcefully resist" any move to cut salaries, Kenneth Thomson, executive secretary, declared at the annual meeting Sunday night in Hollywood of the organization which inducted into office President Edward Arnold, who succeeds Ralph Morgan.

Nickel-in-the-slot films and television are concerns of the Guild, Mr. Thomson said, and the guild must maintain "close supervision over these two fields to take the fullest advantage of all employment opportunities for actors."

Other new officers are George Murphy, Paul Harvey and Walter Abel, vice-presidents; Lucile Gleason, recording secretary; Porter Hall, treasurer; Mr. Morgan, Mrs. Gleason, Russell Hicks, Boris Karloff, Claude King, Robert Strange, Roy Gordon, Tim Holt, Heather Angel, Nydia Westman, director.

Mr. Thomson traced the guild's growth, from its formation in 1933. He pointed out that 1940 had been a year "greatly different, with many accomplishments in the specific progress of the guild."

Guild Structure Maintained

Briefly, he dwelt upon the successful court defeat of an extra players' suit to obtain equal voting rights for that class, emphasizing the point that the court decision had maintained the present structure of the guild.

On the guild's relations with labor, Mr. Thomson said anent the withdrawal from the Los Angeles Central Labor Council:

"The Board of Directors voted to reaffiliate with the Council last March, in the hope that, with the cooperation of other honest and progressive unions, reforms could be accomplished within the Council. When that proved impossible, the Board this month again voted to withdraw.

"However," he said, "the withdrawal of the Screen Actors Guild from the Council must not be interpreted to mean that we have severed our relations with the American Federation of Labor. We still remain affiliated with the California State Federation of Labor, and will send a delegation of representatives to their forthcoming annual convention. Our general relationships with other unions are harmonious."

Mr. Thomson mentioned the help given by the Guild to other unions of the Associated Actors and Artistes of America, parent actors' union, notably, to the American Guild of Variety Artists and the American Federation of Radio Artists.

The problem of alien and refugee actors was discussed and Mr. Thomson showed, by figures, that it was exaggerated. He said only four per cent of the actors admitted to membership since August 1st, 1939, had been aliens; and that on August 31st, this year, there were only 41 refugees working in all the studios, many of them not actors.

The guild will ask an increase of minimum salaries for bit players, from $25 daily to $40 or $50, in the forthcoming reopening of the basic agreement negotiations with producers, Mr. Thomson said. He also announced that the guild would ask prohibition of the practice of allowing extras to do bit players' work; that it would seek raising of minimum salaries for free lance performers; the prohibition of options for such; the limitation of the fitting test and interview time; and a re-definition of the "added scene."

Office Workers Reject Pact

The AFL American Federation of Office Employees last week rejected a producer-drawn contract for workers at the Central Casting Corporation. Elma Goodwin, president of the union, and J. W. Buzzell, executive secretary of the Los Angeles Central Labor Council and vice-chairman of the Conference of AFL Studio Unions, told producer representatives that the pact did not conform with verbal agreements made in recent negotiations, which had followed a strike at the Corporation.

Frederick L. Kley, executive vice-president of the American Society of Cinematographers, denied last week that his organization would dissolve, and said it and the producers would continue to observe the five year basic agreement now effective.

Hearing on Petrillo Ban

The American Guild of Musical Artists, headed by Lawrence Tibbett, went once more into a New York Supreme Court room, on Thursday, this time asking a permanent injunction to prevent James Petrillo, president of the American Federation of Musicians, from barring AGMA members from radio, stage, concerts, and recording studios. The union, whose instrumentalists were asked by Mr. Petrillo, "czar" of music, to join his federation by last Labor Day or suffer the wrath of the federation, had already secured a temporary injunction two weeks ago, from New York Supreme Court Justice Ferdinand Pecora, who expressed amazement over the powers granted to Mr. Petrillo by the federation's constitution.

Samuel Seabury, New York attorney, was retained early this week to represent Petrillo.

Blanche Witherspoon, executive secretary of the guild, said in New York this week that guild members were sending large contributions, and that its goal was $25,000 for a "fighting fund." She charged that conditions under federation domination would be unbearable, and that, while Mr. Petrillo now demanded jurisdiction only over instrumentalist members of the guild, he would eventually ask sway over all its members.

Radio Strike Threat Over

First result of the mediation which so far has prevented a strike by the American Federation of Radio Artists against the networks and stations using sustaining programs, was an extension "for a reasonable period" of the existing contract covering sustaining programs. The mediation, by the New York State Labor Mediation Board, began on Monday at the New

MORE OPPOSITION TO 16MM. COMPETITION

Directors of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio last week in a resolution asked the state board of censors to appoint two qualified inspectors to check showing of 16mm. films without censorship leaders. P. J. Wood, organization secretary, said, "Thorough investigation has resulted in a definite record of all spots where bootleg films are being shown and the total number is surprisingly high. The Ohio law provides for the censorship of all films, and we propose to enforce strict compliance," he added.

York offices of the board and continued on Tuesday. It had been accepted by the union's board last week, after a strike threat, ratified by a meeting of the New York local on Thursday night, September 12th, and ratified the following day by locals in Chicago, San Francisco, and Los Angeles.

All the locals, however, have authorized the board to call a strike if mediation fails.

The union is seeking a new contract, with terms closer to those for performers in commercial shows.

Members of the New York and Hollywood units of the Screen Publicists Guild this week were preparing a national constitution, to be set forth at the next membership meetings. New York members Thursday night, September 12th, unanimously approved reports from delegates who met on the Coast recently with those from the Hollywood unit, on the bases for the constitution.

Nick, Weston Case Nears Jury

John P. "Big" Nick, deposed head of the St. Louis projectionists' union, Local 143, and Clyde Weston, its deposed business agent, testified on Tuesday afternoon in their own defense, at their trial in that city, for violation of the Federal and anti-racketeering and Sherman anti-trust laws. The case was expected to reach the jury at mid-week.

Trial started September 9th. A host of Government witnesses testified. Defense testimony began Monday.

Among Government witnesses were Walter A. Thimmig, owner of the McNair Theatre, who recited details of an alleged $6,500 payment by the city's theatre owners to the defendants in 1937, to forestall a wage increase demand; Fred Wehrenberg, head of the local Motion Picture Theatre Owners, and operator of a circuit, who testified that Mr. Thimmig had collected money for the payment to the defendants; Robert Tomsen, present business agent of the union, who testified on its affairs during the Nick-Weston regime; Harry C. Arthur, Jr., vice-president and general manager of the Fanchon and Marco circuit, who told how he "loaned" $2,000 to Mr. Weston; Louis K. Ansell, Sam Komm, A. D. Pappas, Clarence H. Kaimann, Adolph Rosecan, all exhibitors; and others.

O'Leary Assumes Walker's Duties at Comerford

Assuming his post as operating head of Comerford Theatres Inc., as successor to Frank C. Walker, new postmaster general, John J. O'Leary, announced from the Scranton, Pa., offices, this week, there would be no change in the personnel of the circuit. Mr. O'Leary is expected to divide his time between the Scranton and New York offices of the company.

A native of Butte, Mont., he joined the Comerford Circuit in 1927. Previously, he was associated with the Anaconda Copper Company.

George P. Aarons of Philadelphia, associate counsel for the MPTOA will be general counsel, succeeding Mr. Walker, until the annual election, expected to be held in January.

Mr. Walker was sworn in as President Roosevelt's newest cabinet member, last Wednesday, September 11. The President, witnessed the adminstration of the oath of office by Associate Justice Stanley F. Reed, of the U. S. Supreme Court.

Broadcasters Looking Into MGM's Air Series

The National Association of Broadcasters in Washington, last week, announced that members of the Bureau of Radio Advertising were investigating the electrical transcription film exploitation series being offered free by MGM to a number of radio stations. The series, if accepted by the radio stations, is scheduled to start on or about next Monday, to continue for a 13-week period. It would advertise the company's product.

The Association says the majority of the radio stations agree with the Bureau of Radio Advertising that the only manner in which these transcriptions should be broadcast is "on a program sponsored by the theatre in which MGM pictures appear and at regular card rates." Among pictures to be plugged on the series are:

"Strike Up the Band," "Hullabaloo," "Little Nelly Kelly," and "Bittersweet."

Cohn Employment Contracts Approved

New three-year employment contracts of Harry and Jack Cohn, president and vice-president, respectively, of Columbia Pictures, were approved on Wednesday afternoon, at the regular annual meeting, in the New York home office, of the company's common stockholders. However, they were modified to include a provision whereby payments under the sharing arrangements will be made to the two only if cash dividends are paid to the common stockholders.

For these officers to obtain the maximum under their sharing contracts, a cash dividend of $1 per share will have to be made to the common stockholders.

The board of directors elected for the year comprises the Messrs. Cohn, A. Schneider, Charles Schwartz, L. M. Blancke, N. B. Spingold and Dr. A. H. Giannini.

Price, Waterhouse and Company was selected as the corporation auditor.

The approval of the Cohn contracts ended a brief flare of opposition, several days before the meeting, by Fred Tuerck, minority stockholder.

Censor Boards Report

The State Board of Censorship in Richmond, Va., showed a record gross profit for the fiscal year ending June 30 of $18,635.31. The gross collections amounted to $38,176.20 compared with $36,540 for the previous year. The board reviewed 1,312 films amounting to 4,000,867 feet of film. Three films, "Unashamed," "Wages of Sin" and "Hitler-Beast of Berlin" were rejected but the last named was passed after a title change. In all, 26 eliminations were ordered in various pictures during the year.

In Ohio, the censors ordered 28 eliminations from a total of 549 reels reviewed in August, and rejected 10 reels for the week ending August 30. During July, 53 eliminations were ordered from 521 reels reviewed.

Change Series Title

The title of the forthcoming series of Paramount short subjects formerly known as "Merry Models" has been changed to "Madcap Models." The series of six one-reel subjects will be produced by George Pal, who employs plastic figures instead of drawings in his cartoons.

Industry Members At Golf Tourneys

Industry members were much in evidence last week at two golf tourneys, the annual Warner Brothers home office affair at Old Oaks Country Club, Purchase, N. Y., and the 15th annual tournament sponsored by the Philadelphia Variety Club and The Exhibitor at Philmont Country Club, Bethayres, Pa.

200 at Warner Meet

The Warner tourney, held Thursday, September 12th, drew 200 Warner Club members and their guests. Carl Leserman, assistant sales manager, was the master of ceremonies at the dinner following the golf and presented about 50 awards.

Abe Kroenenberg won with the lowest gross of the day and Leonard Palumbo and Herman Starr were in the runner-up positions. Jerry Keyser drew the award for the low net in Class A; Joe Goldstein for Class B, and Ed Schnitzer for Class C.

Karl Gannon won the driving contest; Stewart MacDonald, the putting contest and Harold Rodner came nearest to the pin. Joe Newman won the duffer award.

Philadelphia Tournament

The Philadelphia tournament, held Friday, September 13th, brought out the biggest crowd in years there with 102 golfers competing for the 87 awards offered. More than 200 attended the dinner-dance in the evening, at which time the awards were made.

Alfred J. Davis, sales manager for Twentieth Century-Fox in Philadelphia, won the tourney and was awarded the M. E. Comerford Memorial Prize, donated by Frank C. Walker. Harold Cohen, runner-up, exhibitor from Lewistown, Pa., was awarded the Paramount Pictures trophy donated by Neil Agnew. Local exhibitors Sam Shapiro and Lou Segall, low scorer for the day and runner-up, respectively, won the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers and Ross Federal trophies, respectively. A surprise gift was presented to Milton Rogasner, who has been tourney chairman for the past five years. "Miss America" was guest of honor at the dinner, presented by Earle W. Sweigert, Philadelphia branch manager for Paramount.

Out-of-towners present included many upstate members, a delegation of five from the Washington Variety Club, and the New York contingent included Harry Thomas, Monogram; Walter Green and E. M. Hartley, National Theatre Supply; Wally Howes, Translux Theatres; Robert Mochrie, RKO; Jack Cohen, National Screen; L. W. "Mike" Contow, Altec; Adolph Haas, Alexander Film; Lee Newbury, N. J. Allied; Eddy Aaron, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer; and Arthur Dickinson, Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America.

Paramount, on Thursday, held its 13th annual golf tournament at the Adolph Zukor golf course in New York. John McDermott and Joe Wood headed the arrangement committee and distributed the prizes to winning contestants. Paramount executives, guests, and members of the trade press attended the tournament.

Howard in New Post

Hampton W. Howard, former director of publicity and promotion for the Fleischer Studios, Miami, Fla., and secretary of the Association of Men with Wings, New York, has been appointed general manger of the Women Flyers of America, Inc., New York, by Miss Chelle Janis, president and founder.

GROSS OF 300,000 "JUKE BOXES" ESTIMATED AT $65,000,000 YEARLY

Nickel Movies Will Have to Compete with Established Music Machines; Phonovision Production Plans Undecided

When the nickel-in-the-slot movie-and-music machine business really gets going, it will enter a market in competition to a minimum 300,000 of nickel slot straight-music machines now annually grossing some $65,000,000 to $75,000,000, it was estimated this week by E. C. Steffens, president of the International Association of Automatic Electrical Phonograph Owners, in Chicago. Mr. Steffens said that there might even be as many as 400,000 "juke" boxes in operation.

10,000 Operators

There are between 10,000 and 12,000 operators, men who own the machines placed in the thousands of taverns and restaurants, according to Mr. Steffens. The leading manufacturers of the record machines are The Mills Novelty Company, Rock-Ola Manufacturing Company, J. P. Seeburg Corporation, John Gable Company, all of Chicago; the Rudolph Wurlitzer Company of North Tonawanda, N. Y., and the Automatic Instrument Company, Grand Rapids, Michigan.

Films used in coin-in-slot machines would have to compete with records for attention of the patrons. Phonograph machine operators buy records from Brunswick and Victor for 45 cents each; from Columbia for 30 cents, and Blue Bird, 21 cents. Used records are sometimes sold for two or three cents.

A standard type phonograph machine equipped to play 24 records costs $419. Five years ago a similar machine played only 10 records and cost $265. Operating terms right after the repeal of Prohibition when the machines became popular on a wide scale was the first $4 and 25 per cent after that for the operator, according to Mr. Steffens. Now the owner of the machine and the location share 50-50.

About 25 per cent of the operator's gross must go for service, it was said. About once a week a service man, whose salary averages $40 per week, must visit each machine to change records and make any necessary adjustments. It was reported that a service man can not take care of more than 40 machines.

The actual net profit for the operator from each machine is said to be small. "I believe that if each machine in the country showed a net profit of 50 cents per week, it is a good figure," Mr. Steffens added.

"Some of the operators are able to service their own machines, thus reducing operating costs, but this group is in the minority," he continued. An individual operator owns from about 40 machines to 1,500 or more.

One of the biggest problems of the coin-in-slot phonograph business is the quick turnover in the expensive machines. The life of a machine is only about four years but operators seeking favorable spots for their machines must constantly acquire the latest models. Mr. Steffens said: "Each year the machine manufacturers are producing newer and better looking machines. To stay in business the operator must have the newest type of equipment." Old machines are sold to small operators or back to the manufacturer for rebuilding or export to South America and other places.

"Locations today are at a premium," Mr. Steffens continued. "I mean the type of locations where people gather and drop coins in the machines. A proprietor of such a location is able to hike the percentage up even higher than 50-50, on a threat of replacing the machine with a rival operator's equipment."

Commenting on the effect of the new nickel-in-the-slot motion picture machines on the "juke" box business, Mr. Steffens said, "As to movie machines I don't believe they will hurt the automatic phonograph business. Most people who play these record machines desire to dance. The machine is placed in the most convenient spot, easily accessible but out of the dancers' way. The new motion picture machines require a vantage point where the patron can witness the image on the screen, thus requiring a prominent place in the tavern or restaurant.

"So, in all probability, the owner will install two machines—," Mr. Steffens continued, "the records machine for dancing and the other film machine for the customers' pleasure. However, I believe the novelty of the film machine type of entertainment will soon wear off and those who wish to dance will insist on record machines."

No Production Set

Sam Sax, who, with Frank Orsatti, actor's agent, recently organized the company producing "Phonovision," nickel-in-the-slot movie projector, says he is still uncertain whether his company will produce the required three-minute 16mm pictures, itself, or, arrange with another company to produce them. Mr. Sax said several major producers, including Paramount, Twentieth Century-Fox and an unidentified California concern, had been negotiating for the contract. Twenty-five of the projectors will be sent to franchise holders for tests next week.

Meanwhile, in Detroit, Don Kelsey, Michigan Phonovision distributor, announced the early launching of a distribution campaign in that State. Each projector will play a three-minute short for a nickel, eight features running in a series. Programs are designed for weekly changes.

Jacob Schreiber, who formerly operated a circuit of theatres in Detroit, is reported planning to enter the nickel-in-the-slot picture field in that area.

In Hollywood, it was reported that Globe Productions' proposed contract with Mills Novelty Company for films for the nickel-in-the-slot machines was near completion.

200 Subjects Annually

Under the revised arrangement, Globe will guarantee 200 subjects annually at a flat price per negative, plus a percentage of the rentals. At present, production of film exceeds manufacturer of projectors, but the Mills Company expects to equalize production next month.

Also in Hollywood, Panoram, the Roosevelt-Mills automatic projector and "soundies," as the footage will be dubbed, was to be formally introduced at a premiere and four-day exposition this week, starting Monday, with James Roosevelt and Fred L. Mills as hosts. The opening day, called "Meet Jimmy Roosevelt Day," closed with a reception for film stars and the press.

Production of additional shorts for the machine will get under way shortly, the Chicago office of the Mills company reported this week. Gordon Mills' Hollywood offices are now said to be alloting Panoram franchises to various distributors throughout the country.

More than 8,500 square feet of office space on the 25th and 28th floors of 250 West 57th Street, New York, has been leased to Talk-a-Vision, Inc., of which John E. Otterson is president. Mr. Otterson is former president of Paramount Pictures and ERPI. The company manufactures and distributes a new coin-operated talking-picture machine.

C. W. Bunn, formerly general sales manager for ERPI, also has joined Talk-a-Vision

"One Print, Please" Top Order Up to Now for Nickel Films

Following a geyser of publicity some months back, quiet has settled upon those quarters in Hollywood whence was to issue miles of film for thousands of slot-machines to be located in bars, billiard parlours and other places across the nation. Explanations vouchsafed for this period of quiet—time required for manufacture of machines, perfecting of sales-plans and means of distribution—have the sound of validity. Some films of length and kind considered right for the nickel-market have been made. Announcements of plans to make more are renewed from week to week. A Hollywood geared to release-dates waits and wonders.

By way of getting at the heart of this matter, inquiry was made this week in a different quarter—the laboratory. It appears that prospects for business from the producers of this type of film are considered bright, if and when. One laboratory has submitted bids on orders of 8,000,000, 5,000,000 and 3,000,000 feet, respectively, dangled by three companies. No commitments for prints in quantity have been made, however. "One print," this is a quote, "has been about top order up to now."

Named by none of the slot-machine companies as among their problems, but worrying all of them, is the matter of selectivity. Unlike records so stacked in music machines that the depositor of the nickel may select his tune, punch a button and get it, films in the slot-machines are to be seen in sequence only. It seems to be a difference neither comprehended nor relished by the people who have been sampling with their own nickels the offerings of machines placed for test purposes. Engineers are reported to be seeing what can be done about it, getting nowhere.

The Westerner

(Goldwyn - United Artists)

Gary Cooper in the Saddle

Concerned with a bloody and bangup battle between the forces of right and wrong, good and evil, as exemplified in a land feud between cattlemen and homesteaders in the days after the Civil War and in the Texas panhandle territory, "The Westerner" has been garbed in the copyrighted, slick Goldwyn production style of superior actor and technical assets and has yet retained the essential horse and gun play ingredients of a rousing horse opera.

Marquee mounting material is supplied in the rich stake of the popular Gary Cooper, in the saddle of the title rolist. He is to be remembered for his similar work in such sagas of the wide open spaces as "The Plainsman" and "The Cowboy and the Lady." Sharing honors with Cooper is the performance of Walter Brennan, who as the colorful frontier personality, the rascally renegade "Judge Roy Bean," makes memorable screen moments. Doris Davenport, a newcomer with promising looks and talent, makes her screen debut as the daughter of a homesteader. Fred Stone and Forrest Tucker are chief figures in support of the principals. The fabled name and beauty of that toast of two continents, Lily Langtry, alias the "Jersey Lily," is utilized as important story material but the real appearance of the much talked about lady materializes only at the film's finale and then only for a short and silent showing. William Wyler of "Wuthering Heights" triumph demonstrates his directorial versatility in the handling of this sagebrush saga.

"Cole Harden" saves himself from hanging on charges of being a horse thief when his quick wits invent a story of being an intimate of Lily Langtry who happens to be the lifetime dream girl of "Judge Roy Bean," a rum soaked and ruthless self appointed legal administrator of Vinegarroon. The "Judge" suspends sentence on the promise that "Harden" will turn over to him a treasured memento of the lovely Lily, a lock of her valued tresses. "Harden" becomes friendly with a homestead family, the "Mathews," and especially with the daughter of the house, "Jane Ellen."

The homesteaders are waging a losing battle with the "Judge" and his gang of hoodlum cattlemen over whether the district's land shall be devoted to grazing or cultivation purposes. After one of the thrill highlights of the story, the raid on the settlers' holding and the burning of their crops and homes, "Harden" has himself sworn in as a deputy sheriff and takes a warrant out for "Bean's" arrest. He finally gets his man as the "Judge" attends alone a performance of Lily Langtry but before the death of "Bean," "Harden" arranges an introduction between the glamorous stage figure and her long standing admirer. "Harden" then retires to domesticity and "Jane Ellen."

Strike Up the Band

Rooney and Rhythm

The "Strike Up the Band" of Mickey Rooney and Judy Garland, coming almost exactly a year after their "Babes in Arms," is the latest in Hollywood's increasingly numerous series of "all-out" pictures. No item of production value has been spared to make this fit the new pattern of shows patently designed to appeal to the largest possible market, to warrant, if distribution so wills it, extended playing time, increased admissions, even single-billing.

In addition to its co-stars, the picture is the work of the same producer, Arthur Freed, and of the same director, Busby Berkeley, as was "Babes in Arms." And June Preisser and Ann Shoemaker are seen here, too, as they were in the cast of last year's Rooney-Garland musical.

Judging by preview night reactions coming from the roots of the audience, as against those emanating from the studio claque, the film is Rooney at his best, gives Miss Garland greater opportunities for her maturing talent. For the ebullient Mr. Rooney here appears in what might almost have been a labor of love—being cast as a youthful adherent to the charms of a band, and most especially of the drums.

Romance devolves from Miss Garland's slighted efforts in the direction of a romantic attachment with the boy, while she helps him in efforts to get his band to Chicago for an audition before Paul Whiteman. Mr. Whiteman appears on the screen as band leader and adviser, finally as hero giving Mickey's band first place in a contest, by popular demand.

Not overlooked in the film's close to two hours of running time are such merchandising elements as the poignancy devolving from the wish of Mickey's mother to have him study medicine, and from the sickness of one of his young friends; the patriotic final sequence, in which the Stars and Stripes are unfurled on the screen to the accompaniment of the title song, the work of George and Ira Gershwin; the melody and catchy lyrics of "Our Love Affair," written by Mr. Freed and Roger Edens; the mummery of a "Gay Nineties" melodrama put on by the cast to raise money for their band, and the performance given by the youthful co-stars in an exaggerated version of a La Conga dance.

Applauding individual performances and outstanding sequences from the opening footage, the audience found the John Monks, Jr.-Fred Finklehoffe original screen play perfectly tailored to the talents of the players. In addition to those already named, top notch performances are turned in by William Tracy and Larry Nunn.

Previewed at the Village theatre, Westwood, to reaction as noted. After the performance, MGM's Louis B. Mayer was to be seen engaging in conversation with friends on a Westwood corner. He seemed pleased.—WALTER SELDEN.

I'm Still Alive

(RKO)

Story of Hollywood

Enterprising exhibitors can find in RKO's "I'm Still Alive" a potential gold mine of exploitation as the story of Hollywood's stunt men, a group of seldom exploited heroes who double for stars and principal players in dangerous scenes. With a background of the film industry, the story tells of the vicissitudes encountered by a film star and a stunt man who marry, the latter scorning the efforts of his wife to make his life easier.

With Kent Taylor as the stunt man and Linda Hayes as the star he marries, "I'm Still Alive" goes through almost the entire routine of the daredevils who do not get screen credit. Planes crash, autos are wrecked, high dives are taken.

Irving Reis, formerly associated with radio, executes his first film directorial assignment with credit. Edmund North, who wrote both the story and the script, indicated his knowledge of the subject.

Frederic Ullman, Jr., was the associate producer under Lee Marcus, executive producer.

More from Preston Sturges

In view of the record for entertainment established by Preston Sturges and Paul Jones as writer-director and producer of "The Great McGinty," there can be no question that the fist step of showmen exploiting this film is to say that it is another from the same source. It may be added that it bears the imprint of their talent in the thoroughness of its craftsmanship, the directness of its narration and the precision with which it makes point after point, slighting or belaboring none but fitting each into a whole which has as the sum of its objectives the entertaining of its audiences.

The subject dealt with this time is the radio advertising-contest, approached from the point of view of the contestant who wins a prize or doesn't and also from that of the sponsor. This is material treated of by other pictures, some in earnest and some for purposes of comedy, but the Sturges-Jones presentation of it combines both earnestness and humor in a story that stresses no point, though making many, restricting itself to purposes of entertainment for entertainment's sake.

Dick Powell, praised in newspaper and magazine for his performance in "I Want a Divorce," is seen as the winner of a contest whose experience is the core of the story, with Ellen Drew as the girl with whom possession of the prize-money makes marriage possible. Post-preview expression of pressmen was of a sort to suggest that newspaper and magazine will be telling readers that both surpass previous performances in this offering.

Youth Will Be Served

(20th Century-Fox)

Comedy

Lucien Hubbard's production of "Youth Will Be Served," starring Jane Withers, is an assignment executed with the same elan which made the little girl a favorite of exhibitors. The picture has vim, vigor and vitality, featured by a freshness of background, compactness of story and plenty of what makes for good, wholesome family entertainment.

Jane is presented as a daughter of a southern moonshiner, played by John Qualen, and her adventures while staying at a National Youth Administration camp as her father serves out his prison term constitute the major portion of the plot. Involved also are a bank robbery in which the thieves cache the loot in the swamps, a prison break, a scheme by a wealthy lumberman to rid the community of the camp, and a musical show staged by the NWA girls and the Civilian Conservation Corps boys.

Supporting are Jane Darwell, Robert Conway, Elyse Knox, Joe Brown, Jr., Charles Holland and others, with Holland, a Negro singer, receiving uproarious applause from the preview audience for his rendition of a "Hot Catfish and Corn Dodgers" vendor's song.

Wanda Tuchock adapted the story by Ruth Fasken and Hilda Vincent. Otto Brower was the director.

Yesterday's Heroes

(Twentieth Century-Fox)

Football Story

First of the annual cycle of football stories, Twentieth Century-Fox' "Yesterday's Heroes" tells the story of a young medical student who, upon becoming a football hero, deserts his childhood sweetheart, marries the celebrity-hunting college widow, and finds his little world blown up in his face. By using the flashback method, the picture recites the three college years of the youth, and ends on a note of new hope for him when he is reconciled with his girl friend and on his way back to school.

Jean Rogers, Robert Sterling, Ted North, Katharine Aldridge, Russell Gleason, young 20th Century-Fox contractees, play the principal roles.

Excitement and romance are mixed in adequate proportions by screen play writers Irving Cummings, Jr., and William Conselman, Jr., who adapted the Saturday Evening Post serial by William Brent, a sound technician at the studio. After the studio bought the story, Brent was signed as a writer.

Compactness and conciseness mark the direction of Herbert I. Leeds who inserted stock shots for some of the football games to advantage. Sol M. Wurtzel was the executive producer.

Sky Murder

(MGM)

Nick Carter Series

Third in the group of mystery films based on the Nick Carter stories, with Walter Pidgeon in the title role and Donald Meek as "Bartholomew, the Bee Man." This production is based on tracking down the head of a fifth column movement.

In depicting the adventures and humorous episodes growing out of the pursuit and eventual capture of a power-crazed and wealthy young man who sees himself as an American dictator, support is lent the detective by Karen Verne, Joyce Compton and George Lessey, while the would-be dictator is portrayed by Edward Ashley.

Miss Verne is seen as a girl of German origin whose family is threatened with reprisals unless she aids the "movement" in this country, unmistakably designated as at least partly Nazi-inspired, although no names are named. Miss Compton portrays a flighty private detective, Mr. Lessey, a senator conducting an investigation into the fifth column movement.

Margie

(Universal)

Comedy-Romance

An original story and screen play by Erna Lazarus and W. Scott Darling, "Margie" is another in the series of films using song titles as names. Principals are Tom Brown, Nan Grey, Mischa Auer, Edgar Kennedy, Allan Jenkins, Eddie Quillan, Wally Vernon and Joy Hodges.

The story is that of an unsuccessful song writer turned collection agent for a piano concern, who leaves his wife because of her preoccupation with the writing of radio scripts. They are brought together again after comedy interludes have been provided. Most notable of these comes at the end of the picture, when Andy Devine, not appearing in the film previously, walks in with six-shooters blazing, looks around in bewilderment, and then tells the audience: "I guess I'm in the wrong picture."

Joseph G. Sanford acted as associate producer, with Otis Garrett and Paul Gerard Smith directing. The title song, delivered by Miss Hodges, was written by Con Conrad, J. Russell Robinson and Benny Davis, while the other two songs heard were the work of Charles Previn and, respectively, Sam Lerner and Paul Gerard Smith.

Previewed at the RKO Hillstreet theatre, Los Angeles, where it was well received.—W. S.

Thundering Frontier

(Columbia)

Western

"Thundering Frontier" follows the general pattern of the series, this time the story hinging on whether or not a telegraph line will be in operation by the deadline set. The picture has Charles Starrett in the top spot and the Sons of the Pioneers in support as they have been in all the Starrett series. Iris Meredith is the girl and Alex Callam, the principal heavy.

"Carter Filmore," father of "Jim" (Starrett) and "Ed" (Raphael Bennett), runs the local bank with son "Ed" while "Jim" runs the "Filmore" ranch. The father has invested heavily in a telegraph line being constructed by "Andrew Belknap." Much to the chagrin of "Jim" the old man sells the ranch because of need for immediate money. Later the old man has a stroke and dies. "Ed," who owes money to "Scottie" (Callam), forges a will which makes him heir to all the old man's money.

At the instigation of "Scottie," "Ed" tells "Belknap" he intends to foreclose on his loan. What follows is the usual series of raids, fighting and gun play indulged in by the protagonists, leading up to the grand climax, wherein the forces for good triumph.

Under Texas Skies

(Republic)

New Mesquiteer Series

The first of the new season's Mesquiteer films for Republic has Robert Livingston, Bob Steele and Rufe Davis as the trio with Steele and Davis appearing for the first time in this series.

Adapted for the screen by Anthony Coldewey, who also wrote the original story, and Betty Burbridge, the picture has for its theme a sheriff who is the head of a ring of cattle rustlers and the Three Mesquiteers who join forces to prove the innocence of one of the trio accused of murder.

"Stoney Brooke" returns to his home town to find his father murdered and his boyhood friend, "Tucson Smith," accused and held for the murder. At the same time the cattle of the local ranchers are being stolen by rustlers. "Stoney" enlists the aid of "Lullaby" to prove his friend's innocence, uncover the cattle rustlers and expose the real murderer.

Romantic interest is supplied by Lois Ranson and Rufe Davis adds the comedy element with his mimicry and sound imitations. Harry Grey was associate producer with George Sherman directing.

Queen of the Yukon

(Monogram)

Jack London Melodrama

This Jack London story of adventure in the goldfields is introduced by a reading of a Robert W. Service poem, photographed against a montage of the scenes used in the picture, and moves on from that start to tell in the terms of action which were London's, a tale of the place and time his works dealt with. The picture ends, after other episodes in kind, with a fist-fight of the sort seen in plenty in the years following "The Spoilers" and now restored by infrequency of presentation to the power it wielded then.

Irene Rich portrays the lady mentioned in the title, with Charles Bickford the man she depends upon as manager through the adventures depicted and marries at close of the film. She is owner of a riverboat coveted by a land company given to claim jumping and strives for a time to keep her daughter, arriving from the States, from learning of her prowess as dealer at faro. The girl, who learns the truth and determines to emulate her mother, decides in the finale to marry a surveyor who has thrashed the villain and prevented robbery of the miners.

(RKO Radio)

Pastoral Comedy-Drama

This filming of a Gene Stratton-Porter novel ranked as a best-seller in its day and remembered by many for its charm has been executed with fidelity to content, toe and manner of the book. No modernizing of date, place, costuming, dialogue, point or purpose has been undertaken, a circumstance to be emphasized by showmen in exploitation appealing to the public which made the book a favorite.

Tim Holt as "Laddie" and Joan Carroll as "Little Sister" dominate interest, Miss Carroll's performance receiving emphasis. Others in the cast match these in style of delivery, behaviour and portrayal.

Cliff Reid as producer and Jack Hively in his direction have pointed their efforts at the women and children who were the novelist's followers.

Hell's Cargo

(Film Alliance)

International Incident

The ups and downs in the three-cornered friendship of a Frenchman, an Englishman and a Russian, all naval officers, is the theme of this British picture—the production having been made before the present conflict and during the period of the Franco-Russian treaty. In rather typical British fashion the picture takes its own time in disclosing that theme.

A freighter, manned by ex-criminals and carrying a cargo of liquid that becomes a deadly gas when mixed with salt water, by a ruse has obtained permission to dock in a French harbor. The freighter's drunken doctor escapes to town and is spilling the story in a waterfront cafe when the ship's owner arrives. In the melee the owner kills the doctor with a knife.

The three naval officers, who are just becoming friends in another part of the town, learn of the killing. They each declare their sailors couldn't have been involved, which brings a rift to the friendship. The freighter leaves the harbor and soon after the authorities learn of the true nature of the cargo. The French officer, in command of a destroyer and with the British and Russian as liaison officers, sets out in pursuit.

The owner of the freighter releases the liquid when cornered, killing all on the freighter and menacing the lives on a passenger liner, which is stalled in the path of the gigantic gas cloud. The destroyer, against orders—the French officer's wife and boy are on the liner—passes through the gas cloud to get to the liner.

"Calling All Husbands" is an adaptation of a Martin Flavin comedy, and in its presentation there is an abundance of dialogue and not so much motion. The plot deals with a nagging wife who constantly reminds her husband that she should have married the town banker, only to have the latter turn up, now a tramp and thief.

George Tobias, Ernest Truex and Florence Bates have the chief roles, with Lucile Fairbanks and George Reeves supplying the young romantic interest.

On Foreign Newsfronts

The sponsors of this journalistic screen visitor in their latest monthly bulletin pay ardent tributes to the gentlemen of the Fourth Estate, both on the home fronts and on foreign assignments. With what is reported to be the greatest news story in modern history, the reporting of the Second World War, there is stressed the importance of preserving in this country the final refuge of a free and democratic press. To substantiate this statement, speedy visits are made to the offices of the New York Times and the United Press, Associated Press and the International News Service where the visitor glimpses reporters at work and editors in session as they sift facts from propaganda in the censored dispatches emanating from the dictated and war beleaguered sectors of Europe. From there, the camera moves across the ocean to introduce some of the famous war correspondents now tracking down the biggest assignment of the century. Otto Tolischus of the Times, whose book reportage of the martial European scene has made best seller position, and H. V. Kaltenborn, airway prophet, are seen being dismissed from Germany as personae non gratae. To illustrate the extent and importance of the European beat, there is presented an excellent pictorial summary of the World War, II, situation.—Running time, 19 minutes.

Vaudeville with a Nod to Foster

Although the locale for this talent demonstration is called something like a Stephen Foster festival, it is only near the conclusion that the subject's title song is rendered. Then some other verses from the Foster collection are repeated in rapid succession. Before this, running time has been allotted to a depiction of a blues singer moaning a sultry love dirge, a youngster executing a tap dancing routine, a trio of acrobatic lady dancers and a group of male novelty singers. The vaudeville variety show is interesting as such rounds of talent go.—Running time, 17 minutes.

Further Collection of Oddities

Items in the newest chapter from this "believe it or not" category include a lady with a passion for collecting autographed handkerchiefs of notable personalities; an inspection of a miniature palace which is equipped with a remarkable array of tiny furniture and suites; a gun club which uses old fashioned firearms in its practice; a doctor who raises house flies for the purpose of testing the potency of insecticides and a youngster who has a billy-goat for a riding pet.—Running time, 9¼ minutes.

Popular Radio Show in Screen Form

The popular radio show, "Hobby Lobby," has now been transplanted to screen territory. The material of the subject is similar to other subjects devoted to investigating the unusual but the presentation possesses the added advantage of allowing the subjects studied to speak for themselves instead of being described by a commentator. The initial number includes Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt who makes a brief appearance at the conclusion of the reel to report on the hobby activity of her husband and family and to give some sensible advice on the advantages of such recreational pursuits. Before this "scoop" presentation, there have been interviewed an elderly lady newspaper vendor who reveals the results of her sculpture hobby and a gentleman who has taught a blind dog to play a set of drums and a seeing canine to perform on the piano as well as be the leader for his blind dog companion. Further hobbyists visited are a young man who works with instruments for magnifying sound and a young lady who has schooled some young children to be expert juvenile opera singers.—Running time, 11½ minutes.

Jersey Allied Plans Convention, Banquet

New Jersey Allied is preparing plans for its annual convention at the President Hotel in Atlantic City next Wednesday through Friday and for the testimonial banquet to Abram Meyers, general counsel and leader for many years of the legislative battles for the National Allied States Association. The Eastern Pennsylvania unit of Allied met in Philadelphia Tuesday to discuss its representation at the meeting and banquet.

Jersey Allied will muster several hundred, and many more are expected for the Myers banquet.

This week the schedule, comprising speeches by distributor leaders, by Allied leares, and by equipment men, was being arranged as were the social events, with special attention given to wives of members.

The annual convention and trade show of the Associated Theatres of Indiana will be held November 11th and 12th, place still unselected.

The Connecticut Motion Picture Theatre Owners will meet next Monday in New Haven to discuss the consent decree, among other things.

The Independent Theatres Protective Association of Wisconsin and upper Michigan will hold its annual convention October 2nd and 3rd at the Schroeder Hotel, Milwaukee. Charles Trampe is in charge of arrangements.

Several officers of the Northwest, and of the Eastern Pennsylvania Allied units are expected to attend.

The Hit Parade of 1941

(Republic)

Republic's entry in the new season screen musical field, this is one of the company's top films of all time, according to studio officials, and will have an advertising and publicity budget of $600,000, largest in the history of the firm.

The studio's enthusiasm may be seen from their casting, which includes Kenny Baker, Frances Langford, Hugh Herbert, Mary Boland, Ann Miller, Patsy Kelly, Phil Silver, Barnett Parker, Borrah Minnevitch and his Rascals, Six Hits and a Miss and Jan Garber's Band.

The original screen play by Bradford Ropes, F. Hugh Herbert and Maurice Leo concerns the sale of time on a television station. The station has been acquired by Herbert and his nephew, Baker, who run a Connecticut "swap-shop." In acquiring the station, however, Herbert trades his store, and then proceeds to give the store as collateral for a bank loan to purchase new television equipment. No longer owning the store, the loan must be repaid, which calls for the sale of a program. Frances Langford and Ann Miller contribute to the acquisition of a sponsor.

Sol Siegel was associate producer and John Auer directed, the latter's last having been "Women in War."

Release date: To be determined.

Give Us Wings

(Universal)

The Dead End Kids here appear as aviation enthusiasts—their anxiety to learn to fly taking them from jobs as airport mechanics to training towards the piloting of old and unsafe planes for an aerial crop dusting company.

Billy Halop is seen as the leader of the "Kids"; his pals being Huntz Hall, Bernard Punsley, Gabriel Dell and Bobby Jordan. Death of the latter finally brings retribution to the avaricious owner of the company, enacted by Victor Jory. Wallace Ford, Anne Gwynne, Milburn Stone and Shemp Howard round out the cast.

The screen play was written by Arthur Horman from an original by Eliot Gibbons. Charles Lamont directed, as he did "Oh Johnny How You Can Love," and Ken Goldsmith was associate producer, his last having been "Argentine Nights."

Release date: To be determined.

Little Men

(RKO Radio)

"Little Men" is the third film to be produced by Gene Towne and Graham Baker under their corporate name of "The Play's the Thing Productions" for RKO release. The first two, "Swiss Family Robinson" and "Tom Brown's School Days" were also based on well known story properties, familiar to the millions.

Louisa May Alcott's novel appeared in 1869, a year after her "Little Women." The screen version was written by Mark Kelly, and Towne and Baker, and adds two new characters, a fast talking swindler who sacrifices everything for his adopted son, and a burglar; respectively portrayed by George Bancroft and Jack Oakie.

Seen as "Aunt Jo" is Kay Francis, while her husband is enacted by Charles Esmond, who helps her run the school on which the story is based.

Also seen are Jimmy Lydon, Ann Gillis, Richard Nichols, Isabel Jewell, and last but not least, exploitation-wise, "Elsie," the Borden cow, and her calf. The picture was directed by Norman Z. McLeod.

Release date: November 8, 1940.

Second Chorus

First film produced under the banner of National Pictures to be released by Paramount, "Second Chorus" has a cast headed by Fred Astaire, Paulette Goddard, Burgess Meredith, Charles Butterworth and Artie Shaw and his band.

Boris Morros, former Paramount music head and now head of National, produced with Robert Stillman; the latter having also been assistant director. Credit for direction goes to Henry C. Potter, who has done such other musicals as "The Story of Vernon and Irene Castle."

The story is described as a comedy of the "back-stage" lives of members of a modern swing band. Fred Astaire is cast as a perennial Yale senior, unable to tear himself away from his trumpet long enough to bone up on his studies and graduate. He finally leaves school, and becomes a musical sensation.

Astaire and Burgess Meredith, cast as another orchestra trouper, engage in a "Flagg and Quirt" campaign for feminine attention, culminating when both discover Paulette Goddard, cast as secretary of Artie Shaw's band. An original by Frank Cavett, the screen play was written by Cavett, Elaine Ryan and Ian Hunter.

Release date: Jan. 10, 1941.

Fireman Save My Child

The story concerns efforts on the part of fireman Erwin and policeman Carson to win the hand of Miss Merkel, mother of two year old Sandy. The choice is left to Sandy's selection. Further complicating the scene is the fact that Miss Merkel's father has control of an appropriation which can be made to either the fire or the police departments, and which both want for new equipment.

After numerous escapades involving Sandy, a fire finally decides the issue. Burt Kelly was associate producer of the picture, which was co-directed by Otis Garrett and Paul Smith.

Three short subjects were completed, although work was not started on any.

Product to Come

While fewer films were finished or started this week than last, the production mill was stepped up to an even faster pace for the weeks ahead.

Typical of fall production plans were those at Paramount, where eight films were set to start between now and November.

First to start is "Shepherd of the Hills," in Technicolor, starring Harry Carey in the title role. Betty Field, John Wayne, James Barton and Beulah Bondi have top roles.

William Wellman starts direction of "Reaching for the Sun," starring Joel McCrea and Ellen Drew, September 23rd. The film is adapted from the Wessel Smitter book, "F. O. B. Detroit." On the same date, "You're the One," produced by Gene Markey, gets under way. Orrin Tucker and Bonnie Baker are starred.

Paul Jones will produce, and Preston Sturges write and direct, as they did on "Christmas in July," their "Lady Eve" on October 1st. Henry Fonda and Paulette Goddard co-star.

On October 14th, work begins on "New York Town," tentative title of the new Mary Martin comedy which Anthony Veiller is producing. Michell Leisen, who just completed "Arise, My Love," directs.

Gregory Ratoff's production, "Ballerina," stars Loretta Young and will start October 28th. Three days later Boris Morros and Robert Stillman, for National Pictures, begin work on "The American Vagabond," starring Douglas Fairbanks and based on the life of O. Henry.

At least five Technicolor features are to be forthcoming from Twentieth Century-Fox in the new season, it became apparent this week. Already set for the color medium are "Rings on Her Fingers," to star Don Ameche and Carmen Miranda; "Western Union," with Robert Young, Dean Jagger, Brenda Joyce and Randolph Scott; "Chad Hanna," which has Henry Fonda, Linda Darnell, and Mary Beth Hughes; "Down Argentine Way," with Don Ameche, Betty Grable, and Carmen Miranda.

Additionally counted is "The Return of Frank James," already released.

MONKEY SEE, MONKEY DO

George Washington Peter learned, last week in Hollywood, that a closed shop means just that.

G. W. Peter is a ring-tailed monkey, who recently completed a part in "The Sea Hawk". As a result of his thespian activity, he was invited to make an appearance on "Little Old Hollywood", radio program, and enliven the proceedings with a bit of chattering.

Ever alert, Georgia Fifield, head of the Los Angeles chapter of the American Federation of Radio Artists, heard of the offer, and declared that: "Actors make noises. The monkey's chattering constitutes a noise. So, ipso factor, George is a radio actor and he carries an AFRA card or else."

There was no "or else" about it. George has his card.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is slated to tell the story of the American cowboy. This week Will James, bronco-buster, illustrator and author of such favorites for young readers as "Smoky" and "Lone Cowboy," was signed by the studio to prepare a script on "The Saga of the American Cowboy."

Story purchases of the week included Twentieth Century-Fox's buy of "Replenish the Earth," Stephen Longstreet novel, for a reported $30,000; Warners' acquisition of "One Foot in Heaven—the Life of a Practical Parson," biography of a Methodist minister, by Hartzell Spence, and that studio's purchase of a yarn on the U. S. Cavalry, by Ronald Reagan, Warner actor.

MORRIS HELPRIN, production assistant to Alexander Korda, has been granted a leave of absence in order to proceed with plans for production of a play, "The Hard Way," on Broadway this season in association with Allan Boretz, author of "Room Service." Mr. Helprin, however, will continue in association with Mr. Korda's eastern headquarters, and will supervise special campaign plans on "The Thief of Bagdad." Mr. Helprin also is seeking a play for Katherine Locke (Mrs. Morris Helprin) for the coming season.

JAMES STEWART has been given a new long-term MGM contract, and will next appear with HEDY LAMARR in "Come Live With Me."

JAMES CAGNEY is to be starred by Warners in "The Tanks Are Coming," dealing with training of the U. S. Tank Corps.

ROSALIND RUSSELL and MELVIN DOUGLAS are co-starring for Columbia in "This Thing Called Love." ALEXANDER HALL directs and WILLIAM PERLBERG produces.

GEORGE MURPHY and LUCILLE BALL have been awarded the leads in Harold Lloyd's "Three Girls and a Gob."

DOROTHY PARKER and ALAN CAMPBELL are working on the screen play of "Come Live With Me" for MGM.

ALFRED WERKER has been signed by WALT DISNEY to direct the ROBERT BENCHLEY sequences in "The Reluctant Dragon," feature in cartoon and human action

LUCIEN HUBBARD, Twentieth Century-Fox associate producer, who just finished work on "Youth Will Be Served," his fourth picture since March, begun a leave of absence this week to last until January.

JOHN BARRYMORE has been signed by Universal to star in "The Invisible Woman," comedy to be produced by Burt Kelly, employing the invisibility technique used in "The Invisible Man Returns."

KURT NEUMAN has been signed by Columbia, to direct "John Brown's Body," first of a new series of four pictures based on stories by Ellery Queen.

MAX GOLDEN, former associate producer at Twentieth Century-Fox, has returned to the studio as assistant to William Koenig, production manager.

Delaware Surveys Games, Blue Laws; Other Legislation

Bank Nights and Bingo are lawful in Kentucky under legislative statute, although the law is unconstitutional, James R. Morford, attorney-general of Delaware, has been informed in his survey of gambling limitations and blue laws being conducted throughout the country. The survey is being made to compare statutes of other states with the Delaware Sunday blue laws in the hope of gaining information for the revision of the Delaware statutes.

47 States Questioned

The Kentucky report is the 33rd received by the attorney-general from the 47 mailed out several weeks ago.

The assistant attorney general of Kentucky, W. Owen Keller, wrote that Section 226 of the Kentucky constitution is specific in that "lotteries and gift enterprises are forbidden and no privileges shall be granted for such purposes and none shall be exercised and no schemes for similar purposes shall be allowed.

"The recent Legislature . . . passed a law providing that the 'bank night' system of awards be permitted by statute. This act is of course unconstitutional if Section 226 is to be observed."

Mr. Keller also said many of Kentucky's laws were obsolete with regard to occupations which may be carried on on the Sabbath and intimated that authorities were inclined to "wink" at violations.

Pennsylvania Sunday Question

The question of Sunday films will be decided in November in 22 communities in northeastern Pennsylvania which do not have Sunday pictures at the present time. However, no sooner were the petitions asking the question be put on the ballot submitted to the respective county board of elections than ministerial groups announced their intention of defeating the issue in three communities.

Communities which will vote on the question and their respective counties follow: Luzerne County-Hazleton, West Hazleton, Kingston, Shickshinny, Conyngham Township; Lackawanna County-Taylor, Clarks Summit; Carbon County-Mauch Chunk, Weatherly, Palmerton, Lehighton, Summit Hill; Columbia County-Berwick, Catawissa; Montour County-Danville; Northumberland County-Mt. Carmel, Shamokin; Schuykill County-Tamaqua; Monroe County-Stroudsburg; Lancaster County-Lancaster; Lycoming County-Williamsport.

Opposition Views Expressed

The stiffest opposition was uncovered in Berwick where the city council unanimously condemned the Sunday film question. In addition the local newspaper has come out against the issue with the official board of the Bower Memorial Evangelical Church taking an action instructing its pastor, its officials and members to employ every possible means to defeat such a program of "Sabbath desecration." The Crusader's Class of the First Evangelical and Reformed Church also took an unanimous vote expressing their approval of the proposed Sunday motion pictures.

In Danville the Danville Ministerial Association condemned the movement to have Sunday movies and adopted a resolution to cooperate with the Montour County Council of Christian Education in a campaign of education and enlistment of voters to defeat this proposed "encroachment of commercialized amusement upon the Christian Sabbath of this community."

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

ON Monday, September 23d, at high noon, the Time Capsule, famed "letter" to persons living 5,000 years hence, will finally be sealed in at the New York World's Fair Grounds, on Flushing Meadows, Long Island, to begin its long journey with Time into the future, addressing many a message from and about persons and things of 1940, to those in 6940, including one about the motion picture, by Terry Ramsaye, editor of MOTION PICTURE HERALD.

Because of the photographic and cinematic nature of much of the record, the Capsule Committee of Westinghouse called upon the editor of MOTION PICTURE HERALD to supply directions, principles and diagrams calculated to enable the recipient of the message-to-tomorrow to make and operate a motion picture projector, and to seek to make clear to him the nature of the cinematographic art. In this endeavor, and cognizant of high technological responsibility, Mr. Ramsaye compiled an expository dissertation mingling optics, mechanics, chemistry and sex. Important assistance came from the HERALD staff, including Mr. George Schutz, editor of Better Theatres, and the writings of Dr. C. E. K. Mees, head of the Research Laboratories of the Eastman Company.

While the Westinghouse experts, engineers all, the Capsule committee being advised especially by G. Edward Pendray, assistant to the president in charge of public relations—5,000 years of them—expressed approval, they apparently desired to supplement the social and biological information and included a microphotographic recording of W. H. (Buzz) Fawcett's magazine entitled "True Confessions." Another enclosure to Professor X, contributed through the offices of Frederic Ullman, Jr., then of Pathe News, was a selection of outstanding events of the last quarter of a century, edited by Allyn Butterfield.

Mr. Ramsaye's letter to Professor X, F.O.B. Tomorrow, A.D. 6940, closed with a conveyance of assurances of high esteem and "hoping this finds you as well as it leaves us at present."

During the sealing-in ceremonies, 500 pounds of a special mixture of pitch, chlorinated diphenyl and mineral oil, will be poured around the Time Capsule. This compound, intended to resist electrolysis, is impervious to moisture, is hoped to provide a first line of defense against the destructive effects of time.

David S. Youngholm, Westinghouse vice president, states that more than 40 articles now used every day are packed in the Capsule, a fountain pen and mechanical pencil, a watch, electric lamp, tobacco pouch with zipper, tobacco, pipe, cigarettes, cosmetics, a woman's hat, eyeglasses, toothbrush and powder, a miniature camera and film, a razor can opener, specimens of 1940 U. S. money.

In addition there are samples of metals and alloys, wool, cotton, silk, linen, rayon, glass fabrics, rubber fabrics, asbestos cloth, materials such as cement, asbestos, synthetic and natural rubber, synthetic plastics; also samples of coal (which may be rare in 5,000 years), seeds of staple food crops and other items.

Also, a microfilm "essay" on our times, taken from books, almanacs, pictures, catalogs, etc., and arranged in order to cover all the major activities of human life of 1940.

Multi-lingual texts, a dictionary and an idiomatic lexicon are intended to enable future historians to translate the texts of the microfilm. All film in the Capsule is acetate, prepared for permanence. The microfilm essay contains more than 23,000 ordinary book pages, reproducing 10,000,000 words and hundreds of picture. A microscope is enclosed to enable "futurians" to read the text. Complete directions in text and picture are given for the construction of a larger reading machine and a motion picture projection machine. For use in this machine is a newsreel enclosed, especially prepared for the people of A.D. 6940, containing historic, typical, or significant scenes of our day with sound.

BOOM TOWNS!

"Black Gold", as it flows in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Boom Town", is flowing in Texas for a group of movie men who this week were watching, from nearby and afar, the development of the drilling of their second well in Aransas Pass, in the Gulf section of Texas.

Robert ("Bob") O'Donnell, of the large Texas theatre circuit of Hoblitzelle & O'Donnell, is the ramrod of the oil venture, in the leasing of 75 acres in the newly discovered field.

The first well came in, a good producer, but, due to proration by the Texas Railroad Commission, which has jurisdiction over Texas oil production, the second well has been "throttled down".

With "Bob" O'Donnell on the venture are Ned Depinet, general sales manager of RKO; Gradwell Sears, ditto for Warner Brothers; George Schaefer, president of RKO; Neal Agnew, general sales manager for Paramount; Tom Conners, eastern and southern sales manager for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer; Max Cohen, head of Allied States in New York, and Bryan Foy, producer.

The Griffith, the Kadane and other circuit interests in the great southwest likewise are rolling in new oil. Howard Tucker, publisher of the Penny Press, Oklahoma City, writes in a first-hand report of new Griffith-Kadane "wildcat" gushings along the famous Red River boundary of Oklahoma over which a dispute in 1918, between Texas and Oklahoma, almost resulted in bloodshed. Today it is in the center of a new, major high gravity oil play.

WESTERN UNION has been quietly fostering a plan for selling books of special stamps for use of customers having special problems of paying cash for telegrams or other Western Union services. This week W. U. was notified by the Federal Communications Commission, at Washington, that the plan had its approval.

The stamps, for example, would be supplied to salesmen on the road, thereby rendering charge accounts unnecessary, and would be supplied to individuals or agents otherwise away from their offices.

The books, containing stamps in denominations of 25 cents, five cents and one cent, could be bought for children for use in telegraphing home at specified intervals, while away from school, thereby precluding the diversion to unintended uses of money which might be provided for such telegraphic purposes. Johnny's allowance for telegrams which might otherwise go to extra gasolene for Johnny's joy-riding "jaloppy" just couldn't be spent on joy-riding.

SCREEN ACTORS REGISTER COMPLAINTS IN SURVEY

Rosten Study, Financed by Carnegie-Rockefeller, Shows 50 Per Cent Are Dissatisfied

On the eve of the completion of a two-year study of the motion picture industry, conducted under the guidance of Dr. Leo C. Rosten, and financed by the Rockefeller and Carnegie foundations, preliminary reports indicate that 50 per cent of Hollywood film actors and actresses canvassed voted that greater economic security and more regular work were needed in their profession.

Greater Security Sought

Recapitulation of the comments, suggestions and complaints dealing with the industry as now disclosed by the Screen Actors' Guild, reveal some of Dr. Rosten's findings as follows:

Fifty per cent sought economic security, more regular work, less discrimination in the distribution of work, more regard for experience, adequate provision for employment contacts, notice of layoff periods, and more time to prepare for tests and rehearsals.

Nineteen per cent complained of insufficient time given to prepare for roles, too few rehearsals, lack of respect, and/or credit for work.

Twenty per cent expressed satisfaction with their working conditions, one of them saying: "To an actor of the old school, working conditions today are heaven."

Nineteen per cent urged shorter, more regular hours and freedom to rest when not needed on the set.

Eleven per cent complained of casting personnel or methods used in studios.

Improvements Recommended

Ten per cent commented upon salary basis, better pay classification, over-time compensation.

Seven per cent recommended improvement in studio sanitation, ventilation, dressing rooms, etc.

The Screen Actor's Guild reports that, of the 309 performers who replied to questionnaires, preliminary checks against Guild figures on such indices as sex and income, would indicate Dr. Rosten's findings as accurate within a margin of from one to four per cent.

Dr. Rosten, who wrote the "H*Y*M*A*N K*A*P*L*A*N" stories several years ago, under the pen name of Leonard Q. Ross, and also the best-seller, "Washington Correspondents," has been conducting the survey, officially known as "Sociological Study of Hollywood and the Motion Picture Industry," under grants from the Carnegie and Rockefeller foundations.

Will Publish Survey

The Carnegie Corporation has bestowed two grants of some $21,000 for the survey, while the Rockefeller Foundation gave an additional grant recently to enable Dr. Rosten to complete the job. The findings will be published in a three-volume edition next spring by Harcourt, Brace & Co., it was said.

Dr. Rosten, formerly on the writing staff of Paramount Pictures, earned his Ph.D. at the University of Chicago.

Completion of the actual writing of the survey by Dr. Rosten, (the survey, itself, is reported as completed), is expected to be delayed indefinitely since the researcher has been called to Washington on Government business.

The erstwhile essayist and humorist recently was named as special consultant to the consumers' division of the National Defense Advisory Commission. He may be officially stationed in Hollywood where he has spent the last 18 months preparing the study of the motion picture industry.

Employment Down

Although the number of persons employed, (exclusive of actors) in the motion picture industry, declined more than 20 per cent in June, as compared with a corresponding period in 1939, and the total payroll was slashed 15 per cent, the average weekly earnings of those employed increased nearly 7 per cent.

Figures released by the Division of Labor Statistics of California showed that:

Employment in the motion picture industry declined more than nine per cent from May to June of this year, while wages dropped 11 per cent.

Average hours of work each week were 33.1 per cent, a drop of 1.8 per cent from June, 1939, and 3.5 per cent from May, 1940.

Earnings per hour were $1.31, up 8.8 per cent over last year and 1.5 per cent over May of this year.

Berlin Must Pay Tax Deficiency of $11,092

The United States Board of Tax Appeals in Washington, last week, affirmed a tax deficiency of $11,092.80 assessed by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue against the 1935 income return of Irving Berlin, composer. The Board ruled that the $150,000 received by the song writer from RKO for composing the music for "Top Hat," and "Follow the Fleet," was for personal services and a license to use the music rather than a sale of capital assets.

The $150,000 had been reported in Mr. Berlin's return as having been received from the sale of the music rights which were represented as costing $25,414.75, leaving a profit of $124,585.25. This was reported as 100 per cent taxable as capital gain. The Board ruled, however, that there had been no sale of capital assets as defined in the revenue laws.

The contention of the American Society of Cinematographers that it was a non-profit scientific organization and that it was entitled to a refund of $713 already paid in taxes and contesting the imposition of deficiencies of $418 assessed by the commissioner against its 1936 return, was decided in favor of the society.

The Board ruled that the society did not surrender its tax-exempt status merely because it derived a small income from the publication of the "American Cinematographer," and maintained a fund for totally disabled members.

Theatre in Colonial Style

Walter Powell, who operates several theatres in Kannapolis, N. C., plans another, the Swanee. In line with the undertaking of Charles A. Cannon, president of the Cannon Mills, who owns most of the town, to rebuild it as it was in Colonial times, Mr. Powell will design the theatre in Colonial style. The town's reconstruction is similar to that of Williamsburg, Va.

Monogram and Alliance in Deal

W. Ray Johnston, president of Monogram, this week announced that a deal had been set with Budd Rogers providing for the cementing and further expansion of relations between Monogram and Alliance Films Corporation, American organization of Associated British Pictures Corporation.

The move brings closer to complete realization the intentions of all parties concerned to build up their mutual interests in both the United States and the United Kingdom, according to the Monogram announcement.

The first release under the new arrangement will be "The Outsider," with "Chamber of Horrors" to follow. ABP is the parent organization of Pathe Pictures, Ltd., which owns the franchise for Monogram in the United Kingdom.

Sees Business Better

Edward A. Golden, vice-president in charge of exchange operations for Monogram, said Monday, following his return to New York from a tour which took him to 18 key cities, that business conditions were generally better. "Conditions are improving. Box office returns are on the up-grade," he remarked.

After three weeks Mr. Golden said he would continue his visit to the company's office. His New York headquarters will be at Monogram exchange and he will spend most of the time on the road. Exchange cities visited by Mr. Golden thus far in his national tour were Albany, Buffalo, Toronto, Cleveland, Detroit, Chicago, Omaha, Des Moines, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, Seattle, Portland, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Salt Lake City, Denver, Kansas City and St. Louis.

James R. Grainger, president of Republic, returned to the home office from an extended tour of the country this week and said he had noted an increase in exhibitor and public morale in every section of the United States.

Bamberger Appoints AMPA Committeemen

Two new committee chairmen have been appointed by Leon Bamberger, AMPA president, in New York, for the remainder of the present administration.

John Flynn, of Variety, has been appointed chairman of the constitution and by-laws committee, which also includes Charles E. McCarthy, of Twentieth Century-Fox and Paul Benjamin, of National Screen. This committee is now in session revising the constitution and by-laws. Changes are certain to be recommended.

Eli Sugarman, of Billboard, will henceforth head the reception committee replacing Lou Lifton who has moved to California with Monogram. Others on this committee are Blanche Livingston, of RKO Theatres and Vincent Trotta, of Advertising Accessories.

Goldwyn Fund Continues

The Samuel Goldwyn Red Cross-Allied Relief Fund, of Hollywood, will continue operation, and will handle any charity drives in which the film industry may participate, Y. Frank Freeman, head of studio operations for Paramount, said, last week.

16MM. SHOWS CALLED FIFTH COLUMN

To the Editor of the Herald:

The fifth columnist in our business is 16mm.

This is a different kind of fifth columnist than the ones generally referred to today, yet its constant encroachment on our business in the past few years has been terrific. Until recently and for more than fifteen years I have been in the distribution end in the Indiana territory, therefore have a fair idea of how rapidly the 16mm business has grown. Three or possibly four years ago, there were not more than forty such showings in our State. Today we have nearly 200, and it's continuing to grow by leaps and bounds each year.

In another two years, if it continues to expand there will be as many 16mm showings as regular theatres in our state.

In and around Terre Haute, within twenty minutes ride from Wabash Avenue (our Main Street) there are now six 16mm shows—East Glenn, Farmersburg, Fairbanks, Riley, N. Terre Haute and Prairieton, where free shows are given all summer.

Branch managers of various exchanges in Indianapolis have frequently asked this writer, as well as other exhibitors here, what was wrong with the grosses in this city. Will people go to our theatres, when they can see them free all summer? How a town of 62,000 can support the regular theatres, is problem enough, without the addition of six 16mm parasite shows.

Faced with this type of competition there is little wonder that theatres here, as well as throughout Indiana are suffering decreased grosses. It is high time that the producers realized that the majority of thetres will simply have to fold-up for the summer and go fishing, and that that time is closer than many of them realize.

Our organization was greatly pleased to see your article in your issue of August 24 re 16mm shows and trust that you will take up the battle and continue to fight these parasites.

Yours very truly,
ABE H. KAUFMAN,
President, Terre Haute Theatre Association.

Plan Fight on Cuban Anti-Block Booking Law

Arthur Pratchett, Paramount general manager for Central America, will submit to home office foreign managers, next week, a complete report on prospects for combatting the Cuban anti-block booking law. Mr. Pratchett is acting as distributors' representative in opposing the law.

The Cuban Government recently rejected the American distributors' protests against the law, but left the way open for further negotiations. Indications are that no decisive action will be taken on the measure until after the newly-elected Cuban administration takes office, October 15.

Martin Braverman has formed the Independent Poster Service, Minneapolis. He is a nephew of Max Torodor, owner of the Ritz, Minneapolis suburban house.

Advisory Library Board Appointed by Academy

An advisory board to guide the policy of the library of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences was appointed this week.

The board consists of Althea Warren, librarian of Los Angeles city public libraries; Helen Vogelson, Los Angeles County Library; Mrs. Bess Yates, Glendale librarian; Gladys Percy, Paramount studio research department; Frances Richardson, 20th Centur-Fox research department; Robert Bruce, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio research department; Mrs. Elizabeth McGaffey, RKO research department, and Dr. Herman Lissauer, Warners research department. Mrs. Donald Gledhill is Academy librarian.

The Academy library, which ranks among the four most complete specialized collections on the industry in America, now contains approximately 1969 books, including selected scripts; 628 bound volumes of trade magazines; 7,000 unbound issues of magazines and trade papers; 2,000 issues of foreign magazines, and some 15,000 pamphlets and clipping folders.

To Hold Conscripts' Jobs

All employes of Interstate and Texas Consolidated Theatres have been notified by Karl Hoblitzelle, head of the two circuits, that, in the event of their being called for military service, the companies will make every effort to safeguard their jobs. Also, in cases where it is warranted, the circuits will see that no employes undergo financial hardship during the period of military service.

Blumberg Reports On "U" Progress

Studio improvements launched more than a year ago are paying dividends in greater production facilities at Universal, Nate J. Blumberg, president, reported this week upon his return to New York after a summer on the Coast.

Mr. Blumberg said the company would deliver seven top pictures before the end of the year. Now ready are "Spring Parade," starring Deanna Durbin; "Seven Sinners" with Marlene Dietrich and John Wayne, and "A Little Bit of Heaven," headlining Gloria Jean. Said Mr. Blumberg:

"These pictures will be playing within 30 days. When you consider that 'Hired Wife' and 'Argentine Nights,' now showing, have just cleared the studios and at least four other big pictures are now shooting, you get a fair idea of the company's production possibilities from now on.

"Four more pictures," he added, "in addition to those already named, have reached a production stage which enables us to guarantee delivery before the end of the year."

These include: "Caribbean Holiday," with Allan Jones, Abbott and Costello; "Back Street," "Invisible Woman," with John Barrymore and John Howard and "The Bank Dick," starring W. C. Fields.

The Universal head further said Franchot Tone had been signed for "Trail of the Vigilantes," and that Durbin, Dietrich and Jean would star in additional pictures.

Japs Duping American Films

The copyright committee of major distributors, of which Edwin P. Kilroe, of the legal department of Twentieth Century-Fox is chairman, is to meet within ten days to consider action to stop the circulation of duped and pirated out-of-date clips of American cartoons, features and shorts, which are reported to have been sold to Central and South American countries by Japanese film companies.

To Seek Prosecution

Although Mr. Kilroe declared that the situation was neither widespread nor serious, he declared that he and his colleagues would do all in their legal power to put an immediate stop to the practice. One of the most economical legal means at the disposal of the distributors is to place the matter in the hands of the prosecutors of the country in which the copyright violations take place, it was indicated.

The distributors' copyright committee is acting on a specific complaint received from Panama. It was there that the pirated clips were discovered in circulation.

According to information in New York, the pirated clips run in lengths from 30 to 100 feet. They are in both 16 and 35 mm.

The misspelling of the names of the subjects amused those in New York, who have seen them. The shorts were spelled as follows on the label of one of the containers: "Popye's" for Popeye; "Popy's" also for Popeye; and "Ghaplins" for Chaplin.

Among all the names, only "Mickey Mouse," was spelled correctly. Labels are marked "Made in Nippon," establishing their origin beyond doubt, it was said.

Executives in New York, who were asked about the matter, declared civil suits brought against Japanese film bootleggers in their native land, usually had been lost by American concerns.

It has been indicated, however, that in order to avoid expensive litigation, distributors would appeal directly to the prosecutors of the countries in which the bootlegged reels are shown, and demand prosecution of the miscreants under the penal code.

Meanwhile, advices from Tokyo report that if American distributors will buy Japanese bonds with 50 per cent of their funds now frozen in that country, the auhorities there will issue import permits for new films to which the distributors are entitled, under an earlier agreement with Japan.

For the past six months, Japan's refusal to issue new import permits in accordance to the old agreement has prevented the shipment of any new films into that country.

Start Pooling Arrangement

The pooling deal involving the majority of theatres in Atlantic City, entered into last month between the Stanley-Warner Brothers, and the George Weilland-P. Mortimer Lewis interests, involving 10 houses, went into effect this week with the simultaneous showing of "Pastor Hall" at the Stanley, Stanley-Warner house, and the Ventnor, Weilland-Lewis theatre. It also marked the first time a United Artists picture has played at the Stanley.

Acquire Italian Films

Esperia Film Distributing Company has acquired the U. S. distributing rights to three Italian films, "The Carnival of Venice," "The Adventures of Salvatore Rosa" and "The Queen of La Scala."

Multiple Sound For "Fantasia"

The sound system for the roadshow engagements of Walt Disney's "Fantasia" will consist of multiple sound tracks, controlled by an indicator track, on a sound film of standard width but separate from the picture itself.

Twelve special sound reproducers are now being built by the Radio Corporation of America for the roadshow runs which are scheduled to begin some time this Fall. The film, featuring the music of Leopold Stokowski and using Disney cartoons to illustrate nine well-known musical compositions, will be shown only in selected theatres where the special sound apparatus will be installed.

The Disney-RCA three-dimensional sound system still held secretly, appears to be similar to that demonstrated in April by the Bell Telephone Laboratories and being marketed by ERPI.

Two New Theatres For Mexico City

by JAMES LOCKHART
in Mexico City

Though new theatre construction has slowed down in Mexico, pending the outcome of the present unsettled political situation, plans have been approved and the money obtained for two more super houses in Mexico City—the Cines Estrella and Iztaccihuatl, each 6,000-seaters. Manuel Angel Fernandez, who operates a three-theatre chain in the Mexican capital, is back of this proposition. These cinemas will give Mexico City three theatres of that class. The pioneer 6,000-seater was opened recently by Oscar and Samuel Granat, operators of a 17-theatre chain.

Film Famine

Morelos state, just outside Mexico City, which includes Cuernavaca, a popular American tourist resort, is faced with a film famine. The state's six cinemas have to use whatever old film they can get, because distributors refuse to service them owing to the state 10 per cent tax on all pictures brought into Morelos. This levy was put into effect because the government believed that the exhibitors were making so much money that they could afford to contribute more to the state's coffers.

The distributors refuse to pay the tax. So do the exhibitors. Appeals have been made to the government to abolish the impost.

The Mexican public health department is making a closer check on the ventilation in cinemas with special apparatus it obtained in the United States. Exhibitors who fail to correct defects that are detected face fines. This checking is being done in Mexico City. It will be extended to all cinemas and other indoor amusement places in Mexico.

National Decency Legion Classifies Seven Films

$34,010,115 IN ANNUAL ADMISSIONS, $10,000,000 IN RENTALS IN CANADA

Past Year in the Dominion Was Best Since 1931; Average Admission Is 24½ Cents; 63% of Theatres Use Double Bills

by COLIN R. HAWORTH
in Montreal

The war has had no adverse effect on theatre attendance in Canada, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics this week disclosing that in 1939, business in the Canadian motion picture field proved the best since 1931, and that it continues to hold this year.

Patrons to picture houses paid a total of $34,010,115 for general admissions, exclusive of amusement taxes, 1.1 per cent above the previous year's $33,635,052. The number of admissions was 138,497,043 or 0.4 per cent above the preceding year.

Average price of admission was 24.5 cents, compared with 24.4 cents in 1938 and 24.2 cents in 1937.

1,186 Theatres

There were 1,186 theatres in Canada, and these presented a total of 676,773 programs, 63 per cent double-feature bills and 37 per cent single. The proportion of double-feature to the total programs was greater in the larger cities than in the smaller places.

Gross rental of all film exchanges in Canada for 1939 totaled $10,315,000, which is a record.

The increase in rentals over 1938 was $97,000, while that over 1930, when the theatre grosses were the largest on record, was $780,000.

The exchange branches listed totaled 67, five more than in 1938, while salaries and wages paid in the 52 weeks ending December 31 last totaled $1,125,800, the number of employes in the distributing offices being 689, of whom 414 were men. In 1930, 663 persons were regularly employed in 59 exchanges, the payroll for that year being $1,074,700.

The low year for Canadian film renting companies, both in revenue and wage costs, was 1933, when combined receipts were down to $6,797,000 and the payrolls had been cut to $855,800 for 574 employes.

Increases all along the line are noted with the exception of the average receipts and admissions per theatre, which are down slightly because of a net increase of 53, to 1,186, in the number of houses in operation. Compared with the previous 12 months, the combined seating capacity was increased from 640,366 to 658,174 and the seats per 1,000 population advanced from 57 to 58.

Independents Increase

The number of independent theatres advanced from 566 to 573, with the larger circuits listed at 280, the remainder being in small groups.

The individually-owned theatres accounted for 25 per cent of gross receipts while the 280 circuit houses obtained 52 per cent of the whole revenue.

There was no change in the total of theatres in cities over 30,000 population, this being 375, but there was an increase of 14 theatres in towns of from 1,000 to 30,000 persons.

An increase of nine, to 108, was shown in the list of theatres playing professional vaudeville in 1939 while theatres showing professional stage shows, either part or full time, advanced from 55 to 65.

Exclusive of proprietors, the total employes of the 1,186 theatres were 7,477, which was 229 more than in 1938, the payroll being $5,954,796 as compared with $5,666,049 for the previous 12 months. The average wage per employe was $795, the average for the previous year being $782.

The average receipts per theatre in 1939 were $28,676. against $29,687, while the average admissions for each of the theatres for the 12 months were 116,777, compared with 121,779 in 1938, when there were 1,133 theatres in operation.

During the year, the average number of seats occupied continuously was 27 per cent for the whole country, the highest efficiency being found in British Columbia, where 31 per cent of all seats were occupied on the average. Ontario and Alberta showed 29 per cent in occupancy; New Brunswick and Manitoba rated 26 per cent and Quebec was next with an average of 24 per cent. In all Canada the lowest efficiency was found in the 13 large theatres, which had the highest admission price average of 36 cents, the ratio of seats in such theatres occupied at all times being 22 per cent. The smallest theatres, with 25-cent average admission prices, were 30 per cent filled at all shows.

In the popularity of double features Quebec Province took the lead with 84 per cent of its programs running two or more pictures. In Ontario and British Columbia 65 per cent of the programs were doubles and in Prince Edward Island only seven per cent.

Double Feature Trend Shown

The trend in double features shows plainly in comparison between the figures for 1939 and those for 1936, first year in which such figures were available. In that time the national average has made but little change, being 62 per cent in 1936 and 63 in 1939. But results from different parts of the country reveal mixed trends, provincial figures revealing that the popularity of doubles has increased in recent years throughout the east and decreased in the west. Taking the Maritime Provinces as a whole, the proportion of doubles to total programs increased from 37 per cent in 1936 to 46 per cent in 1939. The proportion in Quebec increased from 81 to 84 and in Ontario from 60 to 65.

On the other hand the proportion in British Columbia declined from 74 to 65 last year while the Prairie Provinces showed a drop from 55 to 46 per cent.

Amateur stage performances presented along with motion picture entertainment dropped in popularity in 1939 as compared with 1938, while professional performances recorded an increase. There were 101 theatres which held amateur shows with pictures for a total of 1,107 days in 1939, while in the preceding year 126 theatres used amateurs for 1,552 days. Vaudeville played 108 theatres for 4,514 days in 1939 as against 99 theatres and 3,171 the year before. Stock companies or road shows also showed a slight boost playing 472 days in 65 theatres as against 462 days in 55 theatres in 1938.

In addition to regular theatres there were 107 itinerant operators in Canada last year who netted $210,105 in receipts from 893,921 admissions, thus improving on 631,596 admissions and $134,146 receipts made by 64 itinerant operators. This business is approximately 60 per cent confined to the Prairie Provinces.

Working on the estimated population of 11,305,000 the per capita expenditure on movies (exclusive of taxes) was $3.03. British Columbia still takes highest honors in this category with a per capita rate of $4.83 while the others follow in order: Ontario, $4.08; Manitoba, $3.03; Alberta, $2.61; Nova Scotia, $2.59; Quebec, $2.19; New Brunswick, $1.84, Saskatchewan, $1.57 and Prince Edward Island, $1.23.

RKO Argentine Meeting Hears Schaefer by Radio

Establishing a precedent, George J. Schaefer, of RKO spoke by radio telephone from New York, to that company's Argentina sales convention, held at Buenos Aires, Friday, September 13th.

Mr. Schaefer's address included a goodwill message from the Hollywood and New York organizations. He also spoke of his company's efforts to build a better relationship with countries south of the Rio Grande, by producing pictures of definite interest to Latin-Americans and by using outstanding Spanish-speaking actors.

A loud speaker was set up in the convention room of the Hotel Alvear Palace Hotel so that RKO delegates could hear their chief's speech. Phil Reisman, vice-president in charge of foreign distribution and Ben Cammack, Argentine manager, presided at the convention.

IN THE BRITISH STUDIOS

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

Soskin Returns

Back to active production has come Paul Soskin, who has been in virtual retirement for the last few years, but to whose commercial credit stand at least three films, "Ten Minute Alibi," "While Parents Sleep" and "Two's Company," all films of considerable production polish and commercial merit.

Soskin will make "Quiet Wedding" for Paramount release. The subject will be adapted from a successful London play by Esther McCracken. Anthony Asquith will direct, and the cast as already assembled includes Margaret Lockwood, Derek Farr, A. E. Matthews and David Tomlinson.

Bernard Knowles, one of the industry's crack cameramen, has been engaged to take charge of photography, with Cyril Knowles as operator. Paul Sherriff will be art director and Leslie Murray will have charge of sound.

Roman Invasion

Work has been launched thoroughly now at the Rock Studios, Elstree, on the David Macdonald British National film "This England."

First scenes depict the invasion of Britain by the Roman Legions. For this Macdonald's selected location was a farm situated in Hertfordshire, over the meads and fields of which 300 extras garbed in togas, breastplates and the accoutrements of the Roman army, played their parts in the sunlight of a British August.

Mutz Greenbaum is in charge of photography and is using a miniature army of cameras, including the Newman-Sinclair which is fitted with a six inch lens for special inter-cutting shots.

The cast includes, as already recorded, Emlyn Williams, John Clements and Constance Cummings, who are supported by such players as Moreland Grahame, Robert Newton, Esmond Knight and A. E. Mathews.

Pushing ahead on "The Saint's Vacation," their new British venture, RKO Radio announces that plans have now been completed for the production to be made at the Denham Studios.

Paul Stein has been signed to direct.

Hugh Sinclair will this time have the title role, and Sally Gray will have the feminine lead.

The script, supervised by Jeffrey Dell, is nearing completion and William Sistrom, producer, expects to send the film into production during the latter part of September.

It is hoped that directly the new film gets under way, Sistrom will be able to launch preparations on a second feature to be produced in this country.

RAIDS DELAY STUDIO WORK

Together with other industry, and life in general here, British film production is suffering embarrassment from the repeated German bombing raids. No studio has been hit by bombs, but the frequent alarms have compelled work to be halted almost every day.

Most of the studios around London have strongly fortified and elegant air raid shelters, and to these the production staffs go when the sirens sound. Most lavish of these probably is the Denham Studios shelter which is deep under the studio stages, with comforts, home and medical, and all the appurtenances of A.R.P. The "Major Barbara" unit, only one working at Denham currently, calculate a net loss of £1,000 an hour through raid alarms.

Noise of enemy and defence planes, the occasional booming of bombs and the equally occasional crackle of Ak Ak fire is of course a destructive factor in regard to studio work.

Laboratories and processing plants, too, suffer from the raids. Denham Laboratories, however, carry on as usual, are in fact the only ones to do so, at the time of writing. "Spotters" on the roof, two appointed by the men's union, and two by the management, keep an eye open so that if danger approaches in the form of close bombing or fires a subsidiary alarum can be started and the staff sent to the underground shelters.

Joins GPO

Ian Dalrymple, British director and screen writer, has joined the G.P.O. Film Unit as producer-in-chief. Jack Holmes, who was until recently in charge of the Unit, and Harry Watt and Humphrey Jennings remain with the Unit as producers.

The G.P.O. Unit is the official production organization for the Ministry of Information Films Division.

Film Artistes' Association have now joined the Film Industry's Employees' Council, which has hitherto comprised the National Association of Theatrical and Kinematograph Employees, the Association of Cine-Technicians and British Actors' Equity.

Insurance

British producers have been safeguarded to some extent in their production activities by the Board of Trade War Risk Insurance Scheme which has now formally been launched and which is to come into operation at once. Under the Scheme the vast majority of British films produced here can be insured against interruption by enemy action. For the most costly pictures a substantial proportion of cover will be available.

Premiums will be at the rate of two shillings per cent per week, plus two shillings per cent per "named" person per week. Premiums will be based upon an estimated cost of production.

The Scheme was produced at the behest of certain British producers with the idea of increasing the volume of production by effectively offering cover against war risks. The Policy to be issued will indemnify them against production cost increases owing to injury to artists, damage to studio equipment or negatives. Premiums will be payable after deduction of certain items such as scenarios, set designs, financial charges and some of the production overheads.

Hay Comedy

First film in which Will Hay, Britain's "Schoolmaster Comedian" will return to the screen, after an absence of some months, will be a new comedy produced by Ealing Studios and bearing the title "Murder at St. Michael's." Will Hay will once again return to his mortar board.

The original story has been written by Angus MacPhail and John Dighton and casts the comedian as a "stinks" (chemistry) master who becomes involved in a double murder and has to solve it in order to relieve suspicion from himself and avoid the sack.

"Murder at St. Michael's" will have a wartime setting, in a school evacuated to a castle on the Isle of Skye.

Walter Forde will direct.

Work has now concluded at the Welwyn Studios on the Associated British comedy "The Farmer's Wife," which Norman Lee and Leslie Arliss have been making from the Eden Phillpott's comedy. Scenes were shot on a Widdicombe Fair set, in which the gaiety of the Devonshire festival was recreated.

Another sequence shot during the week was a practical demonstration of the operations of a bull in the village china shop.

Ealing Studios are taking a Summer vacation and will resume shortly with the Will Hay comedy, "Murder at St. Michaels."

Most other studios are likewise dark.

BRITISH GOVERNMENT GROUP FIRES ON METHODS OF FILM PROPAGANDA

Ministry of Information's Film Division Charged with Inefficiency, Interference and Lack of Collaboration with Industry

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

After twelve months of war against a system and regime which have developed the machinery of propaganda into a mechanical colossus, British legislative circles and the British film industry itself have taken stock of its propaganda by film and come to the conclusion virtually that there has been next to none, and most of that ineffective or disastrous.

Attacks Film Division

The publication of the Thirteenth Report from the Select Committee of National Expenditure, dealing with the Ministry of Information's Film Division, has provoked a barrage of criticism which has only so far lain dormant because nobody felt inclined to use the rapidly accumulating store of ammunition. The report castigates the Ministry's Film Division in no uncertain manner, is not above giving chapter and verse for its findings. It lays to the door of the Division allegations of inefficiency, interference, lack of collaboration with the film industry, and an insufficient realization of the importance of the foreign field.

With the Report of the Committee as inspiration outside analysts of the propaganda situation have taken stock of the situation, suggested that the twelve months past have been wasted, that the best brains in the documentary and propaganda field have been allowed to be drawn into the Services, that those who have remained have been, to quote Paul Rotha, "left to pounce on the dead scraps of films which the Ministry of Information's Films Division cares to drop around."

Film propaganda as promoted by the Ministry of Information would seem to have achieved 28 documentary films, 17 were abandoned. There are 21 in course of production.

Newsreels have been dubbed in European, Asiatic and Latin-American languages, 10 cinema vans supplied for abroad, and a few five-minute films for British consumption sponsored. This has cost the Ministry—and the country—£86,422.

Another body, Government sponsored, The British Council, upon which there is not a single professional publicist or producer, has not been inactive. It is their business to sponsor the distribution of British films abroad, films however which are not directly propaganda but which are termed cultural. A case has been quoted as example of the cultural viewpoint in a film which showed as Britain's reply to the Nazi challenge the folk-songs of Scottish shepherds and Welsh miners, in contrast to the Horst Wessel song and the chants of German youth. Upon such propaganda the British Council has to spend £71,800, exclusive of establishment costs.

Criticize Ministry Scheme

On the exclusively home field a Ministry scheme which has provoked criticism from the trade on the grounds of its ethics, and criticism from the Select Committee on the score of its financial extravagance, plans this coming Winter to penetrate the non-theatrical field with instructional films for road showing.

This scheme has four branches. A rural scheme under which the Ministry would hire projectors and cars for use in the country areas; an urban scheme under which it would operate its own projectors in towns; a loan scheme under which it would rent to others, public libraries and so forth, its own projectors, etc.; and the fourth scheme for the hiring of cinemas outside their normal operating times.

Total cost of this scheme is estimated at £172,000. Upon this the Committee's judgment is that "it is difficult to justify such expenditure in time of war . . . the cost of reaching an audience of 1,000,000 a week by this method is out of all proportion to the cost of films shown in cinemas . . . estimated to reach an audience fifteen or twenty times as large," and until it is proven that the results are worth while they recommend that no further money be spent.

Committee Probes Propaganda

Every aspect of propaganda, active and inactive, was probed by the Select Committee, who seem to have done a thorough job and whose report in its final form is not only sound in criticism but extremely well written. Inspired by the thesis that the functions of the Films Division are to supply the needs of other ministries and to cooperate with commercial film producers in such a way as to obtain the greatest possible facility for the British case in the cinemas of the world, the Select Committee proceeds seriatim to tear the Films Division, figuratively, limb from limb. It is their view that the work of the Division in the home field has been ineffective through the lack of clearly defined objectives on the part of the Ministry. There appears to them to be no policy more precise than that of reassuring the public and with the exception of the three "Anti Gossip" films none appears to have any specific purpose in view. An acid thrust at the operation of the Division comments that Policy Meetings "were largely taken up with questions of administrative detail and matters which did not concern the Films Division."

A complex of the Committee would seem to be a disbelief in the functions and powers of propaganda of the feature film. The feature film . . . is the most difficult to employ as an instrument of propaganda."

Regarding the now noted Canadian films venture of the Ministry the Committee reveals that the Ministry arranged to advance £25,000 towards the production cost of £65,000, conditional upon distribution guarantees here and overseas from a distributor prepared to advance the remaining production cost. The Committee regards this kind of venture with the gravest misgivings, do not consider that any more feature films should be undertaken even if this should prove to be as successful as it is hoped it will be.

That the Select Committee has en enlightened utilitarian view of propaganda is seen in their comment that the Division should have realized that material for films was not to be found in interpretations of the vague theme of reassurance but in messages to the people precisely related to particular needs. "The aim should be not merely the enhancement of patriotic spirit but its direction into channels of activity."

One of the reasons of the Division's inability to persuade commercial producers into appropriate propaganda channels is the damning one of the lack of persons at the head of the Division who were familiar with the film trade. They take the view that instead of "wasting time" trying to devise subjects which were usually rejected they should have asked the producers to suggest subjects themselves.

The Services, too, come in for scarifying comments from the Committee for their complete indifference to repeated requests for filming facilities and indeed for their commercialism in asking a share of profits of any film for which they have loaned personnel or material, or given photographic facilities.

The report has much to say upon the question of propaganda in the foreign field, propaganda by documentaries and by newsreels for the most part.

Distributed Seven Documentaries

The Ministry has distributed in foreign countries apparently 50 copies of seven of its own documentaries. They have been disseminated in 10 European countries, five in the Near East, four in the Far East and to Brazil and the Argentine. Also the rights in one film have been sold to an American company for distribution throughout the U. S., Central America and South America. This film would seem to be "Squadron 992," which was initially designed entirely for home consumption.

The Ministry also bought rights to two commercially produced films and distributed them through a commercial company in Europe and the Near East. The Committee is dissatisfied with the foreign distribution arrangements hitherto made by the Ministry which would seem to have depended upon the activities of the foreign press attaches. These last are criticized for failing to supply essential information and for an insufficient realization of the importance of the film as foreign propaganda. To this it is a natural conclusion that better distribution can be obtained through a commercial agent, a conclusion which would seem to be materializing at the present time in the development of the Overseas Distribution Branch of the Films Division. Hence the recommendation that distribution be taken out of the hands of the press attaches and entrusted to a commercial agent or commercial representatives appointed for this purpose.

The revalent values of the British News which has been disseminated throughout various parts of the world by the British Council and the newsreel sponsored by the Ministry itself are examined exhaustively. The latter reel is criticised as being the product of a single company whilst the former, which is composed of the best of all the British newsreels, is favored. This should be sent to all countries overseas. "The Sub-Committee consider it of the greatest importance that every effort should be made to extend the official newsreel service in foreign countries."

The present cost of the Colonial distribution of this British News is approximately £700 a week, of which £550 is attributable to freight charges.

"MAJOR BARBARA" FOR MUSIC HALL

Gabriel Pascal, producer and director of "Major Barbara", now in production at Denham, has received a cable from United Artists in New York advising him that a deal had been fixed for the first-run of the picture at Radio City Music Hall, in the middle of November. The terms and conditions are to be the same as Alexander Korda's "Thief of Baghdad" and Charlie Chaplin's new "Dictator" picture at that house.

Pascal hopes to have "Major Barbara" ready for showing in England about the third week in October.

BROADCASTERS ADD TO NEW MUSIC CATALOG

Signs Contract with Latin American Music Publishing Companies Involving Repertoire

Broadcast Music, Inc., on Monday informed its 384 subscribers that it signed a contract with a group of Latin American music publishing companies, for a term of years with options, giving it exclusive performing rights to a repertoire including "more than 80 per cent of all works played by leading orchestras specializing in Latin-American dance music."

Gets 4,000 Works

The Latin American transaction this week carries the rights, commencing January 1st, 1941, to all the Latin-American works in the catalogues of the Southern Music Publishing Company, Southern Music Internacional, Editorial PHAM, the Mexican Association of Authors and Composers, Inc., and the Editorial Argentina de Musica Internacional.

BMI broadcasters will receive over 4,000 musical works, 3,000 of which, it stated, are recorded, making them thus available to smaller stations who depend for much of their music upon recordings.

ASCAP owns the rights to this music until January 1st.

The music includes numbers in Latin-American dance idioms, and also more serious music. Among the currently popular dance tunes included are "Perfidias" and "Frenesi."

Available at Discount

The contract calls for payment to the Latin-American publishers on a "per use" basis, with BMI checking the number of performances.

BMI last week notified its subscribers that the performing rights to the catalogues of the Associated Music Publishers were available at a 25 per cent discount.

It also announced, on Monday, that the recent signing of ten new contracts with New England stations had raised its members to 384. These stations signed at a meeting, in Boston, of the First District of the NAB. They are WNLC, New London; WRDO, Augusta, Maine; WCOU, Lewiston, Maine; WSAR, Fall River; WOCB, Yarmouth, Massachusetts; WNBH, New Bedford; WESX, Salem, Massachusetts; WSPR, Springfield; WLNH, Laconia, New Hampshire; and WSYB, Rutland, Vermont.

Last week, Irving Caesar, president of the Song Writers' Protective Association, denied an assertion by Sidney M. Kaye, vice-president and general counsel of Broadcast Music, that the present SKPA contract did not enable any organization but ASCAP to license music for radio performance.

ASCAP Signs Station

ASCAP this week crowed about the signing to its new five-year contract, effective January 1st, of station KFWB, of Los Angeles.

As the situation stands now, with new stations joining either side each week, both ASCAP and BMI are running roughly even in subscribers, as the "deadline" draws nearer.

Meanwhile, ASCAP, always battling in state courts against unfavorable legislation, sensed a victory of sorts this week, with the withdrawal by the Attorney General of the state of Washington of objections to the report of a special master holding that the Federal Court in Seattle had jurisdiction in ASCAP's litigation to test the constitutionality of the state's anti-ASCAP law. This is felt to assure ASCAP a favorable ruling, because all basic issues except that of jurisdiction have been heard previously by a Federal Court. Confirmation of the special masters' report will be heard at Tacoma on or before September 28th, next scheduled hearing date.

Philadelphia Has Building Boom

The new season has brought additional theatre construction in the Philadelphia area with most of the activity in the suburban sections. An air-conditioned, 1,000-seat theatre featuring a new type of reclining chair, is included in the plans for a market building at a cost of more than $250,000 in Westgate Hills. A new house is also contemplated for the Wynnewood section. Albert M. Lieberman, local realtor, has already awarded contracts for the erection of a new house in Ridley Park. R. A. Willgoos, architect, reports he is working on plans for a new house, location undisclosed, while Anthony Orefice, architect, also is working on a theatre. At New Freedom, Pa., F. S. Sechrist, manager of the Trail Theatre, Shrewsbury, Pa., bought a plot of ground with work expected to start shortly on a new and modern house.

Three new houses in the territory opened this week. They are the Boro, by Sam and Nathan Stiefel, who operate the Roxy Theatre, Philadelphia; Sauconia Theatre, Hellertown, Pa., and a theatre on the site of the Red Men's Hall, Florence, N. J., by Morris Penson, of New Brunswick, N. J. John Geyser is house manager.

An added starter among the houses reopening after a dark summer was the Cinema Arts Theatre, Philadelphia, operated by Charles Stearman, and showing foreign pictures. A drive-in theatre is also promised for Philadelphia next spring, Phil Smith announcing plans to construct an open-air house on the Roosevelt Boulevard. It will mark the first drive-in within the city limits.

Miss Sullavan Back at Work

Although the Albert-Lewin-David Loew production "Flotsam," has been shooting for several weeks at the United Artists, Hollywood studios, it was not until last week that permission was obtained from Universal officials to use Margaret Sullavan as star. Universal, alleging that Miss Sullavan owed it a picture, obtained a restraining order in Los Angeles supreme court, prohibiting her from making any picture until she completed her Universal chore. Amicable settlement of the difficulty has now been reached and Miss Sullavan will complete "Flotsam," and will do one for Universal, at $3,750 weekly, following that.

Inspect Maine Theatres

Insurance Department inspectors of Maine are checking theatres in the State in regard to the new safety regulations.

Equity Favors Regular Scale For Sundays

Sunday shows in which members of Actors Equity Association would be paid the regular scale instead of double pay, were nearer this week, following the recommendation of the Equity Council who voted in favor of acceptance of the proposal of the League of New York Theatres. Another probability, was the raising of Equity's minimum salary for performers from $40 to $50, effective December 1st.

Members to Vote

Following the favorable vote by Equity's Council on the Sabbath show proposal, it was decided that the matter would be presented at a meeting of the members on Friday, September 27. If the meeting agrees, a referendum of the entire membership will be held.

Agreement on all important points was reached last week at a conference between Equity and the League of New York Theaters, producers' organization, for the extension of the union contract, which expired September 1. Principal matters discussed were the provision for Sunday shows at the reduced wage scale and raising the minimum scale.

The "double-scale" provision for Sunday shows has curtailed Sunday shows in New York, which were made legal by the Legislature in 1935. The regular rate would boom Sabbath business on Broadway, proponents of the plan claim.

Leading producers and actors and actresses, agreed, this week, that Sunday shows with the players receiving regular instead of double pay, would be a boon to the theatre.

Monday, traditionally the poorest day in show business, probably will replace Sunday as the day off for most New York theatrical companies.

Equity has also announced that the initiation fee would be boosted from $50 to $100, effective December 1st.

The actors have announced their support of the American Federation of Radio Artists in the event that the threatened strike against the three major broadcasting chain materializes. Hope that a strike may be averted, however, followed announcement by the broadcasters that they had offered "substantial increases."

William A. Hyman, attorney for a majority of ticket brokers, informed the League of New York Theatres that a majority of his clients agreed to the proposal to limit charges to 75 cents for orchestra and 50 cents for balcony seats. A conference was to have been held this week between the League and Equity officials to consider this problem.

Assail Skating

The Associated Theatre Owners of Indiana protested to Governor M. Clifford Townsend last week against leasing of the state fair grounds to a roller skating derby show, which, they said, "placed the state in business in competition with privately owned, tax assessed theatres."

Springer Files in New York

Springer Pictures, Inc., Detroit, Mich., has filed statement and designation of authority to do business in New York State. Ezra H. Frye is secretary with New York offices at 120 Broadway. Capitalization consists of 100 shares of preferred stock valued at $100 and 2,000 common shares at a dollar.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

HE STAYED FOR BREAKFAST: Melvyn Douglas, Loretta Young—A very good comedy drama with loads of laughs. This picture was double featured on Sunday and Monday with "Gold Rush Maisie" and both pictures were enjoyed by everyone. Business was considerable above average on this program. Running time, 87 minutes. Played September 8-9.—J. M. Thomsen, Center Theatre, Marlette, Mich. Rural and small town patronage.

LONE WOLF STRIKES, THE: Warren William, Joan Perry—Nice picture with action and lots of humor. Audience liked it. Better than average box office. Running time, 70 minutes. Played August 2-3.—Jack Fields, Embassy Theatre, Baltimore, Md. General patronage.

TOO MANY HUSBANDS: Jean Arthur, Fred MacMurray, Melvyn Douglas—Good picture to fair business. Running time, 84 minutes. Played August 4-5.—Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill workers patronage.

First National

THEY DRIVE BY NIGHT: George Raft, Ann Sheridan, Ida Lupino, Humphrey Bogart, Gale Page, Alan Hale, Roscoe Karns—A first-class 95-minute show and not a single dull moment from start to finish, but it is Ida Lupino, the beautiful young English actress, who steals the whole show. Her superb acting is seldom equalled and never excelled. Of course, George Raft, Ann Sheridan, Humphrey Bogart, Gale Page, Alan Hale and Roscoe Karns as usual kept up their excellent performances in their more than average good acting, but the chief of staff remarked as we were leaving the theatre that Miss Lupino stole the whole show. We had to agree with him. Running time, 95 minutes. Played September 5-11.—William Noble, Criterion Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

CAPTAIN IS A LADY: Beulah Bondi, Billie Burke, Marjorie Main, Charles Coburn, Helen Broderick, Helen Westley—Meant nothing at the box office and was received indifferently by our patrons. Good performance, but for some reason picture fails to click. Running time, 65 minutes. Played August 30-31.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

DR. KILDARE'S STRANGE CASE: Lionel Barrymore, Lew Ayres, Laraine Day—Good picture. Held audience interested throughout. Barrymore tops. Very good box office. Running time, 76 minutes. Played July 20-21.—Jack Fields, Embassy Theatre, Baltimore, Md. General patronage.

GOLD RUSH MAISIE: Ann Sothern, Lew Bowman, Virginia Weidler—Played with "He Stayed for Breakfast" on Sunday and Monday and both pictures were enjoyed by everyone. Business was considerable above average on this program. Played September 8-9.—J. M. Thomsen, Center Theatre, Marlette, Mich. Rural and small town patronage.

MORTAL STORM, THE: Margaret Sullavan, James Stewart, Robert Young, Frank Morgan, Irene Rich, Bonita Granville—Tops in every way. Pulled a great mid-week business and satisfied every one, causing plenty of comment and much serious thinking among patrons. Should click in any situation. Running time, 100 minutes. Played August 21.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

THUNDER AFLOAT: Wallace Beery, Chester Morris, Virginia Grey—Just the stuff to entertain the small town exhibitor, especially now as mostly all talk is about war and submarines and blowing things up generally. Plenty of action and the smell of salt water which makes a change for us on the prairies. Play it. Running time, 90 minutes. Played September 5.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

TWENTY MULE TEAM: Wallace Beery, Leo Carrillo, Marjorie Rambeau—Audience ate it up. Fought to buy tickets. Beery and Rambeau swell team; should be kept together. Running time, 82 minutes. Played June 4-5.—Jack Fields, Embassy Theatre, Baltimore, Md. General patronage.

IN this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box-office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—

What the Picture Did for Me
MOTION PICTURE HERALD
Rockefeller Center, New York

TWENTY MULE TEAM: Wallace Beery, Leo Carrillo, Marjorie Rambeau—Best business in months and a swell picture, too. Running time, 83 minutes. Played August 7-8.—Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill workers patronage.

Monogram

ARIZONA FRONTIER: Tex Ritter—We had Ritter on a personal appearance about three months ago and since then his pictures go over big. Is pushing Autry for the No. 1 position in our town. This last picture of his seems to have a little more money put into its production. Pleases the action fans 100 per cent. Played August 31.—Herff Smith, Mustang Theatre, Madisonville, Texas. Small town patronage.

Paramount

DR. CYCLOPS: Albert Dekker, Janice Logan—Nearly set an all time mid-week low and we thought this would do business. People don't go for these old type of attractions.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

DR. CYCLOPS: Albert Dekker, Janice Logan—Why this picture? It is definitely not entertainment, rather scientific. Poor business on this one. People thought it was another "King Kong" and were afraid to come out.—J. N. Wells, Wells Theatre, Kingsland, Ga. General patronage.

GREAT McGINTY, THE: Brian Donlevy, Akim Tamiroff, Muriel Angelus—Double featured with "Flowing Gold." Business was a little better than average on this program. Played September 1-2.—J. M. Thomsen, Center Theatre, Marlette, Mich. Rural and small town patronage.

ROAD TO SINGAPORE: Bing Crosby, Dorothy Lamour, Bob Hope—Dandy good picture to good business. Running time, 85 minutes. Played August 1.—Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill workers patronage.

RKO Radio

MY FAVORITE WIFE: Irene Dunne, Cary Grant, Randolph Scott, Gail Patrick—Here is a good comedy that all types will go for. Not slap-stick, but a good high-class comedy that is sure to please.—Herff Smith, Mustang Theatre, Madisonville, Texas. Small town patronage.

POP ALWAYS PAYS: Leon Errol, Dennis O'Keefe, Adele Pearce—We showed this on a double feature and were wise in doing so. It's a good picture, but too light to stand up by itself. Played September 3-4.—Herff Smith, Mustang Theatre, Madisonville, Texas. Small town patronage.

Republic

DARK COMMAND: John Wayne, Claire Trevor, Walter Pidgeon—Very good. But not box office here. Running time, 94 minutes. Played August 9-10.—Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill workers patronage.

GAUCHO SERENADE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, June Storey—Something different for Autry, but even so, due in part to the holiday, no doubt, this failed to pull above average business. Well liked, however. Running time, 66 minutes. Played August 30-31.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

GIRLS FROM GOD'S COUNTRY: Chester Morris, Charles Bickford, Jane Wyatt—Swell picture. Plenty of action. Running time, 70 minutes. Played September 13-14.—Jack Fields, Embassy Theatre, Baltimore, Md. General patronage.

IN OLD MISSOURI: Weaver Brothers and Elviry—Good picture of the hill-billy type, so our patrons should and did like it. Running time, 67 minutes. Played August 7-8.—Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill workers patronage.

SOUTH OF THE BORDER: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—Usual Autry business. Running time, 70 minutes. Played August 2-3.—Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill workers patronage.

TULSA KID: Don "Red" Barry, Luana Walters—Good picture and good business. Running time, 57 minutes. Played September 6-7.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

VILLAGE BARN DANCE: Richard Cromwell, Doris Day, Lulu Belle and Scotty—Best mid-week business for 15 months. Give us more like this for the country patrons. Out drew some of the year's supposedly super-specials that had a Sunday opening and a three-day run.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

FOUR SONS: Don Ameche, Mary Beth Hughes, Eugenie Leontovich—This one pulled far above average and had it not played so close to "The Mortal Storm" would no doubt have grossed as well. It suffers somewhat in comparison to "The Mortal Storm," since it is of the same type of story and presentation. Even so, it can stand very well on its own merits. Running time, 88 minutes. Played August 28.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

JOHNNY APOLLO: Tyrone Power, Dorothy Lamour, Edward Arnold, Lloyd Nolan—This is fair gangster picture, but people did not like Dorothy in this type picture. Not suited for this type.—J. N. Wells, Wells Theatre, Kingsland, Ga. General patronage.

LILLIAN RUSSELL: Alice Faye, Don Ameche, Henry Fonda, Warren William, Edward Arnold, Leo Carrillo, Weber and Fields—Our folks liked this and business was good. Running time, 127 minutes.—Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill workers patronage.

LILLIAN RUSSELL: Alice Faye, Don Ameche, Henry Fonda, Edward Arnold, Warren William, Leo Carrillo, Weber and Fields—Have read a number of exhibitors' reviews where this did not do well at the box office. We had the opposite experience as the show did about 35 per cent above normal Sunday-Monday-Tuesday and pleased nearly 100 per cent. Can't see where an exhibitor can kick on one like this.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

MARYLAND: Walter Brennan, Fay Bainter, Brenda Joyce, John Payne, Charlie Ruggles, Hattie McDaniel—Hit a new low for this change. Patrons' interest struck a snag, due in part to the prevue, which certainly did nothing to sell the picture. Pleased generally those who did turn out. Picture deserved better business, but just try to get them in when they have once decided against seeing a show. Running time, 92 minutes. Played August 25-27.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Claskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

SHOOTING HIGH: Jane Withers, Gene Autry—Slightly better produced than the Republic Autrys, but missed the ace comic, Burnette, so the picture doesn't measure up any higher than the average Autry-Burnette Republic production. Business good the first night; away off the second.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

SHOOTING HIGH: Jane Withers, Gene Autry—Don't see why the bad comments on this picture. I had the best week's business with it since "Swanee River." Jane good anywhere with my patrons. The acting of Gene was rather amateurish; thought too much so to be in one of the Big 8's product.—J. N. Wells, Wells Theatre, Kingsland, Ga. General patronage.

United Artists

MY SON, MY SON: Brian Aherne, Madeleine Carroll, Louis Hayward, Laraine Day—Very good. English type picture to 50 per cent above average week-end business. U. A. had a few good ones this year, but to offset they certainly had a number of "clucks."—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

REBECCA: Laurence Olivier, Joan Fontaine, Judith Anderson, George Sanders—Year's biggest draw due to not being played in larger town seven miles away. The women went for it in a big way and praised it highly. The fourth night drew better than the second or third nights. Some of the men folks panned it as was to be expected.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

Universal

WHEN THE DALTONS RODE: Brian Donlevy, Kay Francis, Andy Devine, Randolph Scott, Broderick Crawford—Wow, what a show! You can promise your patrons everything in the way of entertainment and this one will deliver the goods. We have always steered clear of this type of show for a Sunday run, but took a chance and the results were the best gross for ages. Clicked again on continuous run on Labor Day and then hit away above average again the following night. What seemed so strange was the fact that patrons who usually stay away when westerns are shown turned out plentifully, and left with comments indicating their complete approval. Just a word about Andy Devine. He steals the picture, and since he's a big favorite locally, it was Andy who was talked about and laughed at. Universal is to be congratulated for a swell piece of good, old fashioned, rip-roaring picture entertainment. Running time, 81 minutes. Played September 1-3.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

Warner Brothers

BROTHER ORCHID: Edward G. Robinson, Ann Sothern, Humphrey Bogart, Ralph Bellamy—Something different from the ordinary run of Robinson pictures. My audience enjoyed this feature very much and I had some very good comment on same. Can recommend this for small town audience. Running time, 91 minutes. Played August 29.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

FLOWING GOLD: John Garfield, Pat O'Brien, Francis Farmer—Double featured with "The Great McGinty." "Flowing Gold" has plenty of that good O'Brien action. John Garfield also gave a splendid performance in this picture. Ditto Frances Farmer. Business was a little better than average on this program. Running time, 82 minutes. Played September 1-2.—J. M. Thomsen, Center Theatre, Marlette, Mich. Rural and small town patronage.

IN COURTS

Order Reply in Trampe Action

Roland J. Steinle, circuit judge in Milwaukee, has ordered the American Luther Association to file a reply to the action by Charles W. Trampe, head of the Monogram-Midwest Film Exchange, in which he seeks an injunction to restrain the organization from playing Bingo, by September 26th. Upon receipt of the defendant's answer, a trial date will be set.

Mr. Trampe, along with the Variety Club here, is named defendant in another circuit court action filed by Arthur T. Nodorft, a production manager, who seeks an injunction to restrain gambling at the club. The action charges that Mr. Trampe has control of the slot machines, Bingo and card games operated in the club.

The suit is claimed to be an attempt at retaliation for Mr. Trampe's actions against Bingo by B. J. Miller, defendant's attorney.

Charges Spite Action

Andre R. Heymann, president of the French Cinema Center, Inc., and French Films Import Company, Inc., this week charged that the action for a receiver brought by Harry Silverstein against him and Gerry Heymann was "a spite action calculated to discredit the company and its officers." MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

AS SIMPLE AS THAT

In wired greetings to E. R. Ruben, head of Welworth Enterprises, on occasion of the circuit's recent convention at Minneapolis, Terry Ramsaye had this to say:

"May we urge upon your meeting that the destiny and fortunes of our industry are in the hands of the showmen who directly serve the public both in terms of their competence as merchandisers and as effective spokesmen for the consumers. . . . "

From Clifford Gill, circuit ad head, reporting a message delivered by Mr. Ruben to the assembled theatremen:

"As long as he heads a company such as this, Mr. Ruben said, the theatre manager will be boss of his particular situation. No decision or changes of policy will be made in which the manager does not concur. He stated further that such has always been his avowed policy as a theatre operator; that this unrestricted delegation of authority to the man in the field has been proved sound by results attained in his own organization."

Despite the dry-eyed anguish of exhibitors who choose to see it differently, the path of successful theatre management is hardly strewn with unsurmountable obstacles. For those who regard the situation clearly, the solution is obvious. That solution does not hold with home office whippings, artificially stimulated drives, peremptory budget-cuttings, handcuffing of managerial initiative, regimentation of operation and other handicaps in the way of profit-making.

No procedure has yet been devised, nor is likely to be devised, to arrive at a common boxoffice denominator. Yet many who should know better are committed to a "drill-sergeant" technique in the merchandising of their entertainments, a system marked with obvious faults and glaring weaknesses.

The level-visioned bossman has long solved his problem by a careful selection of managers with enough savvy and ambition to do a talented and profitable job. In addition, he possesses sufficient horse sense to "keep off" in allowing his boys to do that job the best way they see fit.

As the editor of MOTION PICTURE HERALD points out and the Minnesota circuit director affirms—the destiny and fortunes of our industry are indeed in the hands of the showmen who directly serve the public.

"IF YOU CAN'T BEAT 'EM, JINE 'EM"

From previous experience, Manager W. Mowbray had learned that the County Fair in Blue Ridge, Ga., was pretty tough opposition. So this year the Round Tabler switched his attack, breaking out with a half-page bannered with "Nine Big Days In Blue Ridge", the space divided with two boxes listing the dates at his Royal Theatre alongside the events at the Fair. Illustrated with art of a strolling couple, over a caption reading "We're Going Both Places", and fortified with a booth of his own, Mowbray found that coupling the two amusement centers in his advertising built business for both and earned him a heap of local praise.

Recently, these pages detailed the tiein made for the new season by "Kal" Kalberer, in Washington, Ind. Since the local paper usually put on a "Back to School" campaign at the same time, theatre publicity suffered. So "Kal" threw in with the other, combining his picture drive with the daily's promotion, and benefited accordingly.

Showmanship is often measured in the skill with which your theatreman judges the force of opposing factors and the timing in knowing when to hop aboard the other fellow's bandwagon.

FOOTBALL SELLS TICKETS

Since the home team's progress ranks high in community interest, the football season means much to observing theatremen who keep the spotlight on how the local players are faring. Thus, knowing showmen are soundly prepared in this direction with a score or more of tieins aimed to advance the grosses, to strengthen prestige.

On a following page are outlined "old reliables", long tested in public reaction and polished up to serve for the coming weeks. With new slants to be incorporated, there is every expectation that the theatre, as it should be, will again serve as a community center for football enthusiasm readily transferable into terms of gratifyingly long lines at the ticket windows.

Round Table in Pictures

Promoted from local Portland Cement Company by Francis Deering was the miniature oil well set up in the lobby of Loew's Theatre, in Houston, for his advance on "Boom Town". Actual working model was controlled by tiny motors and pumps which were operated by compressed air.

"McGinty" headquarters were established in empty store adjoining the State Theatre, in Harrisburg, Pa., as part of J. F. Rogers' exploitation for that date. Spieler put on an act over p.a. system while girl distributed ballots. Stunt proved attractor and broke local papers.

Conceived by Ed Goth, ad man for Fabian Staten Island Theatres, for "Maryland" at the St. George, was street stunt of lad carrying portable radio tuned to ball game. As each team scored a hit, standing was noted in chalk on blackboard slung around boy's shoulder.

Incoming patrons at Schine's State, in Cortland, N. Y., were recently invited by Bob Holland to take a shot at "Frank James" with a gun that shot little suction cup darts at a bull's-eye lobby easel provided as advance on that date. Guest tickets went to those scoring.

Carrying out the nautical and action atmosphere of the picture, George Irwin at the Lyceum, in Duluth, for "Sea Hawk" rigged up a schooner with lighthouse, etc., for lobby display.

"Correspondent" Tied to Newscast

Credited by Lou Brown, Loew's Poli division ad head, to Nate Rubin, assistant at the New Haven Poli, for "Foreign Correspondent," was a tiein with WELI wherein the station moved its entire newsroom over to the theatre lobby from where six newscasts were made daily via the regular U.P. teletype wire service. The broadcasts were opened and closed with announcements about the picture with emphasis on the romance and adventure of the story and that it was not a war feature.

The gathering of the news for the radio was graphically shown in the lobby, with the station's news editor on hand to carry through. The news tickers were shown tapping out the latest stories with the radio men piecing it together for the broadcasts. In addition the headline flashes were planted on a 40 by 60 headed by a card reading "from your Foreign Correspondent."

The hookup was in effect four days in advance and four days of the run which gave the theatre some 66 special broadcasts plugging the date. Newspaper publicity on the stunt was comprehensive and included also was a front-page photo and story in the station's weekly "Radio Dial" with a circulation of over 5,000, distributed in conjunction with the theatre campaign.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Boxing Champions Perform On "Golden Gloves" Date

Reported by United Detroit ad head, Ralph Stitt, was the Midwest premiere of "Golden Gloves" at the Palms State, with Manager Don Kuhn tying in with the Michigan A.A.U. to stage a series of amateur ring bouts as an added attraction, the contestants being local Golden Glove champions of last year.

Boxing accessories were promoted three weeks in advance of the prevue and were put on display in the theatre lobby. One thousand window cards, resembling actual fight cards were displayed by stores and automobile industries throughout the city. Tieing in direct with the Free Press, Golden Glove sponsors in Detroit, daily publicity breaks were seen in the sports and amusement sections of the paper. All sports clubs carried announcement cards, as well, as factories that sponsored Golden Glovers.

Trailers three weeks in advance carried punch selling copy and the sound trailers that were used one week ahead were preceded by a short sparring match by two of the theatre ushers. To give the premiere an added buildup, boxoffice closed at four p.m. and tickets went on sale at five.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Ties "Partners" to Students

Chet Miller of the Fox Theatre, in Sterling, Colorado, arranged a tiein for "Lucky Partners" that won attention of local students. A large quantity of cards were distributed, certain number of them bearing duplicate numbers and stating that if the student found his or her "lucky partner," both would be admitted to the showing as guests of the theatre.

Cedar Rapids Tri-States Fun Week Enlists Community Cooperation

Conceived and executed to stimulate summer grosses at Tri-States' Paramount and State and local store sales in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, a "Cheer Up and Fun Festival Week", organized by Hal Sheridan, was put over rousingly with the strong assistance of the Chamber of Commerce, Retail Merchants Bureau, city officials and police heads. For the purpose, a committee of prominent business men, civic heads and other locals was organized, the project given a fast start by announcements in store ads and windows, pep meetings of store personnel, and other build-up devices.

Featuring the campaign was a street parade co-sponsored by the theatres and merchants, the procession led by a drum-and-bugle corps of 105 pieces and police motorcycle escort. Immediately following were new open cars supplied by local dealers, the cars carrying pulchritudinous models representing the various merchants. Prominent in the parade was a delegation of 500 costumed residents from nearby Tipton, celebrating the town's centennial and who were feted by the city afterwards on the lawn in front of the City Hall. Banners advertising the attractions at both theatres were displayed along the line of march.

Radio was important in calling attention through the trading area to the special events, as was the local press which publicized the proceedings comprehensively in advance and during the "Week". Results of the campaign were noted in the numbers brought to town to take in the show, some 20,000 being on hand for the parade.

Oil Worker Street Stunt Attracts on "Flowing Gold"

For "Flowing Gold" at the Strand, in Holyoke, Mass., Milton L. Wainstein worked out a small card which was tacked to poles and store fronts in the downtown area by a man dressed to represent an oil worker. Crowds gathered in many spots to watch what was going on and read the copy, according to the Round Tabler.

On colored stock about postcard size was imprinted: "Oil Claim. I stake my claim here that Flowing Gold with John Garfield, Frances Farmer, Pat O'Brien, now playing at the Strand Theatre is the best show in town!" In addition, largest fuel company in city was lined up, bannering its trucks with copy on the picture.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Chamales' Warning Envelopes

Week ahead of opening of "Mortal Storm" at the Roxy Theatre in Delphi, Indiana, Round Tabler Chris Chamales used stickers on all outgoing envelopes printed in bold type reading: "WAR-ning. All America prepare to see," etc., etc.

PASSPORT INVITES TRADE TO "TOUR"

For the trade showing of "Crooks Tour", in London, an ingenious invitation passport, in keeping with the story's background, was devised by A. S. Whittaker, Anglo-American Films ad head. Simulating the regular passport with individual names of exhibitors inscribed on the front cover, the inner spread carried picture credits and photos of the leads, the effect heightened by consular stampings of various places in the picture.

1892 Newspaper Story Tied to "Daltons"

For the date on "When the Daltons Rode" at Loew's Metropolitan, in Brooklyn, and other of the circuit's subsequent runs in that sector, Gene Looram, district publicist, figuring that the local papers must have carried the story on the bandits during the time of their activities, obtained the assistance of the public library to find the material. The search was rewarded with a front page story in the Brooklyn Daily Eagle from the issue of October 6, 1892, the Loewman having a photostat made up by the library's special department for that service. This was then blown up to a 40 by 60 for general lobby use.

In addition, Looram was able to persuade the city editor of the Eagle to use the story which also was blown up and super-imposed on the 40 by 60 for showing on the various dates.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Fort Worth Proclaims "Westerner Week"

Proclaimed by Mayor I. N. McCrary, of Fort Worth, was "The Westerner Week" in honor of the world premiere, the executive calling upon all citizens to celebrate the occasion by wearing costumes in keeping with the picture. Thus, the opening was made more colorful by the locals and visitors wearing 10-gallon hats, chaps, fancy shirts, high-heeled boots, spurs and other cowboy paraphernalia.

As part of the celebration, the schools were closed and during the day of the premiere municipal departments, business houses, department stores and other establishments allowed employees time off to participate in the festivities. Among the highlights of the occasion was a street parade in which participated Hollywood stars and other celebrities headed by Samuel Goldwyn and Gary Cooper.

SHOWMEN'S LOBBY LAFFS

This cartoon from the brush of Milt Rosenfeld, Round Table cartoonist.

PROJECTIONIST: "'Edison, the Man' or no 'Edison, the Man', the fuse blew . . . and we're fresh out of 'em."

"Through These Portals Pass," Says Redmond on "Ghost"

To attract a little different attention from the regular style of advertising on "Ghost Breakers," Jimmie Redmond at the Bonham, in Fairbury, Neb., built a special arch door from the lobby to his foyer two weeks ahead, all sides of which were covered with scene stills. Above the door and easily spotted from every angle was a large sign reading: "Through these portals will pass the most frightened people in Fairbury." This was followed by playdates and directly below were swinging title cutout letters with a couple of smiling ghosts. A few feet away from the arch was another display consisting of stills and copy offering a free ticket to anyone who could truthfully say they did not laugh at the picture.

For this trailer, Redmond turned off all the house lights just before it went on and filled the house with wind whistles, howls, etc., noises going directly into the trailer.

May Sells "Love Came Back" With Boy Scout Benefit

Selling a benefit show to the local Boy Scout Troop, Ed May at Schine's Paris, in Paris, Ky., received much goodwill and plenty of advance publicity for his date on "My Love Came Back" and "Our Town." For his lobby display, Scouts loaned organization paraphernalia and equipment with appropriate tiein copy, in addition Troop advertised the show widely.

For "Grand Ole Opry," May constructed a temporary stage near theatre entrance on which a free show was held every 30 minutes consisting of a five piece hill billy band and circus barker giving a short interesting program and plugging the show inside. Band also appeared on theatre stage during shows.

Street Activities Arranged by Tefft

Parade that is reported to have attracted plenty of attention was that arranged by Manager Wesley L. Tefft for advance on "Boom Town" at Smalley's Theatre, in Stamford, New York. Hiring the locally popular school band, mostly comprised of girls, the aggregation with appropriate banners paraded through the streets to theatre headed by the Drum Major, who went to town.

With the recent Old Home Day celebrated by the American Legion with a giant parade of floats, etc., Tefft's car came through with first prize for being the best decorated. Stories were run in local dailies with the theatre coming in for generous plugs as a result.

Stars Promoted by Fabian For Personal Appearances

The Fabian Proctor and State Theatres in Schenectady, as reported by R. C. Murphy at Proctor's, have taken full advantage of the season's influx of screen stars to Saratoga and their appearance at local summer stock theatres. Personal appearances of several screen stars were secured. Charles Coburn and Beulah Bondi appeared in person at the State Theatre with the showing of "The Captain Is a Lady." Proctor's was successful in securing a personal appearance of Francis Lederer for the opening of "The Man I Married." Yvette, NBC singing star, also made a personal appearance at Proctor's for the showing of Paramount's musical short, "Have You Met Yvette?"

Each one of these personal appearances received above average cooperation from the newspapers and radio station, WGY, theatre and attractions coming in for extra plugs.

Pugsley Promotes Milkman's Matinee

With a house policy calling for a two o'clock Saturday matinee opening, Manager Les Pugsley at the Orpheum, in Moose Jaw, Saskatchewan, scouted around and managed to promote the Milk Producers Association to sponsor a half hour children's matinee to be broadcast over CHAB from the theatre stage and to be titled "Milkman's Matinee." Company paid all costs, including master of ceremonies, radio time, weekly ad in paper breaking on Friday and several plugs during the week on the air. Entire cost to Pugsley each week is three fifty in new nickels given to kids in connection with the holding of lucky tickets. Show itself consists of community singing, short impromptu plays, dart contests and the usual pie eating, apple ducking, etc.

For his date on "Gulliver's Travels" at the Empire, in Windsor, Ontario, Round Tabler Ed Lamoureux promoted a figure from local department store and dressed it in "Gulliver" attire for window display. About the main figure were grouped smaller ones measuring about 10 inches in height, and from the hands of each, ropes ran up to "Gulliver's" outstretched arms. Display illuminated at night is reported to have attracted considerable attention.

Langdon's "Bridge" Campaign Highlighted by Contests

Arranged for "Waterloo Bridge" at the Paramount Theatre, in Kankakee, Ill., by Manager William F. Langdon, was the contest to find a local double for Vivien Leigh, which is reported to have netted the theatreman plenty of space in cooperating daily. Contest cracked page one with a photograph showing Robert Taylor studying the picture of the winner.

In addition, Langdon conducted a mustache raising contest using Robert Taylor's mustache in the film as the basis for the stunt. Cards were printed with the suggestion "Now that you've had a shave, you're qualified for the 'Waterloo Bridge' mustache contest, and distributed among barber shops.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Paper and Store Tie In With Grimes on Kid Club

With a weekly attendance of approximately 2,000 at his kiddie club, Ken Grimes, at the Warner, in Erie, Pa., recently celebrated the club's first anniversary with a special showing of "Pinocchio" through tieup with the Erie Daily Times and local kiddie shop. Paper, which covers the activities each week, sent over a photographer to take picture of the special show, and cooperating store offered cash prizes in connection with amateur talent. Group shots of the assembled kids were taken, certain of which were circled and run in the paper, those properly identifying themselves received guest tickets.

While for "All This and Heaven Too," Grimes planted a newspaper contest, whereby entrants were invited to clip scene stills run in paper and properly fill in certain initials which explained the photos, guest tickets went to winners. Same paper also came through with a classified ad contest whereby tickets were awarded to those placing ads.

Animated Rooney Cutout Answers Patrons' Queries

Folks in Waterbury, Conn., recently had an opportunity of talking with Mickey Rooney in the lobby of Loew's Poli. Of course it was just a cutout of the star planted there by Ed Fitzpatrick as advance on "Andy Hardy Meets Debutante" but the fans went for it in a big way. Back of the six-foot figure of Mickey was a box sufficiently large enough for theatre attendant to conceal himself, the mouth was cut out and animated from a switch built inside.

Hooked up on the far side of the lobby was a philco control set, with the man being placed behind a display frame and controlled by attendant. The listening box was placed inside the top of the cutout. Stunt was to have patrons line up and ask Mickey questions about the new Hardy Family picture.

Since a "Bundles for Britain" parade was being held locally day picture opened, Ed's assistant, George Loukides promoted a truck which appropriately bannered covered streets in line of procession. Atop truck was cutout of Rooney in tails and topper. At night float was parked in front of theatre under flood of brightly colored lights.

Wheeler Reports "LaPorte Day"

To give the old Dollar Day a new twist, Ray Wheeler, manager of the Roxy Theatre, in LaPorte, Indiana, suggested a city-wide sales event to be sponsored jointly by the local Chamber of Commerce and Business Bureau under the title of "LaPorte Day." With the theatre setup highly competitive and in order to get into the papers and gain cooperation of the Chamber, the opposition went along on most of the publicity.

With the campaign underway and to bring his theatre before the heavy shopping crowds, Wheeler decided to use the roving photographer idea, new to that situation, and had man snapping folks whose pictures were displayed on lobby easel. In addition, photographer distributed heralds calling attention to the fact that pictures had been taken, and that guest tickets would be given to those identifying themselves at the theatre. Herald also plugged current show.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Toups "Moon" Contest

A radio quiz contest based on Jeanette MacDonald-Nelson Eddy hits of the past featured the "New Moon" campaign put over by Rodney Toups, Loew's, New Orleans, with guest tickets to the first ten correct lists of answers. Toups also tied up with music dealers and obtained a large number of window displays featuring numbers from the picture.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Murphy Gets "Myrna's" Goat

Arranged by Dave Murphy, manager and Charlie Baron, MGM exploiteer for "I Love You Again" at the State, in Altoona, Pa., was a street bally consisting of man in top hat and tails leading a goat around the streets with back banner reading: "I've got Myrna's goat, butt, you'll laugh at both of us in," etc., etc., followed by playdates, etc.

FOOTBALL EXPLOITATION LISTED FOR FALL TIEINS

Highlights of Hookups Tested by Round Tablers Presented for Use In Current Season

Since football is destined to be even more popular this year than ever before, pigskin tieins of many kinds are again to the fore with Round Tablers set to take advantage of these hookups in conjunction with gridiron pictures and other occasions. Thus, promotions proven of benefit in the past are here outlined for the information of those seeking ways and means to bring the games nearer the boxoffice.

Deemed a "must" in many sectors is the imprinted schedule of local college and high school contests furnished by the theatre and upon which institutional or individual picture advertising is carried. This allows for wide theatre advertising, especially in schools where distribution of picture publicity is restricted. Different forms are utilized, from pocket-size up.

Megaphones Supplied Cheer Leaders

Lettered giant megaphones for cheerleaders is another favorite where regulations against advertising on the field are in effect. Since the megaphones are constantly in use in advance and during games, the giant theatre letters are in view of thousands of eyes. Small megaphones for distribution to spectators is another variation with merchants sharing the cost of cooperative printing and ushers passing out the novelties to the crowds.

"Pep" sessions and football nights at the theatre are also given close attention. Usually, the occasion comes on the night before important games, in other instances, definite nights during the season are set aside. It is endeavored to have the Mayor and other leading citizens on hand to address the assembly in addition to the coaches, team captains, etc. When possible, the football squads are also present together with members of the opposing team.

Parades Found Popular

Parades to the theatre are considered an important adjunct to the rallies, the processions forming at the school or athletic field and covering the business district with theatre banners, red flares, etc., employed for buildup. Local bands or school organizations are promoted wherever possible. On the eve of the big games, imprinted lapel tags carrying copy for both game and theatre have been distributed widely in advance, to students and townsfolk.

Special nights during the season for different local schools is another reliable. Here the theatre is decorated with the individual colors and banners of the guest school, newsreelshots of late games and crowds included in the program. The special night has been varied with competitive cheering for prizes, of students from two or more schools. Newsreel shots of weekly games of the home team, or teams, are also found popular when merchants can be sold on underwriting costs.

Score Guessing To Continue

Contests, as to be expected, will be found in the forefront of football hookups. As concerns individuals, the competitions have been aimed at voting for the most popular local player for prizes including complete sports outfit, theatre season ticket, etc., the merchandise awards promoted from local merchants.

Made popular by the various newspaper offers, the prediction of score guessing contest is set to be used in all sectors. Here, the theatre puts out heralds with lists of the games concerned and space alongside for the guesses. Space at bottom is left for name and address of "guesser" with room provided for theatre copy. Since entrants have been hitting the mark so exactly in recent seasons, the latest tendency is to offer passes for those turning in a perfect score or one away, instead of a certain number of ducats for those coming nearest.

Contests Still a Factor

Not circulated widely last year but meaty enough for repetition is a window contest tied to one of the dailies wherein photos of each of the local teams are posted in prominent windows. Contestants are required to identify each player and name the store where the picture is on display. The tie angle is avoided by requesting a 25 or 50-word statement on why one particular player is considered to be the team's outstander.

To be continued for the season, scores of the top national and local games will again be posted in the lobby as the results come in over the wire and radio. This is carried into the theatre proper by advertising that quarterly scores will be given from the stage and radio play-by-play accounts made available in the mezzanine. Theatremen find that often this service will bring added business from those who otherwise might remain by their radios at home.

Where advertising at games is allowed, colorful and amusing ballyhoo is reported helpful in publicising theatre attractions. Heralds passed out in the stands by costumed bally men is quite general and theatre announcements over the stadium p. a. system by friendly cheer leaders is also to be noted. Lettered balloons let loose between halves, trick comedy horse gags and placarded sound trucks circling the field are other attention-halters. Again recorded as a publicity potentiality is the use of planes towing banners above stadiums. Though not used extensively last year, the stunt generally found favorable reaction.

FOOTBALL PICTURES ANNOUNCED FOR RELEASE

Football feature releases for the new season include Warners' "Knute Rockne, All-American", Fox's "Yesterday's Heroes", Paramount's "Quarterback" and RKO's reissue, "Mr. Doodle Kicks Off".

Shorts include Warners' "Football Highlights", Terrytoon's "Touchdown Demons" and MGM's "Football Thrills of 1939".

EXPLOITATION BRIEFS FROM A-FIELD

An airplane towed a large "Boom Town" trailer as part of the advance campaign for that film put over for its Casino, Wildwood, N. J., showing by W. C. Hunt, Jr. Also, well in advance and during the engagement a slide was projected on the blank wall of the theatre facing the resort's boardwalk.

With the use of pennies brought about by the Federal tax, Bob Anthony at Schine's Piqua, Piqua, Ohio, uses small imprinted envelopes for change, fronts of which carry plugs for his forthcoming attractions.

An identity contest, in which newspaper readers were required to recognize photos of four of the stars of "Pride and Prejudice," was one of the highlights of Roscoe Drissel's campaign for the film's showing at Loew's State, Norfolk. Guest tickets were awarded the first twenty-five persons correctly identifying the players.

With a glass brick railing with a line of red and blue neon tubing running the entire length of his foyer at the Liberty Theatre, in Mercer, Pa., Manager Paul Milheirn paints his title letters and other copy in regular show colors, which may be easily removed with water. Neon brings out the colors sharply, star with character names is done in red, smaller stars in blue and lettering in black.

One Sunday morning recently, residents of Hanover, Pa., were surprised when a visitor presented a card from Charlie Moyer of the State with copy reading "While enjoying the funnies today, be sure to remember that 'Blondie Has Servant Trouble' and all the beloved characters will be at the State next week. Bring the kiddies, if you do not have any, bring your neighbor's; you'll all have the time of your lives."

WIVES CHECK HUSBANDS ON "MAN I MARRIED"

Special lobby table, bannered with signs bearing "Wives, tell the man you married about 'The Man I Married' ", was arranged by Bob Fulton at the Paramount, Waterloo, Ia., for that date. Postcards were available with copy, "The man I married is charming, intelligent handsome lovable, perfect, if he takes me to see," etc. Boxes next to each designation were checked by wives and cards addressed to their spouses, after which they were mailed by the management.

Arranged by Manager Walter Norris at the Regent in Grand Rapids, Mich., and MGM exploiteer Warren Slee, for "I Love You Again," was a classified ad contest whereby entrants were requested to pick lines from various ads and combine them into one humorous ad. Paper featured contest in a four column ad.

A four-column layout featuring previous and current roles of Greer Garson and Laurence Olivier, stars of the picture, was secured in the local Constitution as part of Ed Pentecost's campaign for the showing of the film at Loew's Grand, Atlanta.

Neat newspaper coverage was secured by Bill Burke for "All This and Heaven, Too" at Schine's State, in Fostoria, Ohio, which included a full-page feature story, four-day picture story in another daily and six weeks prior to opening, serialization ran in two papers with a further break by securing permission from editors to run the date line with each chapter.

Ballots were distributed by Cliff Boyd on his "Great McGinty" opening at the Paramount, in Brattleboro, Vermont, front page reading "Republican or Democrat, vote the straight entertainment ticket," this was followed by cut, theatre and playdates. Inside spread carried banner line "Cast your vote for the Great McGinty" and to the kids bringing in the largest number of votes to the McGinty headquarters, an empty store adjacent to theatre, guest tickets were awarded. Highlight of campaign was a torchlight parade, election style, night before opening.

Promoted by Manager Jim Keefe at the Warner Ritz, in Clarksburg, West Va., for "Our Town" was a full page of cooperative ads. Each merchant's ad carried the picture title, art work being spotted throughout. While for "All This, and Heaven Too," Keefe tied up book stores which featured window and counter displays, also giving prominent mention to the picture in their ads.

A contest in which readers of the local Sentinel were asked to write letters on the subject: "Why I Like Andy Hardy" was one of the highlights of the "Andy Hardy Meets Debutante" campaign put over by Joseph Kallett, Capitol, Rome, N. Y.

Two attractive girls attired in jockey outfits rode horses along the town's leading thoroughfares as part of the "Sporting Blood" campaign put over by Fred Osterstock, Easton, Pa.

Excellent cooperation was received from the local Legion Post by Maurice Crew for "The Flag Speaks" run at the Strand, in Waterloo, Ia. Picture was well received and commented on favorably in the organization's monthly publication which came out two days ahead of opening. Special lobby was arranged for the date through use of flags, posters, etc.

Regular newspaper size was the Victory Theatre News published in advance of George Laby's showing of "All This, and Heaven Too" at the Victory, in Holyoke, Mass., entire cost of printing and distribution being met my merchants' ads. Running four pages, the sheet was entirely devoted to the picture, book, art, scene stills, etc.

To sell his serial "Red Ryder," at the La Porte, in LaPorte, Indiana, Manager Wayne Sweeney issued cards, which if punched for all issues entitled each child to a free admission. In addition, local paper which features the comic strip gave the serial a break with readers.

Teaser stunt arranged by Jimmie Redmond at the Bonham, in Fairbury, Neb., for "Andy Hardy Meets Debutante" consisted of the distribution of colored pieces of string to folks entering the theatre. No explanation was proffered but when the trailer went on copy was run: "When you entered the theatre you were handed a piece of string; tie it around your finger as a reminder to see," etc., etc.

A five-gallon glass jug filled with rock salt and labeled "smelling salts" was planted in front of the Capitol, Philadelphia, by Herman Comer as advance for "Alias the Deacon." Card attached to stick was placed in neck of bottle reading "We are prepared to revive all cases of laughing sickness during show of," etc. Beside the jug was a life size dummy holding his head with copy reading "This man laughed his head off at."

Arrangements were made with a number of book and department stores to use "Do You Know?" bookmarks, which plug the film's stars and wind up with: "Do You Know That Boom Town Is Coming to Loew's, etc.?" With the aid of the city's largest cleaning company, Rogers arranged for inserts to be placed in all their packages. Newspaper campaign included the planting of a Clark Gable by-line story, and a preview layout of captioned stills in the local Sunday Courier.

THE CHART

Productions are listed under distributors. Features in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed as "Coming Attractions." Parenthesis after title denotes audience classification: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following classification are production numbers. Dagger (†) indicates the 1940-41 season. Asterisk (*) after title denotes first appearance.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures.

When a production is reviewed the running time is as given by the studio and this is denoted by an asterisk (*) preceding the number. When the home office has established the running time for national release, the studio figure is changed. Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions or repairs to the film may cause variations.

"In use from four to seven years ...and none the worse for wear"

READ what the Jayem Management Corporation, owners and operators of five theatres in New Jersey and Brooklyn, say about Alexander Smith Crestwood Carpet.

MANAGEMENT CORPORATION JAYEM

584 Bergenline Avenue West New York, New Jersey

June 20th, 1940

Alexander Smith & Sons Carpet Company
295 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y.

Dear Sirs:

During the past couple of weeks we have been going through our theatres for their annual summer sprucing up.

I just couldn't help but notice the marvelous condition of the carpet in the theatres in which we had installed "Crestwood." It has been in the three theatres that are using it for anywhere from four to seven years, and, honestly, looks none the worse for all the wear it has received.

My enthusiasm over this discovery, in comparison to other carpeting used previously, urged me to pass this information along to you as I know it should certainly prove interesting.

Thank you very much for your good advice at the time of the purchase.

Sincerely,
JAYEM MANAGEMENT CORPORATION

MARKET NOTES:

New Projector Oil

AN OIL for the lubrication of projectors, said to be an improvement over the type of oil formerly supplied, has been made available by the National Theatre Supply Company. Called "Simplex Projector Oil," it is of a yellow color and different viscosity from the regular and extra-heavy oils previously distributed by National for this purpose.

Takes Over Sound Parts

THE STOCK of replacement parts for Utraphone sound equipment, has been taken over by RCA, according to an announcement by H. B. Snook, manager of RCA Photophone sales. The Ultraphone Sound Equipment Company, Minneapolis, has discontinued its sound equipment business. RCA has appointed the Frosch Theatre Supply Company, 38 Glenwood Avenue, Minneapolis, as distributor of the Ultraphone parts.

New Model Rectifier

IMPROVEMENTS in the design of its standard type Rect-o-lite rectifier are announced by the Baldor Electric Company of St. Louis. The new model is classified as the No. 45. It is pictured in the company's announcement on page 45.

Lobby trailer screenings at Loew's Valencia theatre in Jamaica, N. Y. Shown set up for operation is a continuous projector and screen unit of a type recently placed on the market by the Willor Manufacturing Corporation of New York. The projector equipment reproduces both picture and sound with projection from the rear on a 9x12-inch screen. It can be obtained for front projection as well. The projector is self-rewinding, operates on either a.c. or d.c. without manual switching, and is not affected by line voltage fluctuations, having a regulator.

FORMICA Beautifies THE RKO GRAND, AT CINCINNATI

Thoroughly attractive and practical results were secured by the use of Formica at the RKO Grand in Cincinnati, where it was applied as ticket office paneling, for outside and inside entrance doors, for lobby wall paneling, and for decorative panels behind the water fountains. The material was specified by John Eberson.

Color, a beautiful and durable surface, lack of porosity and chemical inertness, which makes it spot-proof, adapt Formica for use on such surfaces. In hundreds of new and remodeled theatres it is attracting the favorable attention of the crowds. It stamps your place as modern.

Projection—and the "Missing 32,000,000"

IN THIS issue the projector gets some up-front attention by way of emphasizing, right here and now, that things have been happening to the projector mechanism as well as to other elements of the picture-presentation system. Therefore, somewhere in this issue belongs the remarks of Walter E. Green, president of the National Theatre Supply Company, on the "missing 32,000,000."

WALTER E. GREEN

Projectors have been good for such a long time that we are apt to take them for granted. But there have been improvements of great importance to the show, as well as to theatre efficiency, in this department as in others.

It is the whole projection-sound-screen mechanism, of course, that Mr. Green alludes to in his statement which we understand was prepared for his own organization. We quote:

"The recent Goldwyn-sponsored Gallup Survey of opinion on the double feature, unearthed one fact of importance that vitally concerns us all. That fact is the discovery that at least 32,000,000 people who can well afford to attend the movies, go no more than once a month." He adds:

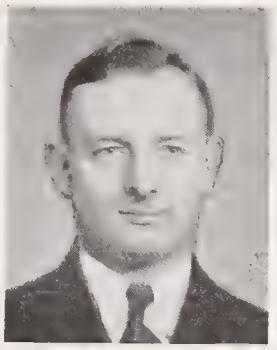
"It is not our province to pass judgment on pictures as such. What does concern us is the missing 32,000,000—and the quarters that they don't spend. Poor pictures keeping them away? Perhaps. But isn't it possible, too, that pictures poorly presented are filling seats at the fireside radios, instead of seats at neighborhood theatres? Thirty-two million customers missing means a job for us. Good pictures, good projection, good sound are the magnets that will help bring back the 32,000,000."

Better Screens

The screen is the greatest sufferer from sub-standard maintenance of projection. J. J. Sefing says much about this and related matters elsewhere in this issue. In this place, however, some recent happenings relative to screens may be taken note of, for the technologists have been busy here, too.

A new screen developed by the Hurley Screen Company, of composition type, has been placed on the market with distribution through the facilities of RCA. All types of Hurley screens come under the arrangement, along with the new one. The essential substance of the screen is a composition which, like similar materials employed in a number of fields, makes important use of specially treated paper. Reflection and sound attenuation figures have not yet been released.

The Walker-American white screen also represents a departure from past practice. Of plastic type, it has its perforations in a chevron pattern to make the holes less noticeable, and in its surfacing a whiter pigment is used than formerly.



The Da-Tone "7" employs a plastic surface which has undergone still further improvement since its introduction, with the company reporting 85% reflection.

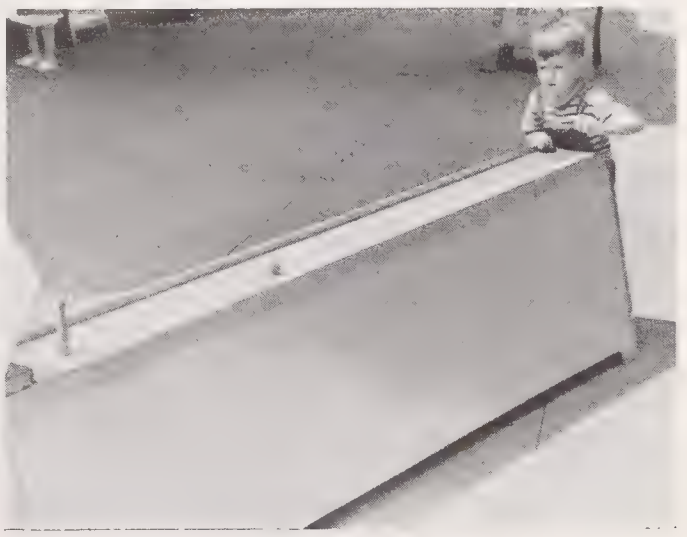
Stagger Hazard

It is reported the Connecticut police department, which regulates theatres in the Nutmeg State, is inclined to frown upon the uneven-row type of staggered seating, calling it a general hazard.

Connecticut officials say, in effect, "Suppose some elderly woman with poor eyesight came down the aisle. She might try to grasp the back of each chair so as to guide herself, then if at one row there wasn't a chair on the aisle, she might fall."

In Connecticut during the last few years, all details of the theatre building and of theatre operation have been carefully examined by the police department. If anything untoward ever happens to a theatre patron in this scenic New England state, the occasion will demonstrate, beyond peradventure of a doubt, the utter futility of official zeal.—G. S.

Albert O. Fenyvessy



GAME FOR KIDDIE MATINEES

■ There were a lot of tricks that Albert Fenyvessy could have adopted to make Saturday matinees at his Arnett theatre in Rochester, N. Y., particularly attractive to youngsters. Many kinds of games, too. But Mr. Fenyvessy wanted something different. So he thought up a game himself to intrigue the youngsters.

It is a kind of bowling game; but not so much a bowling game as a marble game; and it has some of the characteristics of a pin game as well. Played at certain times, so as not to interfere with the screen program, it provides competitive sport for the children. Just one pin is used, and it has a fish line at its base so that it can be pulled into place from the player's position. Each ball returns inside a chute. The youngsters play in groups, one shot to a child. Those that hit the pin get a prize, usually a nickel candy bar.

Mr. Fenyvessy says that the device cost about $30 to build. He had a cabinetmaker build it for him. The board is 8 feet long and has a 6-inch alley. An usher supervises play. One child in five or six is able to hit the pin—and win a prize.

At right is shown one of Mr. Fenyvessy's contestants in action, eyes properly fixed on the ball.

In our present-day appreciation of the dollar-value of good projection, let's not forget the image—the picture—all the motion picture was—always the basic substance of the performance we are selling. And for reproduction of the picture, mechanisms have been improved more in the past few years than in any comparable period. To assure a better image, with greater economy, here is—

What Your Projectors Should Have to Do Their Job Today

By F. H. RICHARDSON

FAR-REACHING developments in projection light and sound, coming rather abruptly in recent years, have tended to obscure somewhat the solid and steady progress in the design of the projector mechanism itself. Yet more improvements have been made in the projector during the last few years than in any comparable period in the past!

F. H. R.

Those improvements relate partly to performance and operation; partly (and very notably) to maintenance. Today's projectors not only give better performance, but better performance for a far longer period of time before repairs become necessary.

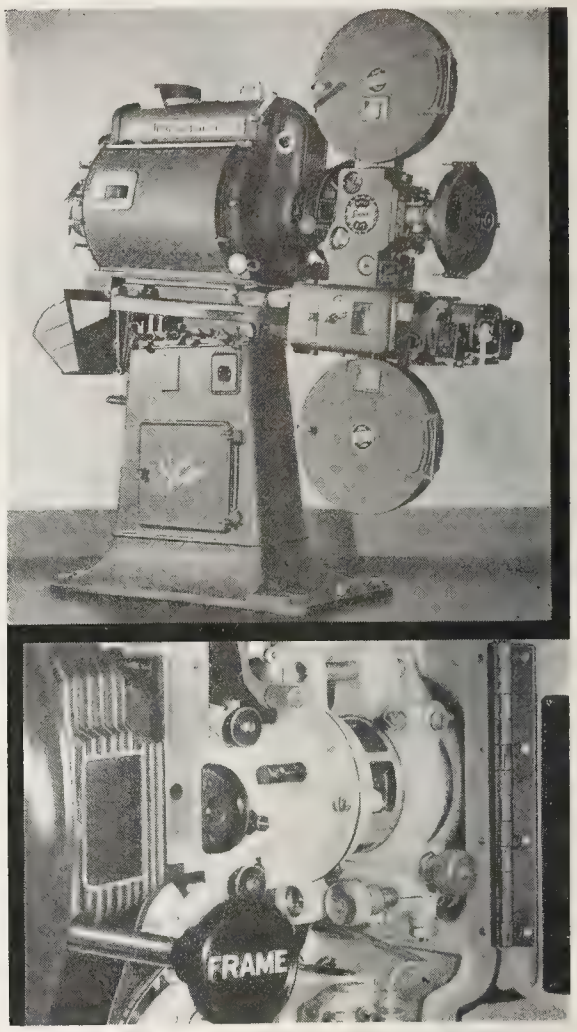
When repairs do have to be made, eventually, the design is such that they can be carried out with a minimum of work and cost—and in such a way that complete overhauling is needed even more rarely than repairs.

In operation they yield more light per unit of current consumed, a steadier picture, and consistent results. Their design, further, is specifically planned to facilitate the work of the projectionist, minimizing the chances of bind-up or of expensive damage if a bind-up does occur, and discouraging almost automatically errors in threading, framing, loop size or lubrication.

At the core of all these improvements lies the development of two or three different classes of projector mechanisms, each suited specifically to the type of theatre in which it is intended to function. The smaller theatre is no longer compelled to use second-hand equipment, cast out by its larger competitors. And the large theatre, grinding ten or twelve or more hours per day, is no longer denied features that would be unnecessary and too expensive on mechanisms intended for an average operation of seven hours per day, while the theatre that does operate twelve or more hours per day, can now have a projector capable of handling precisely that kind of work.

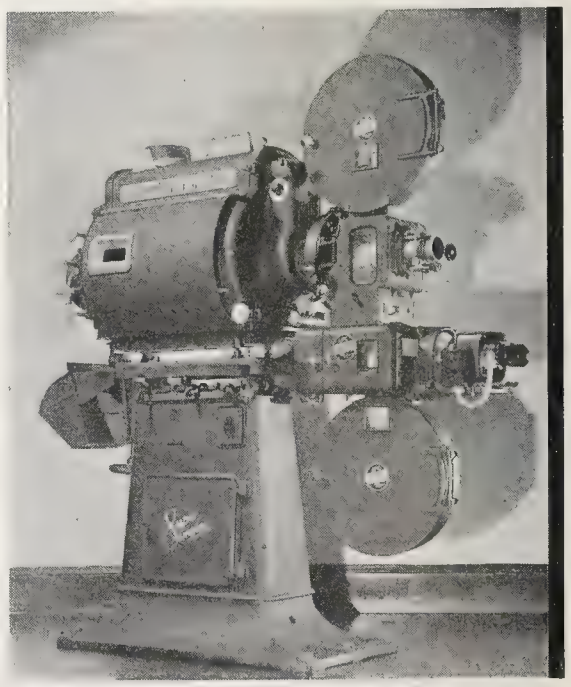
The house that operates 35 hours a week to an audience of 300 can get a projector completely suited both in design and price, to its own specific problems. Both are infinitely better off than in the days when both were compelled to use new or second-hand models of the same mechanism, and each type of projector can now be given special features that were formerly impracticable.

Current improvements with reference to sturdiness illustrate this point. There are now available light-weight, low-cost mechanisms ideally designed for small-theatre operation. The strength of these machines lies in their simplicity, reduction of parts to the fewest possible, reduction of all operations in the projection room to their simplest terms.



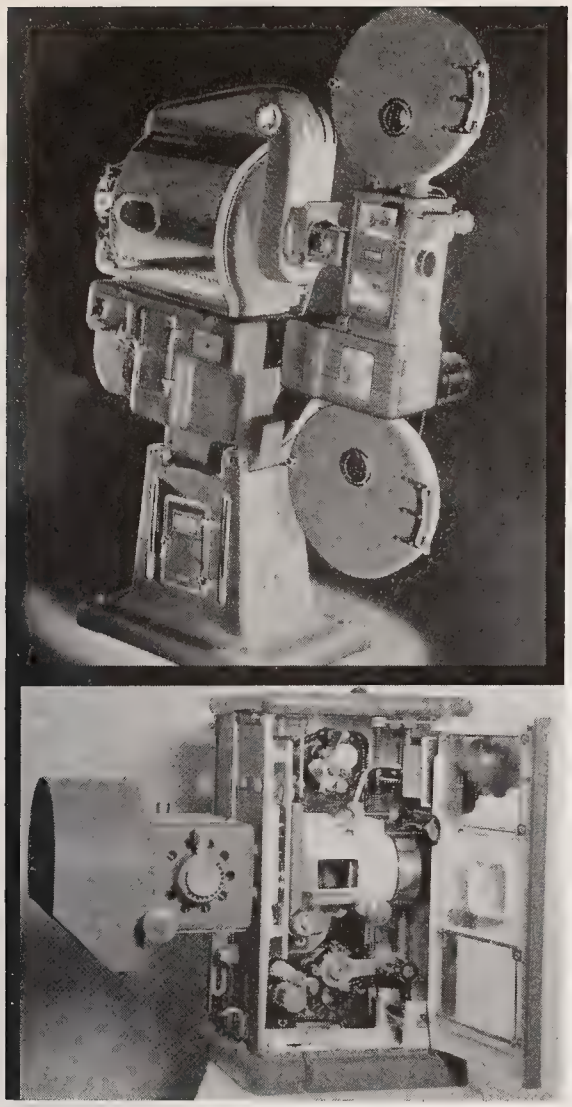
On the other hand, the heavy-duty large-theatre projectors are far heavier than any ever made in the past, with gears and bearings greatly increased in size.

Maintenance Features



In both types modern mechanical principles have been extensively introduced. Lubrication is made nearly automatic in all cases. The smallest, simplest projectors have only two or three oil cups that need attention, and these usually have ball bearings or "self-lubricating" bearings which will not suffer unduly even if addition of oil is neglected for a week or more. In the more elaborate models, many or most of the moving parts operate in a permanent bath of oil, or there is a centralized oiling system with a reservoir that is replenished only occasionally. A daily touch of a lever pumps oil from that reservoir to all bearings and parts that need it.

Among the heavy types may be found the forced-lubrication system by which oil is pumped, or rather splashed, by the action of the mechanism itself, drawn up from a reservoir and spattered over all moving parts in an enclosed, glass-walled gear chamber. With this system there is a single oil-cup, which is refilled only once in six months; no other attention need be paid to lubrication at all, which is a safeguard as well as a convenience.



Modern engineering principles are also applied to gear trains. Hunting tooth gears are increasingly common—these prevent the same teeth coming into mesh each time the gears revolve, thus distributing wear more evenly, and prolonging gear life accordingly.

THE SIMPLEX E-7

THE SUPER-SIMPLEX

THE MOTIOGRAPH MODEL K

Additionally favoring long life of gears is the extensive use of the modern principle of meshing steel with fiber, rather than steel with steel. Ball bearings in place of sleeve bearings are widely used even in the smallest and lowest-priced models.

Another contribution to long life is the innovation of having gears turn on shafts, in place of the older practice of gear and shaft constituting one unit, with the shaft turning in a bushing in the main frame. With the former method, the main frame had to be re-bushed from time to time, because of wear, and it eventually became unusable. The modern method confines the wear to the point between gear and shaft, where replacements can be made easily and cheaply, while the main frame never deteriorates.

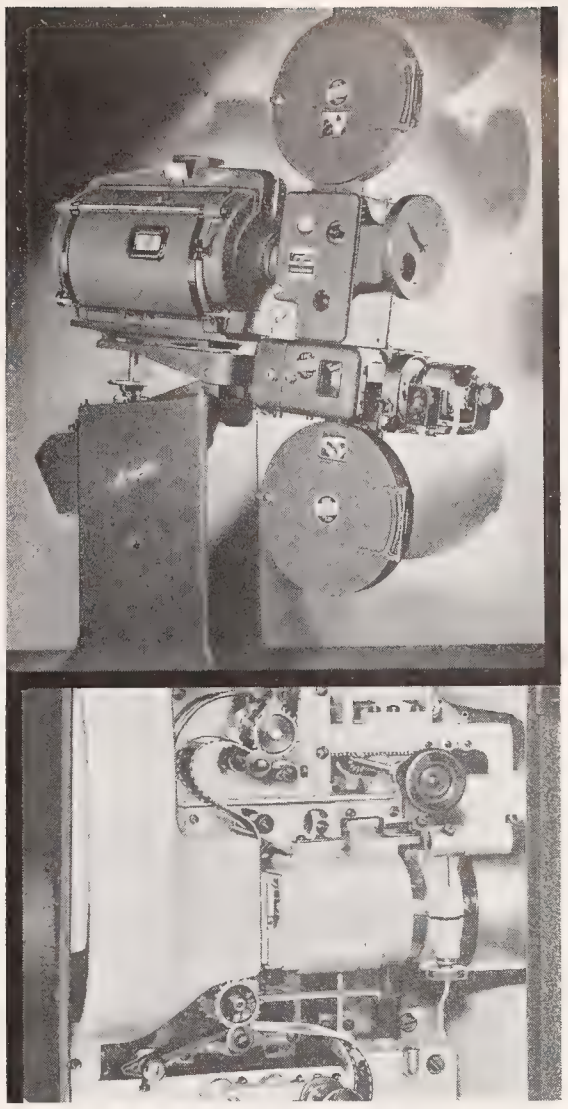
The intermittent movement has been materially improved, not in principle, of course, but in details of great importance. For example, a film of oil may be introduced between cam and star by means of holes bored in the cam; this film acts as a shock-absorber, reducing wear. Or cam and star may be more than double the former conventional size.

Maintenance also is facilitated by the modern practice of so designing component parts that they can be removed and replaced as combination units. In several models, for example, a sprocket and its roller or shoe, instead of being separately mounted to the main frame, are affixed to a mounting plate—when that plate is taken out the whole sprocket assembly comes with it as a unit combination. In several models also, the intermittent casing comes out as an integral unit, no gears being removed.

In all new designs, accessibility for repair has been stressed beyond anything known in previous practice, with the result that repairs can be made more quickly, more easily and more cheaply, while the mechanism can be kept in peak condition at all times, and the general overhaul of past practice, involving the use of a rental head while the part to be overhauled is sent to the shop, tends now to give way to the more efficient practice of projection room repairs with or without replacement of some combination units.

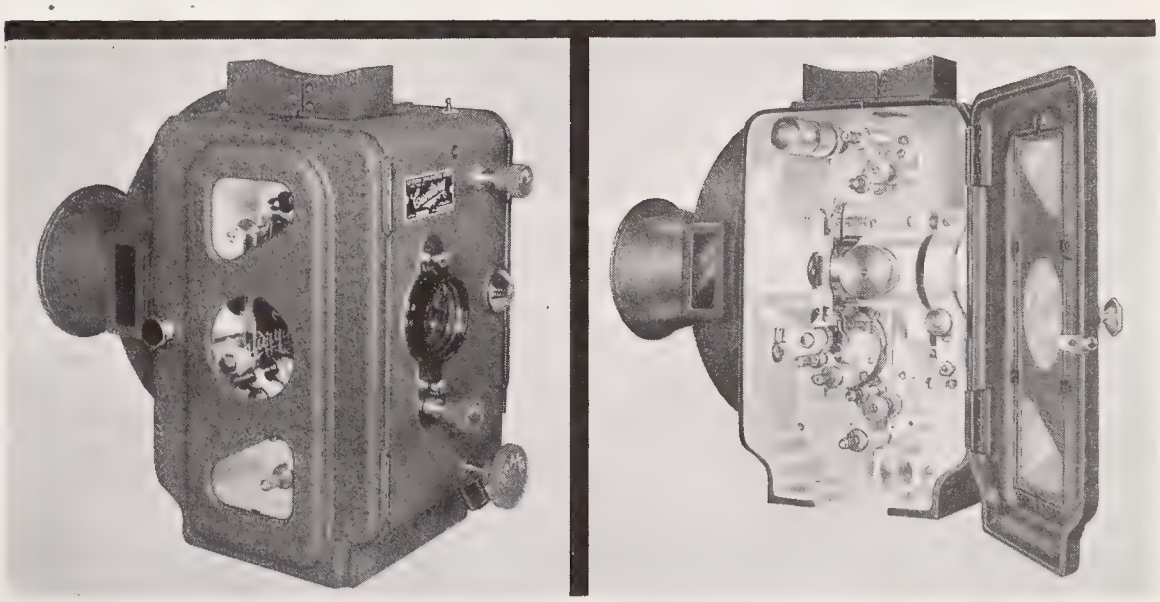
Performance Advantages

Extensive use of double shutters results in a substantial saving of light. Double shutters may be located both front and rear, revolving in the same direction; or both may be at the rear and revolve in opposite directions. In one of the recent designs the double shutter remains optional equipment; in other new mechanisms it is standard equipment (one model employs a cylindrical rear shutter).



The double-shutter mechanism may incorporate a spring on the shutter shaft which compensates for wear in the bearings and gears, taking up any slack produced by such wear and therefore minimizing adjustments for travel ghost even when the mechanism has prolonged heavy use.

Superior gate design features all modern models, holding the film more firmly and producing a steadier picture even when the film is moderately buckled. Also, and practically indispensable with increased light, there is superior means of forced draft cooling, substantially precluding the possibility of film buckle, and also serving as a safeguard against film fire. Aperture shutter trips, which provide the best protection against film fire, are more sensitive and more positive in operation.



Refinements (generally too small in detail to describe fully in this space, but adding up bit by bit to substantial progress) have been built into sprockets, tension shoes and idlers, again making for smoother operation, a steadier picture and a safer performance, with the least possible chance of bind-up. In a heavy-duty model an easily replaceable link in the main drive assembly has been so incorporated that it will break in case of bind-up, protecting the gears—a sort of mechanical fuse, in other words. In another, a special trip built in above the upper sprocket is actuated when film piles up as a result of a break, to give protection against film fire.

Controls of lens focus, and framing and shutter operation, have been made more accessible, often in the form of a few knobs

Modern Unit Heaters—the Answer to Many Theatre Heating Problems

● Chilly lobbies, cold spots in the auditorium—and in some sections, the entire theatre—can be comfortably as well as economically heated by today's new units. Here is a guide to their investigation

By J. T. KNIGHT, JR.

WHEN A PERSON stops to analyze the physical problems in connection with a theatre, he immediately is impressed with the problem of heating. Ten years ago it was a greater problem than it is today.

A long, wide, high auditorium with a deep overhanging balcony, compelling placement of direct radiation along side walls, present serious obstacles to uniform heating and draftless comfort. The auditorium containing, as it does, such a large volume of air, will naturally form zones of comfort—zones where it is too cold, and zones where it is uncomfortably hot. The air stratifies, the heat rises, exposed walls will cause a layer of air inside the theatre to become chilled and that air slides down to the floor, causing uncomfortable conditions. This latter situation is especially true of the back or stage wall of a theatre. There are many theatres in the United States that have a cold zone during winter months, in the first eight or ten rows on the main floor.

The frequent opening and closing of entrance doors creates a condition in the vestibule or lobby that effects the condition of the entire theatre. Very frequently doors are necessary at the head of each aisle to block out as much as possible the annoying

Many times it presents such a problem to heat up the cold air that filters into the theatre, that all fresh air through the ventilating system is shut off. This is of course contrary to the health code in many towns and cities, yet it must occasionally be resorted to where possible as a matter of necessity.

Heaters Available Today

The heating engineers and heating equipment manufacturers have gone a long way towards giving us the answer to these problems. They have perfected the unit heater. One or more unit heaters will stop that cold draft from the stage. Very frequently one will heat up the cold lobby or vestible, stopping the disturbing drafts in the aisles.

Unit heaters can be obtained for direct connection to existing steam systems, or they may be heated by gas. Very frequently the installation of a unit heater will permit the removal of several unsightly and badly located radiators. Unit heaters may also be had, heated by electricity, but the writer has never installed any of these because of the cost of operation.

The unit heater is neatly, and in many instances, handsomely housed in a cabinet. It contains a coil or some form of heat exchange surface, and a fan operates to force air through the coil and propel it into the space to be heated. Unit heaters are available in a wide range of sizes, shapes and fan speeds. This permits close selection by the engineer for the particular job in hand. A study of the range of application of unit heaters would convince one that their use is almost limitless. The same balanced design and performance of the unit heaters indicate that the same caliber of engineering has gone into their development as into that of the ventilating blowers we use, and also into that of our air-conditioning equipment.

The user of a unit heater is impressed with the uniformity of performance of this type of equipment in the face of varying conditions, and with the small amount of care and maintenance required.

Economy Effected

The concentration of high heat values in a unit heater permits substantial savings in initial heating costs on new jobs. The units are designed compactly and their weight is not excessive, thereby not requiring special construction to carry heavy loads. Most unit heaters may be suspended by hooks or steel straps from existing beams, girders and, in some cases, joists.

These heat units may be arranged for manual starting and stopping or they may operate automatically by means of a thermostat.

In a steam unit heater, the amount of heating can be regulated by a modulating steam valve and automatic trap. Very close temperature regulation, and quick heating action are possible with the unit type heater. The fan can be operated at any time without the heating function, a feature which has proved advantageous many times in theatre lobbies during in-between-seasons, when more air motion is desirable in the lobby.

Perhaps the ease and simplicity of the control of unit heaters over pipe coils or direct radiation is the most outstanding feature of this relatively new type of equipment.

Unit heaters are generally suspended from the ceiling; they do not require floor space. Many times unused furred spaces (dead space) in walls may be used as a clever location for unit heaters.

Unit heaters may be installed to reheat and recirculate all air from the particular space they are located in, or they may have a fresh air connection to bring into the space a regulated amount of air from the outside. Gas-fired unit heaters should always be vented to the outside. The very fact that the heated air is forced by fan into the room indicates better circulation of air than is obtainable with radiators.

Auditorium Heating

Unit heaters have been successfully installed in theatres in the false proscenium space (those spaces formerly used for organ pipes). In this location they do a very satisfactory job of heating the center of the auditorium. In one such installation they are completely concealed, recirculating from the auditorium air drawn through grilles in the ceiling, and reheating the air and propelling it to the center of the auditorium.

In another instance two unit heaters were installed in the orchestra pit (not used for an orchestra) under the stage apron. In this location they use recirculated air entirely, reheating it and tempering the front of the auditorium to very comfortable temperature.

A theatre that had suffered for years from cold air coming from the back stage wall and fly loft was given two unit heaters. Located one on each side of the stage, they blew heated air at an angle against the center of the wall. This corrected the condition immediately. In this particular instance no wall hung radiation had ever been installed on the back wall of the stage, while the boiler was not large enough to allow adding any more radiators to the system. Two gas fired heaters, vented to the outside solved the problem at a cost of about $700, as against an estimated cost for enlarging the cast steel sectional boiler and installing a new burner and wall hung radiators of $2,200. Inasmuch as the extra heat is required only during the coldest weather, the unit heaters effect substantial savings.

In another instance, a theatre was heated entirely by the indirect method—that is,

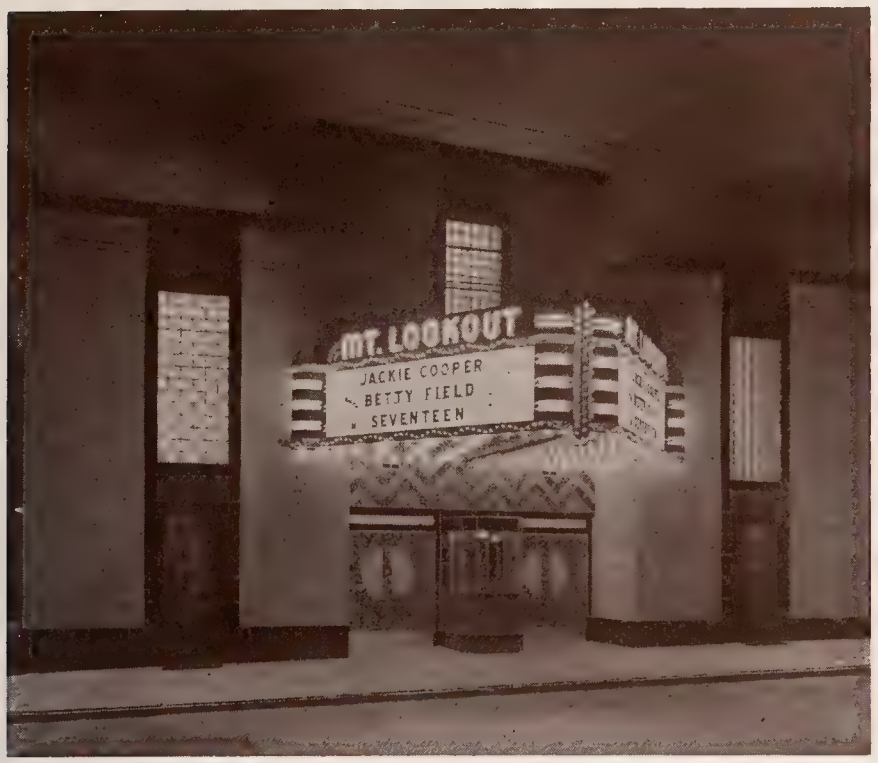
MAYFAIR THEATRE
Ventura, Calif.

Architect:
S. CHARLES LEE

■ Seating 800, the new Mayfair theatre in Ventura, Calif., is an interesting example of the method by which the idea of luxury is expressed by an ornamental, colorful, fanciful style throughout the interior, yet with a definite modern interpretation of form, while the modern manner is given full play in the treatment of the exterior. The new Mayfair is owned and operated by Mrs. Jenne Dodge, who, beginning in show-business as a cashier, has operated one of Ventura's three theatres for a number of years. The front, faced with stucco, is so massed and outlined as to give a modern somewhat fanciful form, which is accented at night in light. The marquee surmounts a box office with concentric rings indirectly illuminated in neon; the marquee and decorative lighting is in rose, white, green and gold. Doors of natural-finish walnut lead directly into a foyer which has plaster walls tinted pale blue and a central decorative piece consisting in a peach-colored mirror with gilt roccoco frame, with the whole lighted by a cove containing fluorescent neon tubing. A circular lounge is immediately off the foyer, and a cosmetic room and men's lounge are reached through the former. The auditorium is uniquely divided into two sections, each with its own decorative scheme. The rear section has walls rippling in a series of vertical corrugations painted chartreuse; the front portion has flat walls painted a deep blue and carrying a large flower motif painted in shades of orchid and yellow. Another interesting arrangement is a screen curtain of woven glass which has ornamentation in fluorescent pigments, which are energized, so as to glow when the house lights darken, from the projection room. The auditorium ceiling is a pattern arrangement of insulating and sound absorbent tiles. A notable arrangement relative to operation and maintenance is a small room where film is delivered from the outside and from which the projectionist takes it directly to the projection room.

TYLER THEATRE, Tyler, Texas

PETTIGREW & WORLEY, Architects

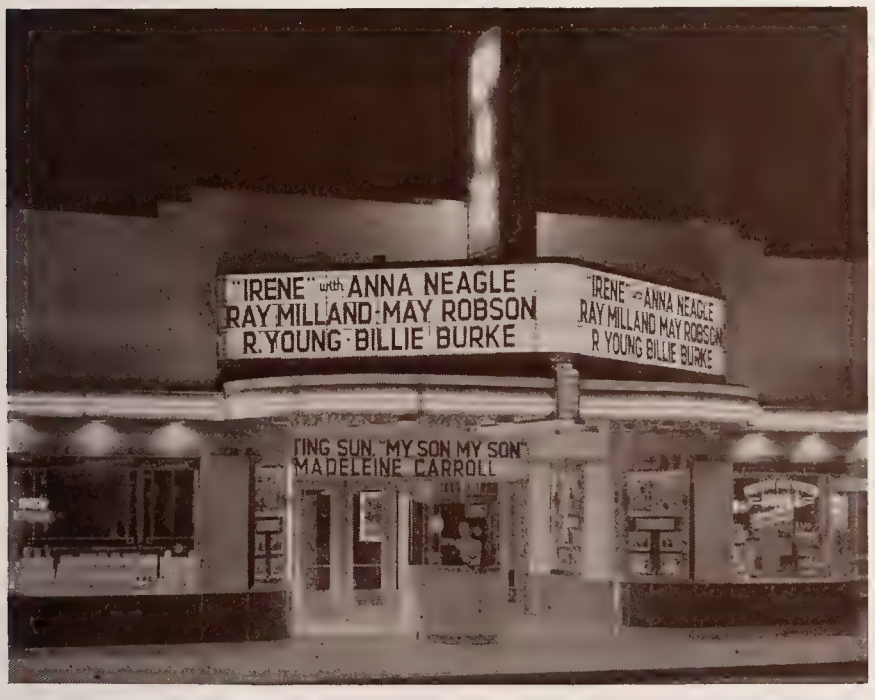


■ Located in the heart of the East Texas Piney woods, Tyler is called the "Rose Capital" of the world. A 9-foot rose, lighted in rose colors in neon, ornaments the front; pines, roses and rose bushes decorate the foyer and auditorium walls. A new Texas Consolidated Theatres house, the Tyler seats 1,100. The front is white stucco above marquee, with tan and wine-trimmed Carrara glass columns at sides; lower facing, including vestibule, is brown, tan and cream tiles. The marquee, equipped with the new type Adler attraction equipment (recessed-face silhouette letters and hinged-section panel), is of porclain enamel finished in tan and rust, lighted in blue and gold neon, as are the name letters. Auditorium walls are acoustic plaster with floral ornamentation in shades of blue above a coral wainscot. The ceiling, also of acoustic plaster, is tinted light coral, with darker band down the center. Auditorium lighting is by spun aluminum and glass wall fixtures and flush light boxes in balcony soffit. Floral murals in foyer are in shades of coral. At the stairway leading to a mezzanine lounge is a candy case of natural-finish birch with rust linoleum striping. Carpeting is a Crestwood pattern in maroon and tan.

VARSITY THEATRE
Carbondale, Ill.

Architect:
O. W. STIEGEMEYER

■ I. W. Rodgers' new Varsity theatre in Carbondale, Ill., which seats 1,100 in a stadium plan, occupies a little over half of a one-story commercial building entirely faced in Carrara structural glass, while the theatre entrance located between two stores, is marked by a triangular tower paneled in Pittsburgh-Corning glass blocks illuminated from behind. The architectural glass facing is tan, with burgundy base and striping.



MT. LOOKOUT THEATRE, Mt. Lookout, Ohio

S. S. & G. H. GODLEY, Architects

■ Serving a residential section suburban to Cincinnati, the new Mt. Lookout theatre is owned and operated by the Mt. Lookout Theatre Company of Cincinnati, of which Jerome M. Jackson is managing director. Among interesting features of this 750-seat theatre is division of the front into three staggered sections, each with an illuminated "window" of Pittsburgh-Corning glass blocks. The general facing is cream terra cotta tiles, with base, and central panels containing the "windows" of black Carrara structural glass. The glass blocks are illuminated in three colors, 210 ten-watt lamps to each panel operated on a Lockwood transformer type dimmer for variation of color harmony. The lobby of the Mt. Lookout has a ceiling of fireproof acoustic tiles, extending beyond the walls to form a cove containing 18-inch fluorescent lamps, alternately red and blue. Plaster side walls are painted peach with a modern stylized floral design in a lighter tone. The same ornamentation is carried out in the ceiling, which is tinted pale green. The lobby floor is peach and green ceramic tiles except for recessed lanes in which checkered rubber mats are laid. The wall base is black Carrara structural glass. It should be noted too that the outside display cases are lighted by daylight type fluorescent lamps.

PIX THEATRE, Waukesha, Wis.

ALBERT F. KEYMAR, Architect

■ One story in height, the front of Waukesha Theatres' new Pix theatre is finished at store and theatre entrance level in cream and green porcelain enamel, while the upper area is white cement plaster. This color scheme is carried throughout the marquee and sign finish and lighting, except for a stainless steel border, supporting a double line of blue neon, running around the lower edge of the marquee and along adjoining store fronts. The Everbrite marquee and sign are of porcelain enamel, in white, orange and green, the sign letters being lighted in powder green neon against a white ground. The marquee carries Everbrite silhouette-letter attraction boards and its soffit lighting consists in lamps in flush set aluminum reflectors. An interesting feature of the auditorium, which is finished entirely in National Gypsum insulation board (walls tan and ivory, ceiling ivory), is a series of downlights, alternating with Barber-Colman air diffusers, each consisting in a 100-watt pink-dipped lamp in a reflector. Side wall fixtures, of glass and metal, are on red, blue, green and yellow circuits. The Pix, which was constructed by the Porcelain Building Products Company of Milwaukee, seats 500. The air supply system includes cooling coils supplied entirely by well water.

ALMEDA THEATRE, Houston, Tex.

RAYMOND SMITH, Architect

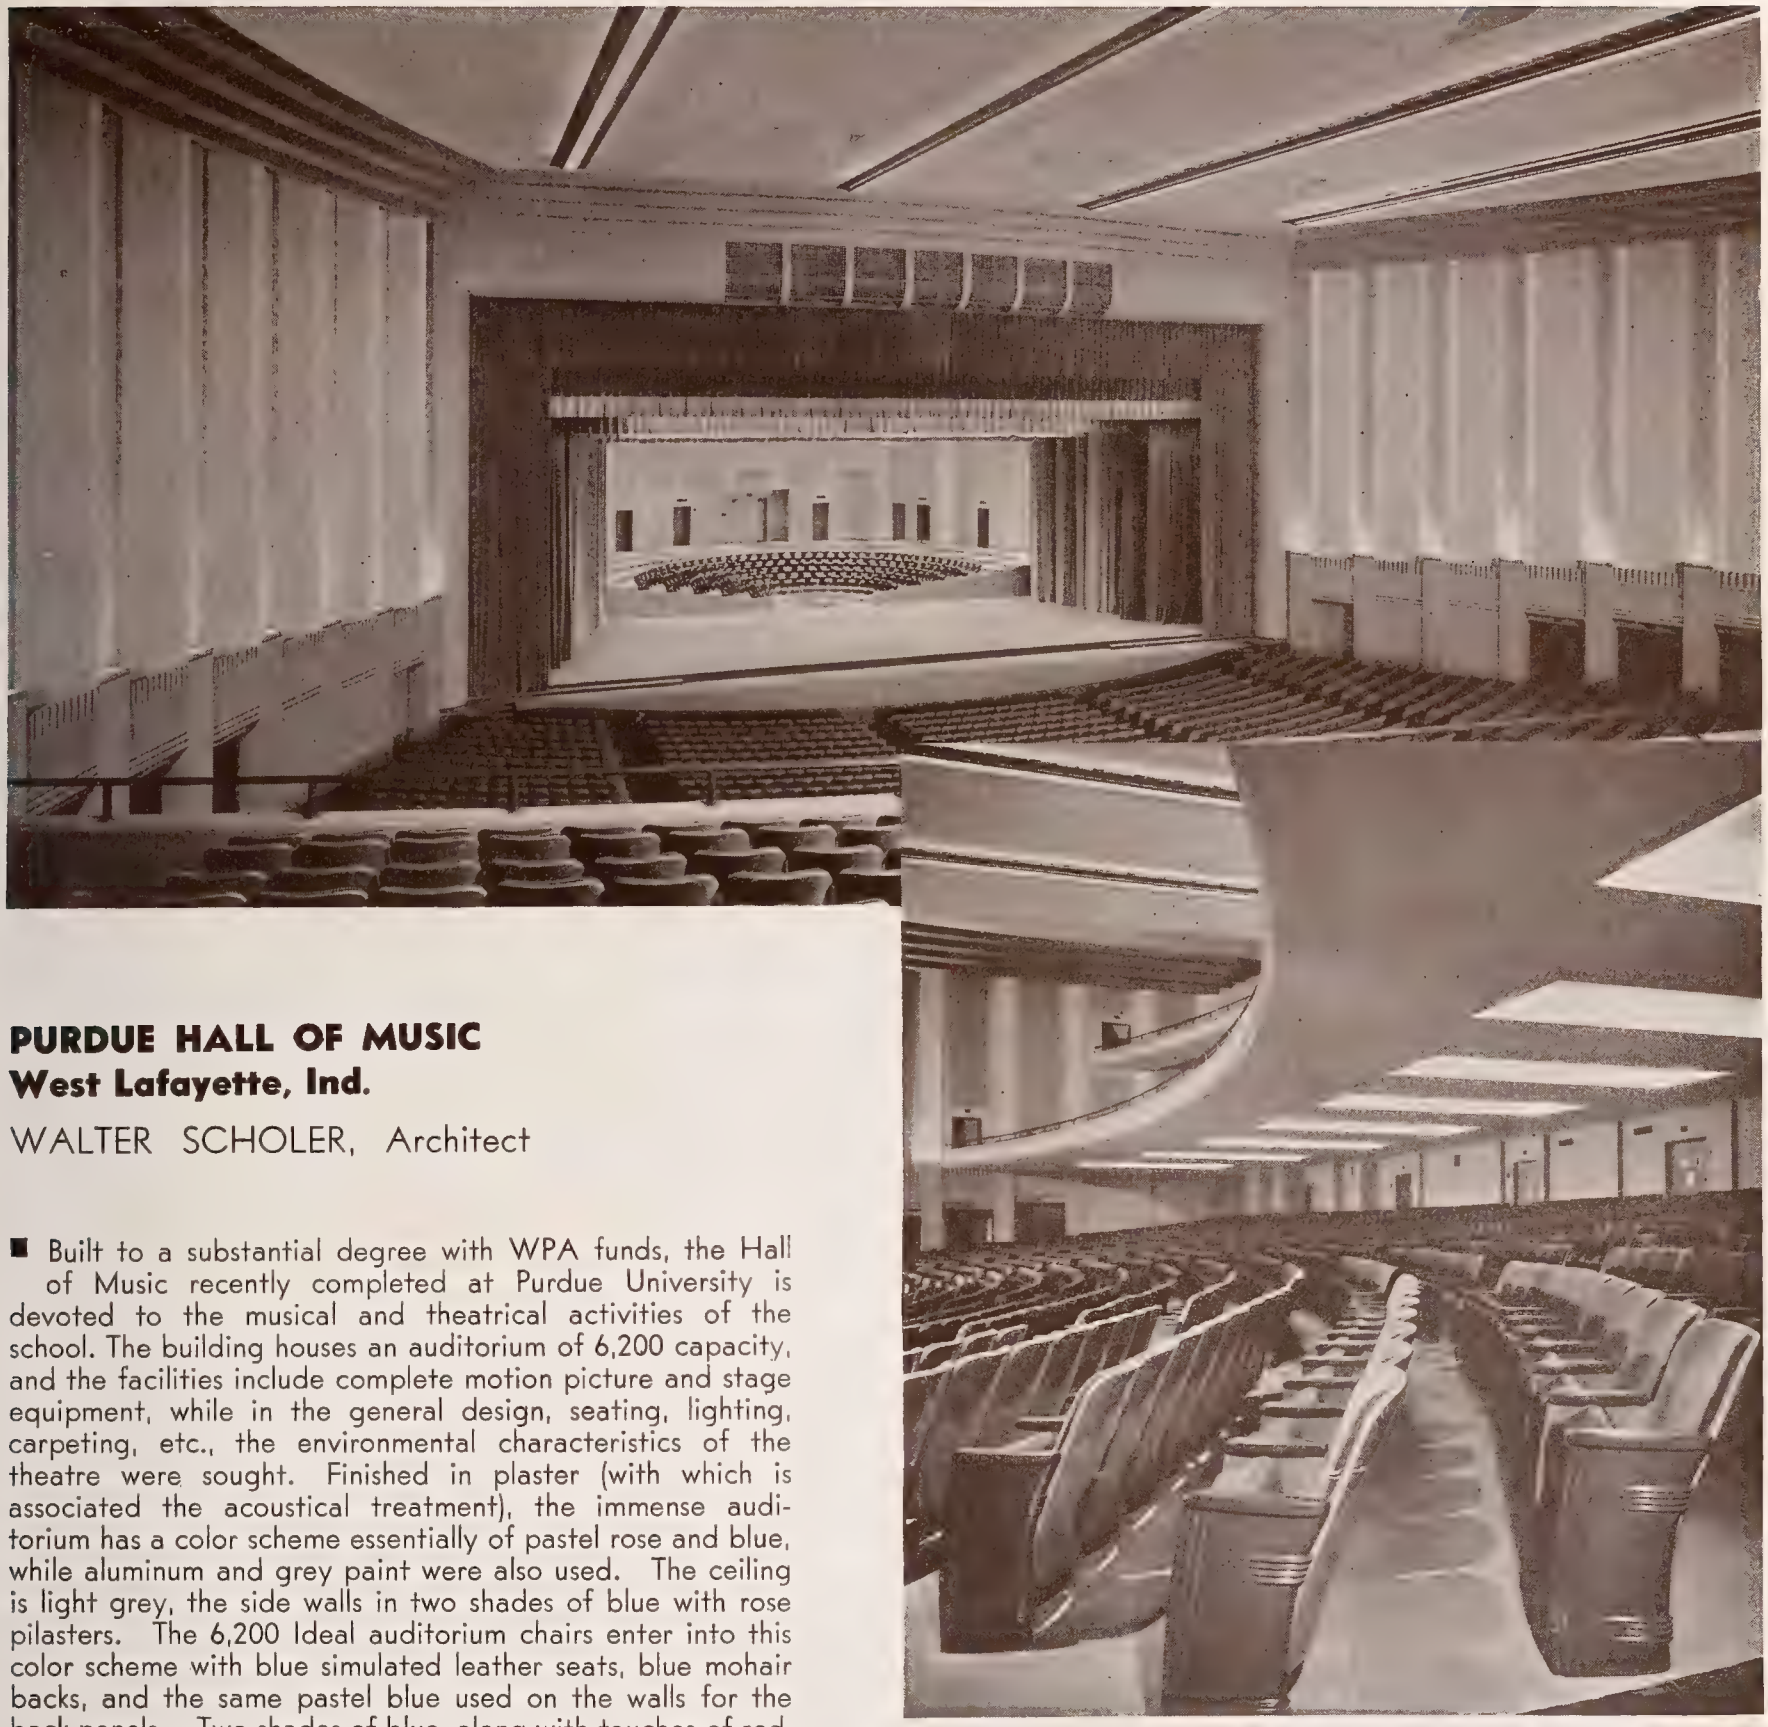
Of considerably less recent construction than the other theatres in this group of "Arrangements," the Hollywood theatre in Sioux Falls, S. Dak., is nevertheless among the nation's newer theatres, and is one of the most modern in style. Designed by Harold Spitznagel of Sioux Falls, it has a lobby with photo-murals representing the steps in film production, arranged above walls lined with rubber—two in maroon, two in gray-green. An interesting arrangement in the cosmetic room (below) is relatively large square mirrors with etched rings to frame the face. Walls are papered in yellow, carpeting is a solid blue broadloom, the ceiling brown-painted plaster.



RIVER OAKS THEATRE, Houston, Tex.

PETTIGREW & WORLEY, Architects

■ With all elements intimately integrated architecturally and decoratively, the River Oaks theatre, operated by Paul P. Scott and seating 1,200 on two floors, presents a notably unified modern front and vestibule arrangement. Finish of the entire area is in porcelain enamel—the darker portions shown in the photograph being rust, the others cream. Name letters are rust porcelain against the cream upper facade. The Adler attraction panels are lighted with eight lines of white neon. Marquee soffit lighting alternates rows of incandescent lamps extending from cream porcelain face, with lamps in reflectors.

SUPER-AUDITORIUM

PURDUE HALL OF MUSIC
West Lafayette, Ind.
WALTER SCHOLER, Architect

■ Built to a substantial degree with WPA funds, the Hall of Music recently completed at Purdue University is devoted to the musical and theatrical activities of the school. The building houses an auditorium of 6,200 capacity, and the facilities include complete motion picture and stage equipment, while in the general design, seating, lighting, carpeting, etc., the environmental characteristics of the theatre were sought. Finished in plaster (with which is associated the acoustical treatment), the immense auditorium has a color scheme essentially of pastel rose and blue, while aluminum and grey paint were also used. The ceiling is light grey, the side walls in two shades of blue with rose pilasters. The 6,200 Ideal auditorium chairs enter into this color scheme with blue simulated leather seats, blue mohair backs, and the same pastel blue used on the walls for the back panels. Two shades of blue, along with touches of red, were used for the carpeting, which is of special pattern in Crestwood Velvet. The acoustical treatment, planned in consultation with Dr. F. R. Watson, noted acoustics specialist of the University of Illinois, consists essentially in the application of Johns-Manville Spongcoustic to alternate panels along the side walls and to the balcony fascias; and the use of Transite perforated board across the rear wall, the Transite being furred out to allow a 1/2-inch air space, behind which is a 2-inch layer of rock wool. Lighting is mainly by means of four troughs running from front to rear, and coves in the balcony soffits, all using incandescent lamps in aluminum reflectors. There are also lamps in reflectors set behind the pilasters at the level of the first balcony; these throw light upward on the walls, under dimmer control, as a decorative device, "warming" the upper reaches of the high forward walls. Electricity comes into the building at 2,300 volts. Seven transformers convert it to various voltages. Exit lights are on circuits which automatically throw on if all other light circuits go out. The projectors (Simplex E-7) are fitted with slide-in aperture plates for either silent or sound pictures. Projection lighting is by Peerless straight high-intensity lamps, supplied by 150–300 ampere Hertner motor-generators. The sound system is the largest made by Western Electric. The screen (Walker white) and its frame (which is rigged for flying) is 33 feet, 3 inches wide. Stage facilities (all equipment by Clancy) include lift accommodating a full-sized symphony orchestra. Projection accessories include Golde enclosed rewind and Goldberg reels.

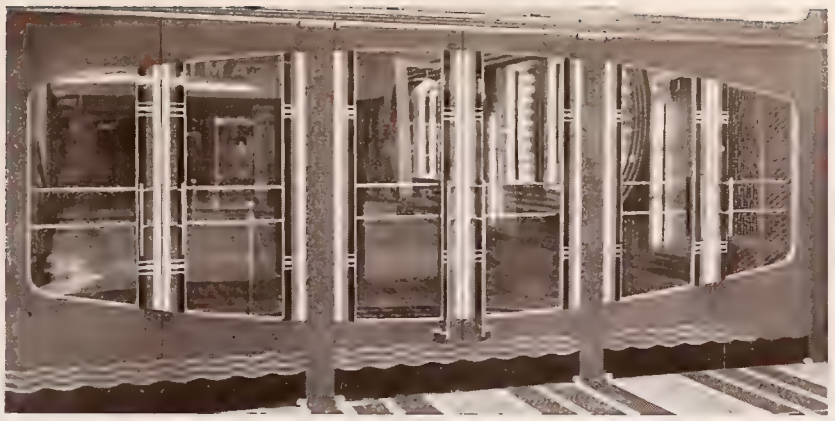
ADD COLOR AND LIFE

RKO GRAND THEATRE, CINCINNATI: DECORATIVE PANEL IN LOBBY (upper view) AND FOYER FOUNTAIN.



Decorative details from the designs of an eminent theatre architect, accompanied by his comment on the practical aims of showmanship that they express

By JOHN EBERSON

THE architect who decides to specialize in the designing of motion picture theatres soon discovers that he is in for more specializing than he had counted on, if he had never previously studied this class of building. In the first place, he has to deal, in his planning, with the technicalities of the motion picture, which complicate and particularize enormously the usual procedure in much of the basic affairs of design and construction. The whole public portion of the building itself is really part of the machinery of public entertainment that the invention of motion pictures has created. In the second place, he has to contend with aesthetic considerations—the things that make the front and interior attractive, emotionally stimulating—which require a certain sensitivity on the part of the designer to the spirit of theatrical entertainment.

The elements of a theatre which give it beauty, which provide the kind of surroundings that enter into the spirit of story-telling, are an important part of the whole scheme of the theatre. Styles in design may change, but the motion picture theatre architect must ever find a way to create such surroundings.

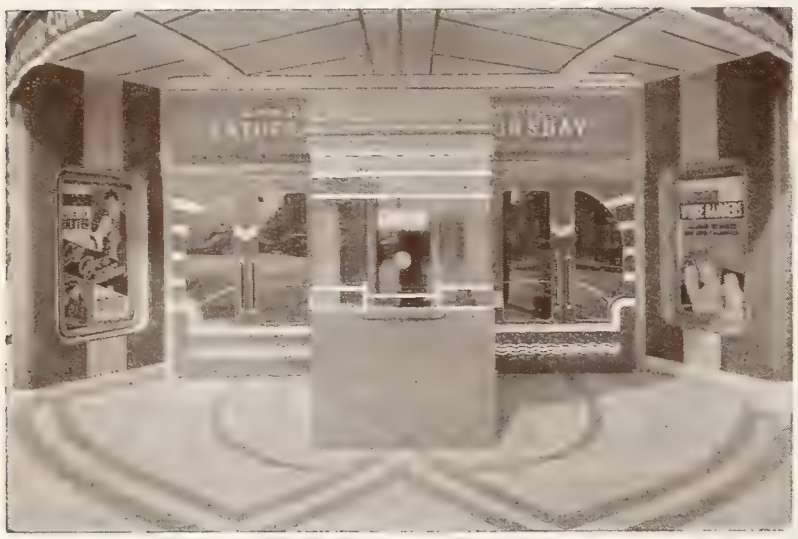
Today, of course, we do not usually design in the styles we used back in the 1920's; we use forms and decorative devices that we call modern. Nevertheless, these new forms and devices have the same purpose—the theatre still must be interesting architecturally, more or less colorful (according to the character of the community), stimulating to the imagination, full of the sense of fancy and luxury which few people have in their own daily lives.

Along with the change to modern designs have come many new materials, while older ones have been developed for wider and better usage. Glass and the wood veneers are notable among the latter; Formica is an outstanding example of the new building materials which modern chemical science has given us.

In some respects, the modern materials, particularly in the synthetic group, may be regarded as substitutes for certain older materials, used because they give a similar effect, but are relatively inexpensive, if not in first cost, then in application or maintenance, etc. This is not always the case, however; a material like Formica suggests new forms by virtue of its own beauty and variety.

All too often the designer, driven by budget pressure, either uses some cheap-looking decoration to fill in certain conspicuous areas, or rather than to do that, leaves these areas blank, perhaps using an all-over tint. This, I think, is a mistake in the usual motion picture theatre situation. The theatre cannot have "dead spots." All public areas normally should have sparkle, color, architectural interest, a certain glow of life. And this should be achieved with as much impression of elegance as possible. If done in a cheap-looking way, the colors and surface textures will only appear gaudy and faked.

The doors of a theatre are good examples of such conspicuous areas that are not always thought of as playing a part in the decorative scheme. They should not be "dead spots," however, and I have found Formica especially adapted to my purposes here.



The door itself is of hardwood, with the core of laminated construction. The door is covered with sheets of Formica made for this purpose, laid flush, resulting in an hermetically sealed door with the wood structure moisture-proof. The opening is designed to fit the Formica-finished door exactly, since there can be no adjustment to size on the job.

More than 40 colors, patterns and textures are available in Formica; and into the field color may be introduced inlays of Formica in other colors, or inlays of metal, to form an interesting pattern, which can be tied into the design of the rest of the room. The metals—aluminum, copper, or permanently colored—are pressed into the Formica at high temperatures, and will not corrode at the edges. Sealed against moisture, the door itself does not warp or shrink and does not absorb oil, grease, etc. Color tone and brilliance are retained, the only maintenance required being to wipe off the surface with a damp cloth. One can use either the glossy or non-glossy types of Formica for doors and related areas; I prefer the glossy, however, to heighten the decorative effect. I have found it unnecessary to use kickplates on Formica doors.

There are many other points at which this versatile material can be applied decoratively to lend interest. Instead of leaving lobby poster frames or shadow boxes isolated and dull, they can be brought into the design by extending the pattern begun at the doors along the walls to frame the displays, running the Formica, for example, in panels.

Drinking fountains are other "spots" at which the interior treatment can be given a highlight, a dash of color and interest with an impressive effect out of all proportion to the cost. Such touches can go far to make the difference between a dull theatre interior and a stimulating one. Formica splash panels, with an inlay design, possibly carrying out, say, in some marine theme, add such interest at the same time that they afford a protective medium that is easily maintained.

The splash panel, and any surrounding area that may be drawn into the fountain setting (as in the case of a standee area alcove), suggests the use of a new type of Formica that is fluorescent under ultraviolet light. The fluorescent chemicals are an integral part of the Formica resin. The ultraviolet energy is supplied by a mercury vapor lamp of proper type. [Lamps for this and similar purposes have been discussed as to type and application in the series of articles by C. M. Cutler and H. J. Chanon which is concluded elsewhere in this issue; the manufacturer of Formica suggests the General Electric 100-watt H-4 lamp with red-purple ultra envelope in a suitable reflector.—THE EDITOR.] The design can be done entirely or partially in fluorescent inlays, so that the fluorescent portions appear in the same colors under ordinary and ultraviolet light; or in different colors, so that elements not visible under regular light come into being under ultraviolet, and so on.

Fluorescent decoration, including fluorescent carpeting, is a welcome addition to the bag of tricks from which the theatre designer can draw novel, yet authentic aids to showmanship. Fluorescent Formica is obtainable in dark purple, orange, light green, red, and several shades of blue—these being the colors that appear under ultraviolet light.

The RKO Grand theatre, recently constructed in the Taft Building in Cincinnati, well illustrates the application of Formica to a colorful modern theatre interior. The lobby has a plain ceiling from which is suspended a large light trough equipped with fluorescent (not ultraviolet) tubular lamps providing rose-colored light to a room with walls dominated by decorative wall panels bordered in cherry-red Formica. These penels could be used for displays; the RKO management, however, preferred to omit all advertising matter from this area, and except for the middle section, which is a design-etched mirror, they contain a series of modern stylized paintings. Cherry-red Formica is also used for a base above rose marble. This lobby, extending from outer doors to foyer doors, is carpeted in a modern Alexander Smith pattern of coloration harmonizing with the Formica finish of the doors.

The entrance doors contain plate glass panels, the foyer doors small windows so as to avoid collisions. The doors are designed to form an over-all wall pattern, with black Formica bases, cherry-red Formica field, and metal inlay trim in silver, ivory, blue and black.

In the foyer Formica is used for a drinking fountain splash panel. This panel carries a brilliantly colored tropical fish and marine design executed in dark green, blue, red and silver inlaid metals in a Nile green Formica field.

In the Calvert theatre in Washington, D. C., I used the genuine wood-grain type of Formica (this is made with a thin veneer of beautifully grained wood pressed and "heated" into the Formica base) in wood moulded bands to tie the doors in with the rest of the lobby and its display cases. The doors [see accompanying photograph] have a field of cherry-red Formica, a circle pattern in Nile green Formica, and silver metal inlay stripings. The circular design was essentially repeated in the rubber mats, further integrating all elements of the lobby treatment.

The entrance doors of the Perry theatre in Pittsburgh, which has a relatively shallow vestibule bringing the doors almost to the sidewalk, are of a colorful design inside and out, done entirely in Formica. The field on both sides is blue, while trim is in Russian red with highlight stripes in cherry red.

For box offices, I have used Formica effectively in the solid colors and in the marble patterns. Laid flush over the wood frame and veneer construction of the box office, the Formica seals the wood against action of the weather at the same time that it provides the necessary beauty of surface.

In the genuine wood-grain textures of Formica, about sixteen different kinds of woods are available, running from light to dark. Another interesting decorative surface in this material is one simulating linen or similar fabric, which is adapted to paneling and has the advantages of being permanent and also easily maintained.

Light-Emitting Decoration for Theatres

■ The concluding article in a series of three discussions of the equipment developed for "black light" effects in the theatre, and the proper methods of applying it. C. M. Cutler (left) and H. J. Chanon (right), the authors, are associated with the Nela Park engineering and research department of the General Electric Company.

OUT OF THE barrage of good ideas directed at the theatre operators looms an outstanding light—really invisible—yet producing visible effects. Light-emitting decorations produced by "black light" and fluorescent material offer the opportunity to create unusual effects in theatre interiors in a manner unknown to the public. Such mystery is always part of good showmanship and the unique and the refreshing decorative treatments have great publicity value.

Many new fluorescent materials are available which offer a broad range of possibilities. Paints and lacquers, transparent and opaque, papers, plastics and other media lend themselves to convenient application. The new mercury lamp sources for use with these materials insure suitable brightness for full appreciation of the effects intended by the decorator and designer.

Control of Brightness Pattern

The pattern employed in the decoration may be rendered in sharp or graded outline, depending on the material used and its application. Shading may also be produced as in other decorative techniques. While the beam or flood of black light may overlap the murals, for example, the light emission is confined to the surfaces on which the fluorescent material is applied because the other surfaces simply absorb the black light. In this respect the effect differs from a conventional painted panel illuminated by a flood or spot of visible light, unless the pattern of the light is made to fit the decoration exactly by means of lenses and masks. It is therefore a method of obtaining sharper cutoff in an easy manner on intricate designs.

This method makes possible the treatment of large areas with the sharp cutoff so long hoped for by some designers. In addition, numerous colors may be employed, and the brightness can be kept within accepted standards to provide a comfortable auditorium without the danger of spill light or distracting points of brightness. areas of low brightness are more desirable than small areas of higher brightness contrasted with dark backgrounds, as is so often found in many theatres today.

Comfortable Seeing

For maximum comfort during the picture presentation, it is a well established fact that the area around the screen, as well as side walls and ceiling, should be illuminated to a low order of brightness. The eyes, though focused on the screen, include these areas in their field of view. Then there is the resting process which goes on constantly where the eyes shift momentarily from the screen to these areas and back to the screen. The following analogy of the visual processes taking place while reading may help the reader to appreciate this point.

Figure 3.—Close-up of mural over exit door at front of house. Cool blue background with stars rendered in warm colors in same manner and with same materials as in side wall panels. Black light unit (by Continental Lithograph Corporation) in architectural element over door.

The viewing of a screen in a completely darkened house is not unlike that of reading a book in a dark room illuminated by the intense light of a flashlight coming over the shoulder and framed to strike only the printed page. One has only to try this experiment to appreciate how uncomfortable and fatiguing the seeing task becomes. It is far more comfortable to read the book in a room where the reading page still receives high intensity lighting from behind but where the areas surrounding the page are illuminated to an order of brightness lower than that of the page. In this way the degree of contrast between the page and the surroundings is reduced. So it should be in the theatre, where every other effort is made to insure comfort for the patron.

Light emitting murals on the proscenium wall can be utilized to relieve the high contrast formed by the screen and surrounding areas and at the same time produce a decorative effect. A simple arrangement of energizing fluorescent treated murals is shown in Figure 1. Here the space above the exit doors has been utilized to conceal 100-watt mercury lamps and suitable equipment. Such installation is easy in existing auditoriums, requiring very little construction work. An even larger proportion of the wall at the front of the house treated with fluorescence and keyed to the brightness of the screen, would produce more comfortable contrasts in the field of view. The space around screen "X" might be brought out in a low order of brightness with black light, without any extraneous light falling on the screen.

Where the proscenium wall does not lend itself so readily to placement of the energizing source below the mural, a simple installation of a downlight in the ceiling can be made. Such an installation is shown in Figure 2. This method can be used very effectively for energizing decorative panels located along the side walls. More uniform illumination of the panel is possible by this method as more latitude in dimension "A" (Figure 2) is possible. Table I indicates coverage from one unit for different dimensions and beam spreads of the equipment.

In an installation in Cleveland's Shore theatre (Figures 3 and 4) a combination of the methods suggested in Figures 1 and 2 was used. The large murals on the side walls are each illuminated by a single 100-watt mercury flood lamp. Figure 3 is a close-up of the mural on the proscenium wall.

Figure 4.—A striking effect simulating an outdoor scene is obtained in Fig. 4 due to appearance of depth imparted by the glowing background. These areas were treated in blue while the highlights on the gazelles are in warmer colors of amber and gold. The blue has a receding effect which brings out the designs in relief. Although the mural is flat, the overall effect is that of a dimensional object positioned in a niche. The application of opaque conti-Glo fluorescent enamel to the cloth murals brought about this change and now their beauty can be enjoyed during the entire performance. The decorative panels were originally untreated and enjoyed fully only when the houselights were on during intermissions.

AMAZING NEW WAY TO STEP UP PULLING POWER OF ATTRACTION LETTER PANELS!

FIGURE 1—This modern theatre front uses green MAZDA F lamps and regular filament lamps in the attraction letter panel and for variety uses gold MAZDA F lamps and filament lamps in the name sign.

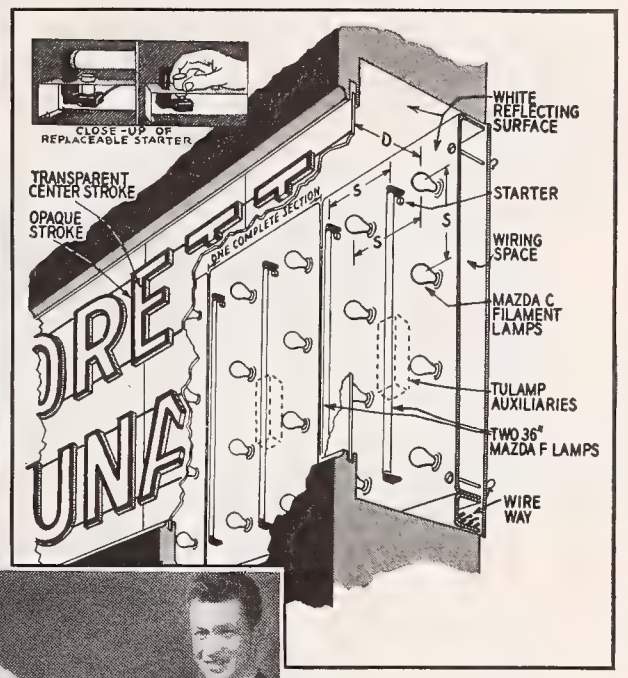

FIGURE 2 — This shows the MAZDA F lamps are positioned alternately between rows of 60-watt filament lamps. The entire panel may be constructed in sections and wired in the shop and assembled on the job.

NOVEL COMBINATION OF MAZDA F LAMPS AND FILAMENT LAMPS PRODUCES LIGHTING EFFECTS NEVER BEFORE PRACTICABLE

THEATRE owners and operators can now build "box office" with a new type of luminous sign with unusually high attraction value. This new method uses G-E MAZDA F (fluorescent) lamps to obtain high color values and MAZDA C (filament) lamps controlled to change in brightness.

For example, in the attraction letter panel in Figures 1 and 2, green MAZDA F lamps in combination with regular filament lamps are used with letters having transparent centers of red glass or plastic.

With only the green F lamps burning, the attraction letter panel has a luminous green background against which the letters with red glass centers appear as opaque silhouettes. (This is because the green F lamps have no red light available to be transmitted by the centers of the letters).

Then as the filament lamps (connected to a dimmer with automatic timing) are turned on, the transparent centers of the letters appear red. This is because filament lamps are high in red energy. At the same time, the so-called white light produced by the filament lamps dilutes the green produced by the fluorescent lamps, and the luminous background becomes practically white.

Other colors may also be used for variation, and lighting effects never before practicable can be obtained. For details write General Electric Company, Dept. 166-BT-I, Nela Park, Cleveland, Ohio.

In addition to the walls, the ceiling is a logical surface for fluorescent decorations (Figure 6). Certain treatments employing the cooler colors tend to give great apparent height to the auditorium:

(1) The warm colors have the opposite effect, or appear to advance.

(2) The combination of large areas in blues and green with small pattern in yellow, red and pink give apparent feeling of great depth or distance.

The energizing of the ceiling may be from units concealed in coves or other architectural feature, the same as indirect methods of providing visible illumination. The spilled black light usually present may be used to energize the decoration suggested above the unit. Brightness values may be higher on the ceiling surface than on front and side walls where it is out of the range of normal viewing.

Design and Installation

As mentioned in the previous articles of this series [July 27th issue], the brightness of fluorescent material depends upon several factors. First, the amount of effective energy (black light) striking the fluorescent material. Second, the efficiency of the material in converting the black light into visible light. And, third, the amount of masking light—that is, other visible illumination striking the fluorescent surface. The latter does not reduce the brightness, but may change the color and reduce the degree of contrast with untreated surfaces.

Mercury light sources, as already pointed out, are relatively good producers of the long wave length ultraviolet energy. The sharpest contrast and least "masking light" resulting from commercially available filters, may be had by using Corning No. 587 filter. The relative efficiencies of different materials for converting black light to visible vary over a considerable range. For a comparison of colors see the first article in this series [issue of June 1st].

In general, the brightness of the material is also affected by the angle at which the radiation strikes the surface. It is not practicable to control the black light so the same amount of it strikes the surface at the different angles and distances from the source. Where it is desired to obtain a surface of uniform brightness, the two above factors may be compensated for to a large extent by the amount of fluorescent material applied to the decoration, or by using colors with different degrees of efficiency of conversion. For example, with some colors the surfaces nearest the light source would need less material than those farther away. When several colors are employed, those with the lower efficiencies for converting black light to visible might be used on the areas nearest the light source.

Assuring Color Values

During the process of making a mural it is well to observe the colors and their relative effect under black light in surroundings as nearly similar as possible to the auditorium in which the decoration will be installed. This procedure is often helpful in determining satisfactory placement for the black light units, as well as to determine the amount of energy that will be required. Because of the above factors, which vary, and the different efficiencies of equipment, only a general range of energy can be suggested here. For the 100-watt type H-4 and the 250-watt type H-5 mercury sources equipped with No. 587 filters, the order of .5 to 1.0 watt per square foot gives a basis for computing the approximate number of units required.

Several positions for the lighting equipment are suggested in Figures 1, 2, 5 and 6. It is desirable to conceal the light sources from view as much as possible. Bright spots which are visible, and direct radiation from the light source, are objectionable.

Mercury lamps cannot be operated directly on regular alternating current lighting circuits and must be connected to individual transformers (cannot be used on d. c. circuits). These transformers may be located near the reflector containing the light source. The arc in the mercury lamp will be extinguished in the event of a current interruption, but will start automatically after a cooling period of several minutes.

The transformer may also be placed at circuit panels, in which case it is necessary to design for very little voltage drop in the wiring from the lamp socket to the transformer. For long runs No. 12 wire is desirable.

These columns are regular features of Better Theatres dealing with methods by which the theatre may be planned as efficiently as possible for the exhibition of motion pictures. Both Mr. Schlanger and Mr. Potwin are consultants to Better Theatres. All inquiries concerning planning should be addressed to Better Theatres Service Department.

DOORS AS SHIELDS

A COMMON error in motion picture theatre planning is found in the manner in which the entrance doors are located in reference to the seating area of the auditorium. In instances where there are three groups of doors, as well as where only two groups are used, each group of doors is often placed more or less directly behind the preceding group, thereby allowing a serious infiltration of daylight, street noises and objectionable drafts.

Such makeshift corrective items as curtains or glass walls are sometimes erected above the standee wall to overcome the objections which become apparent in some cases only after the building is completed.

The accompanying sketches show two examples of the placing of two groups of doors. The upper figure shows the usual error made in traffic planning; the lower plan shows one of the possible arrangements developed to overcome the discussed objectionable features. Many other variations of this scheme are possible, keeping in mind the necessity of the shield. Note that in the lower scheme no light can pass through the entrance doors into seated area.

Conditioning Halls For Motion Pictures

SEVERAL inquiries received on the subject of recreation halls may prove of special interest to exhibitors in small communities where such halls offer the only facilities available for the showing of motion pictures. In most cases, halls of this type are very poor acoustically.

Areas for acoustical treatment are usually limited, because in almost every case one-half to two-thirds of the side wall area is taken up by windows, and very little wall space is left for the application of absorbing materials. An analysis of the distribution of sound reflections from these surfaces frequently shows that the window areas themselves would be the best location for absorbing material.

The Exhibitor's Problem

The exhibitor, in using the hall and attempting to offer his patrons good sound, is often faced with two problems: (1) providing the acoustical treatment required at his own expense, and (2) using a type of treatment which is acceptable to the owner.

Obviously, due to the lack of fixed absorption, such as the upholstered seats and carpet used in the average theatre, it is expensive to treat acoustically a hall of this type so that the best possible conditions may be obtained.

How to Apply Drapes

From the standpoint of economy and flexibility, quite acceptable acoustical conditions can be obtained in a hall of this type through the use of draping material, provided it is strategically arranged so as to have a maximum effect in reducing the intensity of first reflections of sound. The draping material, of a fairly heavy weight, should be hung in folds and spaced from 4 to 6 inches out from the rear wall. The windows along the side walls sould be draped in a similar manner, the amount of draping material depending upon their area. This temporary form of treatment will at least reduce the intensity of echo effects and help to improve the intelligibility of sound in halls of this type, frequently offsetting the need for permanent treatment.—C. C. P.

PLACEMENT OF MATERIALS

AS EACH new theatre design is developed to the point where acoustical materials are to be specified, it is natural for the architect to think of acoustics in terms of the material which he has used successfully in an earlier project. This practice is not objectionable from the acoustical standpoint, provided the material actually fulfills the needs of each new theatre design or modernization for which the architect may be responsible.

Aside from the fact that the requirements for sound absorption vary with different theatres, there are two other factors which should also affect his decision.

Decoration and Economy

First, the use of one type of material obviously limits the choice of interior decorative treatment, often resulting in too much similarity between the interior designs of several different theatres.

Second, the question of economy in acoustical treatment is no doubt equal in importance, in the mind of the exhibitor, to the other considerations of theatre construction. Is it not axiomatic, therefore, that the requirements for acoustical treatment should be written into specifications in such a manner that they may be open to competitive bidding, and that possible variations in treatment may be studied from both the acoustical and architectural points of view?

An acoustical specification is most advantageous because it sets the limits of sound absorption of the acoustical treatment to be used in the theatre.

Basis of Specifications

Instead of referring to actual materials, the specifications set forth the requirements of the particular theatre as determined by the acoustical analysis, and outline the characteristics of the material which should be used for treatment in terms of absorption coefficients. This makes it possible for various acoustical material manufacturers or suppliers to bid on the project, preparing their proposals on the basis of particular types of materials which fulfill the absorption requirements of the specifications.

The writer has reviewed several acoustical specifications written by architects recently, which have specified an absorption coefficient at only one frequency. This is a dangerous practice. It will be discussed in the next issue.

SEATING the auditorium

". . . no theatre can be better than its seating."

Checking Your Seating Needs As to Plan, Chair and Floor

• Offering a checklist of the critical considerations in the provision of comfortable viewing conditions for guidance in planning and constructing the auditorium

By BEN SCHLANGER

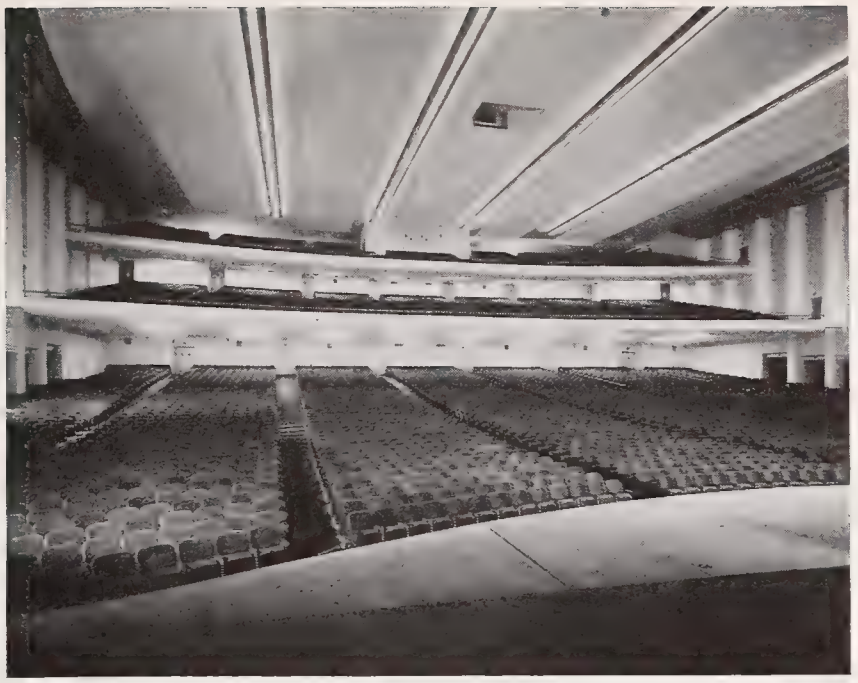
THE EXHIBITOR will have a better knowledge of seating if the various phases of the problem are clearly defined in his mind. In this way it will help him to realize the relative importance of the various factors, and that to give attention to one and not to others, will have a detrimental effect on the results obtainable. The following is a list of the various phases of the modern auditorium seating problem, with explanations:

The Seating Arrangement (in the horizontal plane)—

1. The shape of the entire seating plan
2. The location of the aisles
3. The number of rows in depth in relation to the size of the picture
4. Chair locations from which the picture will not appear distorted
5. Accessibility to means of ingress, egress and emergency exits
6. Direction in which each seat faces toward the picture

Unobstructed Vision of the Picture (sight lines)—

1. The slope of the floor
2. The stagger or non-stagger placing of the chairs
3. The placing of the picture (distance from the floor near the picture to the bottom of the picture)
4. Assurance of a constant dimension from the floor to the top of the seat cushion for all seats so that no person is seated lower than the design of the floor slope dictates (periodic checking of seat cushions to ascertain if the cushion construction has settled, thereby reducing the above dimension)



Chair Design and Construction—

1. Chair width, seat depth, height of back, height of arm rests above the seat cushion and height of seat cushion above the floor. (With the exception of the chair width, all of these dimensions are subject to proper standardization and most of the reliable seat manufacturers have established proper dimensions)
2. Proper angles for the chair back and the seat cushion (these angles will affect comfort in sitting posture—the support of the patron's back—different chair back angles being necessary in accordance with the position of the seat in relation to screen position.
3. Thickness of the chair back as it will affect the row spacing (allowance of extra row spacing where extra back thickness is used)
4. Allowance of passing space by the use of retracting seat mechanisms or by sufficient row spacing.
5. Chair construction as to durability and comfort (desirable resilience within a sufficiently rigid support and framework for the seat cushion—shaping is more important for the chair back than the need for resilience)
6. Covering materials for the seat cushion and the chair back (durability, texture pleasing to sit on or against, and provision for interchangeability of chair back coverings for seasonal or wear purposes)
7. Provisions for adaptability of fitting chair standards (supports) to varying floor pitches

Floor Construction—

1. Wood floors (need for rigid framework for flooring to avoid creaking noises; sufficient nailing of under and finish flooring boards, also to avoid creaking noises; also end nailing of floor strips for the same reason)
2. Concrete and cement floors (one inch cement finish when stone concrete is used as a floor slab, and two inch cement finish when cinder concrete is used as a slab—extra cement thickness necessary for holding chair shields and bolts, because cinder concrete breaks up with drilling.

   (All properly designed floor slopes show a change in the rate of the slope in every row for non-stagger seating and a change in the rate of slope in every other row in the case of staggered seating. The floor must always be finished so that all chair supports of a given row rest on a true level line for that entire row.)

The exhibitor, when contemplating the construction of a new theatre or the remodeling of an existing one, should use the above check list and information in considering his seating problem. His architect should assist him in all of the details involved under the first, second and fourth main headings above, and the considerations of the third division are best known to the engineering departments of the reliable seating manufacturers, or to the consultant in theatre design.

It is difficult to believe that in most instances some of the vital considerations of seating, if thought of at all, are not studied until the building is nearly complete and ready for seating. The complete seating problem should be well thought out in the very early stages of theatre planning. Seating is not just another part of the equipment problem, an item which can be purchased and installed at completion time; it is just as much a part of the original planning of the structure as the structural planning itself.

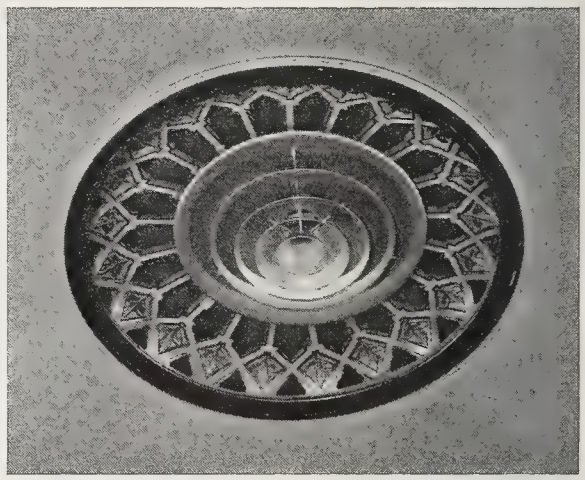
Lowering Air-Conditioning Costs

How problems of a large old-style theatre were economically met

By JOHN W. ELMENDORF

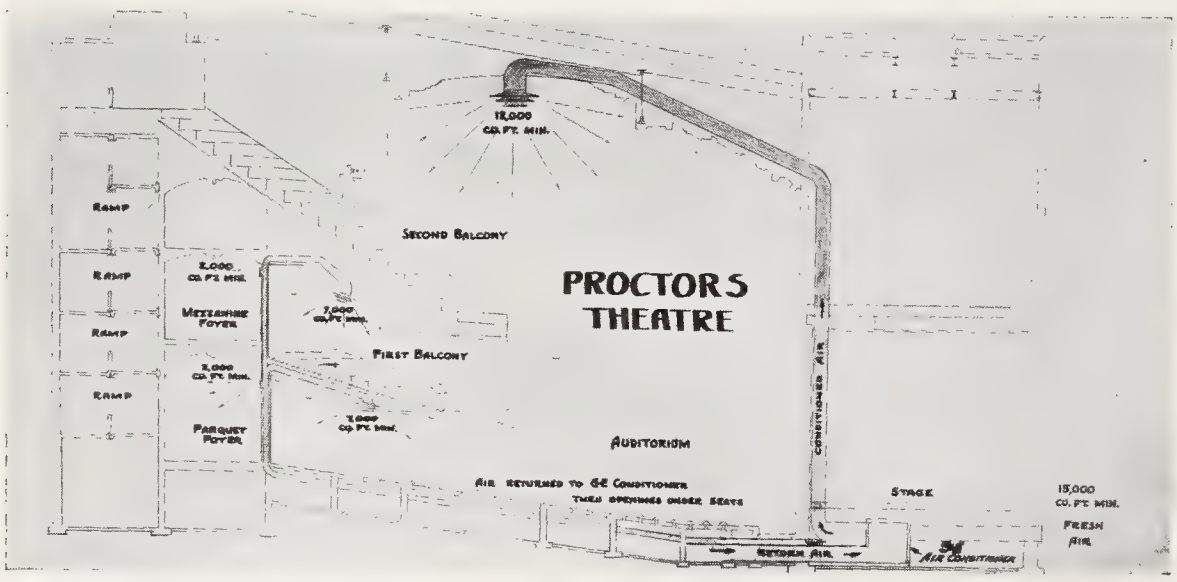
HOW ORDER was brought out of a maze of old ventilating ducts—some of which had never actually been used—and an economical system of air-conditioning installed in Proctor's theatre in Troy, N. Y., is an interesting demonstration of what can be accomplished by the application of modern methods of air-conditioning with today's equipment.



Although comfort air-conditioning cut its eye teeth in theatre applications, there are still a great many Class "A" houses that do not yet have comfortable, effective air-conditioning. The initial investment is almost invariably the primary obstacle to theatre owners. What the owners may not fully realize—and what Proctor's installation illustrates—is the fact that the cost of air-conditioning has been greatly reduced. Proctor's, for example, was air-conditioned for 37% less in 1940 than estimates called for only a few years ago! And because of certain economies in the use of electricity, the operating cost is but little more than the old ventilating system alone.

History of the Job

In January of this year a request was received from the Fast Theatres, Inc. to submit a quotation for air-conditioning the Proctor theatre. In March a contract to install the job was obtained. Although this theatre is probably larger than the average, it will serve as an example of the type and cost of modern air-conditioning plants now available.



In order to design a system, co-operation with the management and complete understanding as to expected results are essential. A situation unusually advantageous to mutual general planning existed because the theatre manager, Mr. Irving Liner, had previously managed several theatres in the metropolitan area where air-conditioning systems were installed, and consequently he was familiar with installation problems.

A set of the original building drawings was available, which saved us many hours of survey and layout work. The blueprints permitted accurate calculations of the volume of the theatre, the figuring of heat gains, and most valuable of all, they disclosed important data on the size and location of the existing ventilating duct work. The theatre is arranged with about 1,400 seats on the main floor, 300 on the mezzanine, and 600 on the balcony. The ceiling height under the mezzanine averages about 11 feet; under the balcony the ceiling has a very step pitch, with an average height of 12 feet. The balcony ceiling varies from 10 feet at the rear to about 50 feet in the front, and the over-all ceiling height in the center measures 87 feet.

Existing Ventilating System

Three blowers had been installed for heating and ventilating purposes. The first blower was enclosed in a penthouse on the side of the building, and served to remove smoke in the balcony. A 6-foot space between the mezzanine ceiling and the balcony was being used for an exhaust chamber. A second exhaust blower in the organ loft on the opposite side of the theatre was connected by a duct system to the rear of

The Art of Attracting More Business
(in one easy lesson)

...TURN TO

Whether your theatre is large or small, you may profit by reading this

If, like many other theatre owners, you are concerned with annoying drafts, hot or cold spots, "sour" air, this message is meant for you.

By and large, patrons no longer go to a theatre just because "there's a good picture playing." They naturally prefer theatres that not only give them good entertainment but good air conditioned comfort as well. Today, good air conditioning is of major importance in attracting business.

You can attract and hold more patrons if you turn to General Electric —the world's largest electrical manufacturer — for equipment to solve your air conditioning problems. G-E makes all the apparatus necessary for a complete system. And by using multiples of 20, 25, 30, 40, 50 or 60 hp. condensing units—depending upon the size of theatre —economical operation is obtained with varying loads.

Many theatre owners who have G-E equipment say the extra patronage it brings has helped pay for the investment in a much shorter time than they had thought possible.

the balcony. Evidently the purpose of this blower was also to exhaust air from the first floor in front of the orchestra pit, because there was a Gypsum block duct from the blower room to the basement, and a brick duct under the orchestra pit; however, this had been bricked off at two points and apparently had never been used.

The third blower was installed for the heating system and was located in the basement next to the boiler room. One hundred per cent fresh air was taken from an alley, heated, then delivered to two plenum chambers and several small outlets in the offices, lobby, rest rooms, etc. Both plenum chambers were equipped with mushroom caps; one chamber was located under the entire first floor, the other under the mezzanine floor. The duct work to the plenum chamber under the mezzanine was furred in between two pilasters on either side of the theatre. This duct was originally connected to a third plenum chamber between the mezzanine and the balcony. This extension was never used, the duct work having been cut off at the mezzanine floor to provide space for the exhaust system referred to above.

All in all, the old ventilating system was quite a tangle. For example, we never did quite figure out why air entered a grille on the floor of the first floor foyer, then came out of a grille on the second floor, when both outlets were on the same duct! At any rate, we decided to use all of the existing duct work, as well as the mushroom caps on the first floor and the chamber under the first floor, for our return system.

Location of Equipment

This fixed the location of the apparatus under the stage and presented another problem. The space was divided into a boiler room, blower room, switchboard room serving the theatre and a large office building, a storage room, a motor-generator room, an orchestra room, another blower room for the organ blower, and a passageway. In one corner of the storage room was a room containing the organ mechanism, connected to the organ by hundreds of wires which made moving it practically impossible.

We made a layout of the basement, exclusive of the first three rooms which could not be used, and cut templates of the equipment that we proposed to install. This layout was made on a large scale and revised and revised until finally the equipment, as laid out, fit in the basement perfectly. It was necessary to remove several partitions and use two blowers, two conditioners and two sets of filters in order to avoid excavating. The equipment had to be shipped knocked down and installed one piece at a time. Very little clearance was allowed, and it was fortunate that the apparatus could be installed as planned.

Cutting and Fitting

The cutting for the new duct work presented quite a problem; in fact, it was impossible to make a contract price for this work. Before the equipment could be moved into the basement two partitions had to be removed and a 3 x 7-foot opening made in another. The openings from the basement under the orchestra pit, into the plenum chamber under the main floor, also had to be cut before the equipment could be installed.

Second step was to install the cooling coil sections adjacent to the fans. Each of the two sections is made up of four GE direct expansion coils.

After the cutting was well started, the sheet metal men started work on the new ducts. They set up the two blowers and connected the outlets together into one duct, which was then run under the orchestra pit into the plenum chamber. Here it split and a 40-inch square duct was connected to the bottom of the old Gypsum block shaft. The top of the shaft was connected with another duct, which was installed on the scaffold above the ceiling and connected to a No. 95, Type B Anemostat. This duct handles 12,000 cubic feet of air per minute. The other delivery duct, handling 18,000 c.f.m., was connected to the heating ducts under the first floor. In the plenum chamber under the mezzanine, round ducts were connected from the heating duct to four Anemostats in the ceiling. The risers were extended into the exhaust chamber under the balcony, and four additional round pipes installed to Anemostats in this ceiling. These outlets are now used for heating as well as cooling.

The return air duct is just a short connection to the plenum chamber under the main floor. Fresh air is brought in from a court between the office building and the theatre. Fifty per cent of the air supplied to the theatre is fresh air.

Refrigeration Equipment

Two 60-horsepower General Electric compressors and their starting controls were installed in a room adjacent to the court. Because of water costs, evaporative condensers were used instead of water-cooled units. All of the heat removed from the theatre and incoming fresh air must be dissipated by the condensers. Figuring an average water consumption of 100 gallons per hour per compressor horsepower, the water consumption would be about 12,000 gallons per hour if water-cooled condensing units were used on this job. Evaporative condensers dissipate the heat by blowing air over the condenser, which is sprayed with water. This reduces the water consumption by 90%; therefore, about 10,800 gallons of water per hour are saved, less the power necessary to operate the blower. This more than justified the added cost.

Evaporative condensers were installed in the same court as the fresh air supply duct. It was necessary to install discharge ducts from both evaporative condensers up the side of the theatre so that the heat could be expelled above the roof, precluding the possibility of heat being taken back into the system by the fresh air connection.

The refrigeration tubing work between the various units was a simple job and incurred no difficulty. Wal-seal, high temperature sweat fittings were used, and a good, permanent job obtained.

In a court between the theatre and an adjoining office building, two General Electric evaporative condensers were installed to conserve water used by the air-conditioning systems.

More Economical Power

The electrical service for the switch board was not adequate for the new system. Two meters were being used, one for three-phase power, the other for lighting. By changing this service to a four-wire, 208-volt circuit, and installing one meter, a considerable saving in the previous power bills was effected.

The control system is extremely simple. The blowers are manually operated, being started by magnetic, across-the-line starters. Each starter is equipped with an auxiliary switch, and the control circuit for all the other apparatus is taken through both of these switches. The entire system can, therefore, be started and stopped at this point.

Two duct thermostats in the return duct from the theatre operate the balance of the equipment in response to a call for cooling. One thermostat is set two degrees lower than the other so that only one set of equipment will operate under average conditions. The second system operates only as, if, and when the load increases and the temperature rises higher than the settings on its thermostat. A time delay relay, set for 30 seconds, prevents the two compressors from starting at the same time. This, together with reduced voltage starters on the condensing units, prevents excessive starting currents, which would cause a noticeable drop in voltage.

Cost Factors

The use of evaporative condensers, the saving secured by having one electrical meter instead of two, and the use of two independent systems with two thermostats, resulted in an over-all operating expense only slightly above the previous operating costs of ventilation without air-condition-

This detailed description of the equipment and its installation is typical of the problems encountered in this type of work. The net capacity of the Proctor's theatre system is 110 tons of refrigeration, and it cost about $220 per ton. A few years ago when this theatre was surveyed for air-conditioning and a proposal was submitted by a leading manufacturer, the price was about $350 per ton.

Rapid strides in the manufacturing and design of apparatus, increased production, and the designs of systems by experienced engineers and contractors, have decreased cost of air-conditioning to this extent.

by coils located close to the main ventilating fan. The entrance lobby and foyer of this theatre were always uncomfortably cold. The problem involved getting steam supply and returns to the front of the theatre; they would have had to be put underground or overhead or run exposed in the theatre. If placed underground, they would have to run below the water line in the boiler, which meant installation of a condensation pump. The same applied if the lines were run overhead. The estimated cost for this work was $3,500.

The problem was solved with gas-fired duct type unit heaters at a cost of about $1,400. Slight changes in the supply duct system were made so that the entrance lobby and foyer were served from the same branch duct. Then two duct type unit heaters were installed as booster heaters in this new branch duct. A full-by-pass was made around these heaters so that the summer air distribution was not penalized by the resistance of the heaters. The manager discovered that with this installation, during the early spring and fall, on many days, the only heat required in the theatre could be provided by these unit heaters. The first year of operation showed a fuel saving of $125.

It is my opinion that the mechanisms of a theatre should be kept out of sight. The fewer fans, radiators, wires, etc., that can be seen by the public, the better. A theatre should have beauty—light, color, novel effects—and the appearance of any mechanical equipment usually detracts from appearance. Therefore, I recommend only the installation of exposed unit heaters when there is absolutely no other way to make the installation. This is not to be taken as a criticism of the design of the unit heaters manufactured today. It is just the nature of our business that makes me feel this way.

Providing for Exploitation Of Today's Interest in News

THESE ARE days when the newsreel is a feature on the program. For that matter, the whole trend of public interest in recent years has been toward the topical—that is to say, people have grown more interested in current affairs whether they are dealt with in the newspaper or real life. Fiction adopts these affairs for its themes. The magazine stalls have many times over today, more magazines devoted to the reporting and discussion of news than ever before. News is always merchandise nowadays; the reporting medium merely needs to exploit it.

Newsreel advertising at the Hollywood, East Orange, N. J.

The present situation in world political affairs of course intensifies this interest in the news. Americans are intimately concerned with what is happening in England, because they have become convinced that what goes on there directly affects them. They now appreciate the significance of Japan's ambitions in the Far East—for them. They now are curious about Latin America, because we have become linked with the rest of our hemisphere in critical matters of defense and commerce. Canada draws closer both as a possible military ally, therefore as a neighboring people. The material of all these interests are in the newsreels. That fact should be announced on the theatre's attraction boards.

The amount of space normally available for the attraction board advertising of the program does not, however, allow for adequate exploitation of the contents of the current newsreel. Such advertising needs more than the word Newsreel in the copy. To take advantage of the high interest in the news, motion picture reporting of it must be sold. The features—the "front page" stuff—in the current newsreel should be pointed out at the front of the theatre. Such screen material is merchandise today.

Auxiliary Display

A number of theatre managers have observed the trend and taken advantage of it. Among them are Dick Hill, division manager for Warner Theatres in Northern New Jersey, and Don Jacoks, zone manager. Their initial effort in this direction, illustrated in an accompanying photograph of the theatre front, was at the Hollywood in East Orange, N. J. The attraction boards already on the marquee did not accommodate any copy beyond that for the regular feature program and shorts. To provide advertising space for the screen news, they had another attraction board erected at the side of the entrance, above the display cases along the sidewalk. This equipment consists in Wagner multiple-line panel and letters in several sizes to allow for variation in emphasis, according to the contents of the specific newsreel showing. And above this attraction was placed a neon sign saying "News Flashes."

One of the best positions for an auxiliary attraction panel for newsreel advertising is above marquee.

Panel Above Marquee

Unless the marquee is to be built up to a height too great in many instances, the attraction panels on the fascias are needed to their full depth for feature and shorts copy—that is, if the copy is arranged for greatest legibility, variation and selling punch. Where space similar to that employed at the Hollywood is not available, that above the marquee often can be utilized, as illustrated in the accompanying drawing. Being visible up and down the street, such space, moreover, has certain advantages over the side position.

The location of course should provide sufficient space for a panel of sufficient height to accommodate the modern type multiple-line panels with at least two, preferably three sizes of letters, for "typographical" arrangement of copy, allowing variation in treatment with each issue.

Few are the theatres at which an attraction panel for newsreels (it would be available, on occasion, for some special attraction, such as a stage show) would form a physical encumbrance. And it is needed in most cases if today's intense interest in current events is to be taken advantage of by the motion picture theatre.

in other media of reporting. Once today's happenings were remote: people, towns, countries seemed more distant than they do today; news reporting was slow; contacts with things beyond one's own little world were few for the average person. The automobile, the radio, the airplane, the popular magazine, the big-circulation newspaper, the motion picture have changed all that.

These interests are not stimulated only by critical situations in international affairs. They are being continually cultivated commercially—by the radio, the magazines, the newspapers. News is a commodity—and the motion picture is a means of distributing it—not a static one like the picture magazines, but a dynamic one, with the action and sound of the actual event.

The publishing field has discerned the growth of this interest in the day's happenings, in the developments and dramas of

CARPET Selection & maintenance

Foyer and lounge floors, and stairways, are always conspicuous—keep them well groomed.

Economy in Carpet Installation and Care

● The steps in real carpet economy are selecting the right carpeting for your theatre, installing it properly, and keeping it clean. Here are some pointers on installation and maintenance

MUCH HAS been written on the selection of carpeting—on carpet patterns and color schemes adapted to specific interior designs of theatres; authoritative articles in this publication have been comprehensive from the decoration point of view.

This phase of the problem of getting the most out of the money expended for theatre carpeting is an extremely important one. Those of us who get around among theatres a good deal and who have an eye out for such things, are able to note many instances in which the carpeting has been carelessly selected, or chosen merely on some bargain basis. Carpeting is too important to the overall effect of the interior to be dealt with casually or cheaply. Genuine economy in the carpeting of theatres is attained by selecting a design which is exactly right, then installing and maintaining it properly. This discussion is concerned with these last two factors.

Only a few theatres have adequate carpet strip. Ten and fifteen years ago carpet laid on concrete floors was held in place by wood plugs on 4-, 6-, or 8-inch centers, into which the carpet tack was driven. As the wood plug dried out and shrank, it became loose in the hole and plug, tack, and carpet would pull out together. It may be surprising to you who are managing theatres in large metropolitan centers, but wood plugs are still being used!

Carpet, as any other floor covering, requires a lot of attention. During the life time of carpet there is probably four or five times its initial cost spent in maintaining it. Consequently, if something can be done to minimize or lessen this maintenance cost, it is very much worth while. Now, good carpet strips in a theatre cost real money. For instance, in a new theatre costing $45,000, the carpet stripping, when done properly, will cost from $350 to $400; the carpet for the same theatre would cost from $1,800 to $2,200.

The ratio of the cost of carpet stripping to the cost of the carpet itself, seems entirely out of proportion, and this is the relation that the owner sees at first glance. But there are other costs in connection with installation—for instance, the making up and laying will cost the theatre owner in the smaller town from 65c to $1 per running yard (¾ width); the carpet padding will cost from 60c to 90c a yard; the carpet layer will ask from 10c to 20c for drilling and plugging holes in the floor; so no matter which plan you follow, carpet properly laid in a theatre is going to cost from 35% to 45% of the initial cost of the carpet. For this sum the carpet can be installed properly, and it should be, so as to require the minimum amount of attention later.

Laying of Strips

If the architect does not detail the proper way to install carpet strips, but just shows a line on the drawings and letters in "carpet strip," mentioning the item under the carpentry section of the specifications, then you are going to get the cheapest thing the contractor can put in and still have it pass as a carpet strip. For instance, in one case like this I know of, a theatre owner got three-ply veneer nailed on top of the concrete floor with concrete nails!

Sometimes the carpet strips are an afterthought and when installed they go into the job as an extra. I don't need to go into detail on the hazards of extras on any job and the premium that the owner pays on all extras.

Other than by cleaning the carpet daily, the greatest savings in carpet maintenance can be made by proper installation in the first place. I have by a series of drawings tried to show the various types or kinds of carpet strips which when installed have proved very satisfactory.

The wood for carpet strips should be heart cypress, birch or maple. Pine is not satisfactory.

Figure 1—This shows the method of installing carpet where the carpet abuts a wall. Note that the strip is not locked or keyed into the concrete; it is secured to the surface of the concrete by screws and Rawl plugs. Such screws should be on not more than 18-inch centers. Also note that the carpet strip is installed before the base as the base is on top of the carpet strip. The base moulding is not installed until after the carpet is laid. You will have little trouble if the carpet in the foyer is installed in this way.

method of installing the carpet strip. This method can easily be adapted to new construction, while the method indicated in Figure 1 is especially for existing theatres. Note that the carpet strip is keyed into the concrete.

I call your attention to the rubber nosing on the nose of the step; this will add many months of wear to the carpet on the stairway. The carpet padding on steppings should not be continuous.

come out of the concrete, but looseness may cause wrinkling, especially in the aisles; therefore by taking up the carpet seam sufficiently to drive in some hard wood wedges about every 12 or 18 inches, this can be corrected. The process generally only has to be done once in the lifetime of the carpet strip. Please note that this tightening method can be applied to the stair strips illustrated in Figure 3.

Removing Stains

The rest of the job of carpet maintenance is to keep the carpet clean. I won't touch on vacuum cleaning here; I assume that even the smallest theatre has a vacuum cleaner and uses it every day. But in this day of popcorn, candy, soft drinks and ice cream in theatres, plus the old problem of chewing gum, the theatre manager has a more serious carpet maintenance problem on his hands.

Many cleaning fluids have a base of carbon tetrachloride, the fumes of which are obnoxious; it therefore should be used only where there is adequate ventilation. There are cleaners on the market variously called bubble cleaners or suds cleaners which in my opinion are excellent for theatre use. They seem to accomplish the required results without too much penetration of the carpet being attained by the cleaning agent.

When removing spots, always use a clean cloth and the minimum amount of cleaning agent. Start from the outside, an inch or two from the spot or stain, and work towards the center with slow circular motions. Here are some proved methods for various kinds of stains to which theatre carpeting is commonly subject.

Butter Stains from Popcorn

Use carbon tetrachloride, bubble or suds cleaner, gasoline without tetra-ethyl. Put small quantities around the spot and on the spot, rub from the outside in towards the center with a circular motion, then use a piece of clean blotting paper to blot up the cleaning agent and the grease which has been loosened from the carpet. Continue this until no grease shows on the blotting paper. If suds cleaner is used, try to use mostly the suds, and a minimum amount of the liquid.

Removing Candy

Use only hot water—sugar dissolves in warm or hot water. When the candy has been loosened from the carpet nap, remove it with a very dull knife or a piece of wood sharpened like a chisel. If any stains remain, let the spot dry, then remove the stains as outlined in the paragraph on butter.

Ice Cream Stains

Hot water or a suds cleaner can be used. Carbon tetrachloride will also do a good job in combination with water. Dampen the entire area with hot water, then rub from outside with circular motion toward the center with a clean rag soaked with carbon tetrachloride; do this while the area is still wet. When the area is thoroughly dry and any stains still remain, sponge the entire area with carbon tetrachloride.

Chewing Gum

Carbon tetrachloride in a small oil can is a handy means of removing chewing gum from carpeting. Squirt the fluid all around the gum spot, using enough to soak through the pile of the carpet under the gum, then with a sharpened stick, pick the gum loose from the carpet, and with a clean rag soaked with carbon tetrachloride, rub out any remaining stains.

Tar Tracked in on Patron's Shoes

Use carbon tetrachloride as outlined in paragraph above.

Road Oil Tracked In

Proceed with carbon tetrachloride as outlined for popcorn butter stains.

Carpet maintenance is a daily task—not weekly, not monthly — but every day. Merely vacuum cleaning the lanes of traffic over carpet is not enough. Spots, stains, chewing gum and candy should be removed immediately. They should not be left for merely monthly or bi-monthly going over.

To realize that the right carpet, intelligently selected and properly installed, represents a substantial investment and that it contributes vitally to the environmental character of the theatre, is to appreciate the necessity of giving these floor coverings conscientious and informed attention according to a regular system.

She Likes Single Bills—and Showbusiness

■ Elsewhere in this issue (page 11) is pictured the new Mayfair theatre in Ventura, Calif. It represents the growth of an interest in show business that was, it appears, thrust upon the woman who ordered it built. For Mrs. Jenne Dodge had, not so many years ago, given up motion picture exhibition for lemon growing.

"Ten years ago," she tells us, "my husband sold our Mission theatre in Ventura and bought a lemon ranch. The purchasers of the theatre, however, were unable to fulfill their obligations and we were forced to take it back. Well, my husband's hands were full at the ranch, so I volunteered to manage the theatre until another buyer came along. I had so much with it that I am still at it.

"The only distinguishing feature of my operation is that I have successfully single-billed against double bill competition for years. The single bill policy will be continued at the new Mayfair."

In responding to our request for a few words about herself, Mrs. Dodge modestly failed to mention that, in the course of building her business up to one warranting an establishment like the present Mayfair, she became a member of the board of directors of the Independent Theatre Owners of Southern California and Arizona.

L. R. TURNER of Associated Theatres of Independence, Mo., has opened. Associated Theatres operate the Plaza and Electric in Independence, and the Maywood in the inter-city district. The Granada has changed its policy from double features to single bills.

Box Office Tonic
FOR SMALL THEATRES

TO bring them in and keep them coming, your screen illumination must be modern. The new "One-Kilowatt" High Intensity Arcs offer a most effective box-office stimulant for all small theatres that do not now have High Intensity Projection.

Modern in every respect, the new "One-Kilowatt" High Intensity Arcs are designed especially for the small theatre. They meet the most exacting requirements for a screen light of the highest quality at a very reasonable installation and operating cost.

Snow white light of daylight quality — perfect for color features and greatly improves black and white projection.

A high level of screen illumination — (50% more than low intensity) — for comfortable vision and clear natural pictures. Also prevents groping and promotes safety by permitting more light for general illumination of the auditorium.

Quality projection pays dividends by increasing audience satisfaction. Satisfied patrons come again and again — and tell others.

THE SCREEN: Deterioration Costs Determining Its Size Handling Installation

By J. J. SEFING

HOW CAN THE theatre exhibitor best protect his investment in modern projectors, projection lamps, rectification equipment, sound systems, and lenses? The exhibitor wants a clear, steady, well lighted image, otherwise he would not purchase this equipment. Light is the very substance of the motion picture. And the screen is a medium of light.

J. J. SEFING

By keeping an old screen much money is wasted; by installing a new and efficient screen, the exhibitor is purchasing an insurance policy on his projection machinery, for a poor screen nullifies the performance of the rest of the equipment, no matter how good the latter may be.

A reasonable question to ask is, "What makes the difference between an old screen and a new one?" White seamed screens are made of fabric varying from special types to cheap grades; some are made of rubberized materials. The sound screens are perforated in various patterns with unavoidable mis-matching at the seams. These variations and seams become small valleys which fill with dirt and become worse as a screen ages. The main cause of screen deterioration is the sinking of the reflective coating into the cloth, which, after a few months, becomes roughened, causing the weave to show. The rapidity of deterioration depends on the thickness of the coating, the matching of the perforations, the quality of the cotton fibre base, and the amount of atmospheric dust regularly present.

It can be readily seen that an old screen will waste light and become a dirt trap. And there is very little to be done to prevent the deterioration, since it is due largely to just average theatre conditions and the natural "makeup" of the screen. The moisture in the air affects screens; it deposits itself on the rough cotton fibre around each perforated hole and "wicks" in along the threads. This action is the same as can be seen in a kerosene lamp as the kerosene runs up the lamp wick. When this happens in a screen, the swelling cotton threads push out the coating and it breaks down. This breaking down process roughens the surface, develops a dirt trap and as a result, sound transmission and light reflection noticeably drop.

The Cost of Old Screens

Another fair question is, "Just how much does an old screen waste?" According to several reliable surveys, screens three years old are not even 50% efficient, and of the 16,500 theatres operating in this country, perhaps as many as 9,000 are using screens in this age class. Surely, those thousands dirty, inefficient screens are wasting money for their owners.

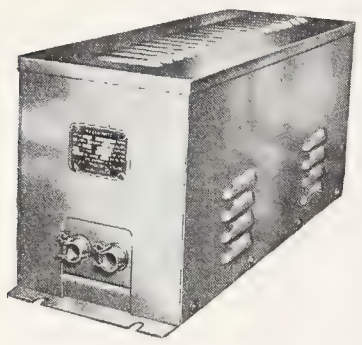
Let us figure, roughly, just how much those old screens do cost the theatre exhibitor per month and per year. A 50% efficient screen is wasting half the light projected upon it regardless of how good the projection is. The theatre operator is paying for the light every day he operates, in carbons, electric current and wear and tear on his equipment. If he is using 50 amperes at the arc, and operates 300 hours per month, the current cost, with no separate meter, will be about $31. The carbons will cost about $60, which makes the two items add up to about $91 per month. For a year, the cost would be around $1,092. Now, half of this money is wasted on the 50% efficient screen—an amount many times more than enough to pay for a new efficient screen. By installing a new screen, the light would be increased 80% and allow for reduction of current cost.

Another comparison of the cost of an old screen can be made in light terms. With a low-intensity arc, the lumen output is 1,300; the 27-volt, 40-ampere arc produces 2,000 lumens, the 50-ampere "suprex" carbon arc generates 2,900 lumens; and the 65-ampere "suprex" carbon arc, 3,600 lumens. Let's say the exhibitor changes from low-intensity to "suprex" carbon arc equipment to get 2,900 lumens of white light, instead of 1,300 lumens of yellow-tinged light. With a 50% efficient screen, the audience receives only 1,450 lumens, since the light that leaves the screen is what is seen, not what strikes its surface. In this case, the audience is unaware of the money spent in the projection room and the exhibitor is really no better off than when using a low-intensity arc.

Deciding Screen Size

Another good question is, "What screen size should be used?" It is surprising how little thought is given to the proper selection of the size of the screen; yet the size and type of screen is a vital factor in the effective re-creation of the art created at the cost of millions in Hollywood.

A good deal of thought and care should be given to determining screen size. It is true that each theatre has its own particular problem formed by sightlines, floor pitch, auditorium width and depth, stage height and width, and other factors. A small screen will be quickly noticed by patrons who, on the average, have a good sense of proportion and comparison. A theatre with a small screen will be classed out-of-date; a screen too large for the theatre is also a mistake. A screen should be installed of a size so that the picture is clearly seen from the last row of seats, with viewing comfort throughout most of the theatre, and without being too large for the front rows.



The average screen size in theatres today is, approximately, 20x15 feet, with the seeing distances up to 100 feet, and the bottom of the picture 4 feet, 9 inches above the auditorium floor at the front row. In determining the screen size, the visual angle should be taken into consideration. This is arrived at by drawing a line from each side of the screen to the eye of an imaginary observer. This forms a triangle with the apex at the observers' eyes, and the base at the screen. As you move away from the screen, the angle gets smaller; as you come closer, the angle increases. For the front seats, 60° provides the maximum viewing comfort, for the last row of seats, minimum visibility is at about 12°. This 60° visual angle is about the limit of viewing range for the average human eye, and the 12° visual angle is based upon the limit of visibility of 1/700th part of the film image width. A picture 20 feet wide at 95 feet will form a visual angle of slightly less than 12°, and a picture 14 feet wide at a distance of 12 feet, 6 inches, a maximum visual angle of 60°. As can be seen from the above, the average size of picture for the distances and angles mentioned would be about 18 feet wide.

Screen Elevation

Another important step that is often overlooked is the determination of proper height of the picture from the stage floor. Three points should be established in the auditorium floor, and at least three points in the balcony if there is one; one point should be at the rear row of seats, one at the center, and another at the front row. In scheming this out on paper, lines can be drawn from each point—that is, looking at a longitudinal section through the auditorium—to the top and bottom of the picture. The lines running to the bottom of the picture from the center and last rows of seats should clear by at least 12 inches the point at the front row which is 3 feet, 8 inches from the floor. This 3 feet, 8 inches is the average distance from the floor of the eyes of a patron sitting down. Lines can also be drawn from the projection room, intended as the projected light beam, with the lower line running to the bottom of the picture. This lower line should be at least 6 feet above the auditorium floor at the front of the stage.

Receiving and Installing

The installation of the screen should be done carefully and by experienced workers. In unpacking the crated screen a pinch bar should never be driven into the box to pry open the cover. This bar can be easily driven into the screen itself. Use a good claw hammer to loosen the boards, then pull out the nails with it, without breaking or splintering the boards—wood splinters can fall alongside the rolled screen and easily puncture it while handling. Carelessness during uncrating or lacing has ruined many screens and made necessary costly replacements. The screen when it laves the factory is usually in perfect condition and packed carefully.

For vertical lacing of the screen, always place the protruding end of the roller at the top of the screen frame. Through the small hole drilled in the roller, pass a light rope line to support the entire weight of the screen during installation. Do not support the weight of the screen on one or two gromnet holes, for the surface will crack and buckle. The rolled screen should be kept tight at all times, whether lacing in an upright position or horizontally. The heavy paper should be left on the screen until the lacing is finished, specially if lacing horizontally. This paper helps protect the surface from dust and dirt while lacing is going on.

Preparing for Installation

One thing that nearly always causes a "headache" is lack of provisions on the stage for fastening the screen frame.

This annoyance and delay can be easily avoided by having the carpenters on the job before completion of the theatre, fasten to the rear wall two upright 2x6-inch wood members 16 feet long, space equally on each side of the center line of the proscenium opening. These two members should be the same distance apart as the outside dimensions of the screen frame and should be lagged by lag-screws to the rear wall of the stage. When the screen installation men come on the job, they can nail light wood strips across these members to the screen frame to hold the screen in an upright position. These fasteners can be of angle iron to make a first-class job. Another good practice is to install, right at the beginning, a curtain track in front of the screen and hang it from the ceiling for the installation of a curtain to protect the screen. In any case, proper hangers should be provided when the theatre is being constructed, as it will cost more later to install them.

What Projectors Should Have Today

at the front of the mechanism. Self-locking focus adjustments, self-centering lens mounts, and in one case, a built-in changeover, are other modern additions making for smoother, better, surer operation.

Efficiency Factors

A number of improvements relate to facilitating the work of the projectionist, guarding him against errors made in the pressure of the performance, that might either impair the show, or damage the mechanism or the film. Threading in frame is assisted now by visible means, including threading and framing lights. An example of this is a second "framing aperture" (located in the gate above the projection aperture proper) in which the projectionist can observe whether or not he is in frame; another is a means to enable him to observe the film in the projector aperture itself.

Guides to correct loop size are increasingly common as integral parts of the mechanism.

The extensive modern facilities for insuring against possible negligence in lubrication have already been mentioned. Additionally, lubrication is now largely applied from the driving side, to protect the film, as far as possible, against oil stains which would appear in the picture as smudges and in the sound as noise. Moreover, projectors are better sealed against accidental penetration of lubrication to the operating side—for instance, by the fact that gears turn on shafts, instead of shafts in main frame bearings; or by the use of oil "splashers" which utilize the centrifugal principle to spatter oil away from the points where shafts penetrate to the operating side of the mechanism. The work of the projectionist in cleaning the mechanism of oil is thus greatly reduced, and clean film is assured.

THE S. O. S.-SUPERIOR

Threading is facilitated by greater finger room, simpler, easier arrangements along the film path, and provision of a threading light.

General cleanliness is promoted by the use of white-enamelled housing interior, which, in conjunction with the threading light, show up dirt and appeal to the pride of the projectionist to keep his mechanism clean and in good condition.

External streamlining and decoration, sometimes moderately elaborate and tied in with streamlining of the soundhead and magazines, also promote a feeling of pride in the man in charge of such machinery, and inculcate in him a desire to operate it and maintain it with the care good machines deserve.

Don't Fool Yourself

Your low intensity lamps may be as good as the day you bought them, BUT today they don't project as bright a picture because of the new density of black and white films. Nor is it possible to properly project colored films with them. Today it's necessary to double your light and have a snow-white light, in order to secure a desired screen brilliancy. But that's no problem with the new Strong Utility High Intensity Lamps, and it costs only 2c more per hour. An Independent Theatre Supply Dealer will arrange a demonstration in your theatre without obligation.

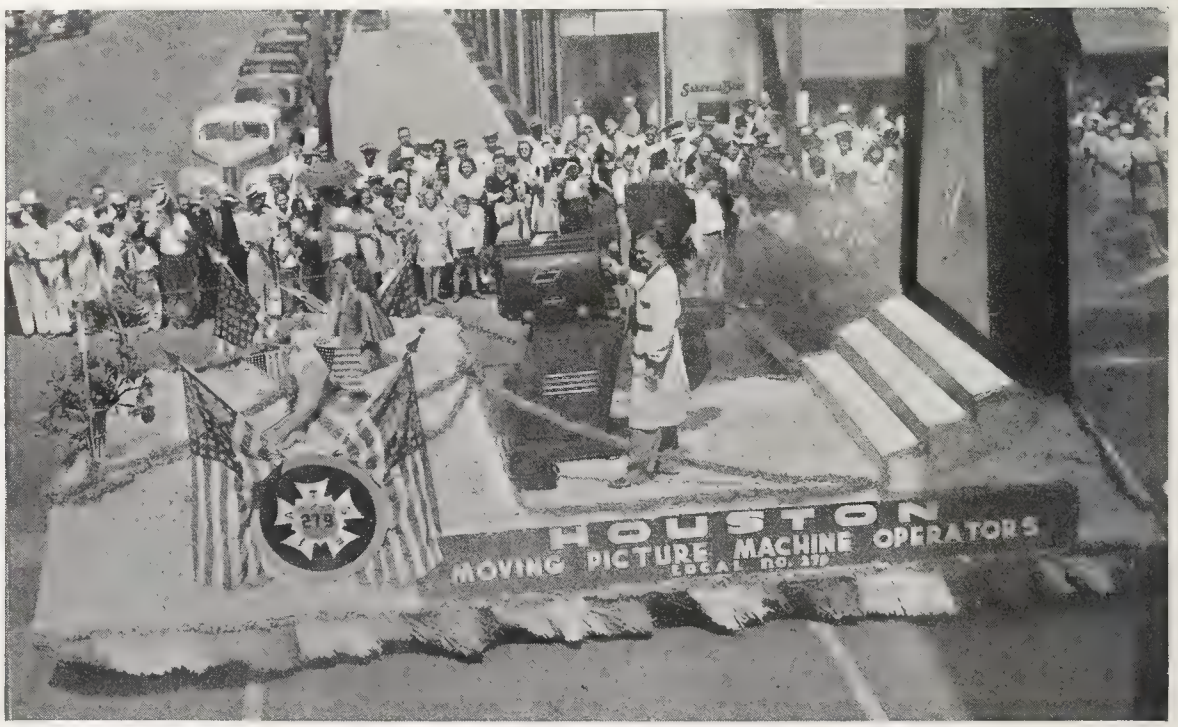
How Management Can Assist in Projection

THE RECORD shows that for 32 years I have pretty vociferously urged projection improvement, noting faults and demanding their eradication. This I have done so consistently that some folks have even regarded me as a nuisance. So be it. When it is considered how very much depends upon the maintenance of high projection standards, perhaps it may be admitted I had ample excuse for my ravings.

Remember how enormous is the investment in artistic talent; what a great aggregation of skill, how much scientific research covering many years of intensive effort, Hollywood embodies. Considering that all the results attained by Hollywood's concentration of capital and manpower must be turned into merchandise by the theatre, who will say that one is not justified in demanding maximum results in the projection of the image and the reproduction of sound?

As Terry Ramsaye has said in MOTION PICTURE HERALD, "The putting of a camel through a needle's eye was no considerable undertaking as compared with the performance of the motion picture projector, which puts maybe a billion and a half dollar's worth of entertainment in the United States each year through an aperture about the size of a postage stamp."



The motion picture theatre has, in the last analysis, only one thing to sell—the show on the screen. Comfortable seats and atmospheric conditions, pleasant surroundings, etc., are important to the extent that they contribute to the patron's sense of ease and luxury so that they are mentally, emotionally conditioned for complete enjoyment of the performance. The performance, however, is the ultimate product of the projection-sound machinery and of the skill and conscientiousness of the men who operate and maintain that machinery.

Management of course plays a big part in this scheme. Indeed, it must be management which, in the end, determines the results at the screen. Management decides when equipment is to be replaced, when it is to be repaired; and management either exacts or fails to exact of its projectionists the skill and care required to get from the equipment that it is capable of delivering.

There is also a type of manager who, while having very real ability, negates much of that ability by antagonizing most or all of the men under him by this manner. Instead of demanding and enforcing strict obedience to directions and orders and otherwise mixing with his employes on a friendly basis, he adopts an I-am-greater-than-thou attitude. He's the Boss, with a capital B. Such an attitude invariably breeds inefficiency. Under a manager of that type, men may appear obedient, but they most emphatically will not work with the same zest and painstaking effort that they will for a manager of the businesslike, yet congenial type.

The theatre manager of the best kind is one who issues intelligent orders and directions, demanding strict obedience to them, then having done so, is entirely friendly toward his staff.

The queer part is that the more able em-

Projection local's float in Labor Day parade. Shown being drawn down a Houston street is the contribution to that Texas metropolis' celebration in honor of its workers made by Local 279, IATSE & MPMO. Kenneth Christensen, projectionist at the Navaway, presided en route over the Brenkert projector loaned for the exhibit by the Southwestern Theatre Equipment Company Brenkert dealer. L. W. Merchant, projectionist at the Tower theatre, rigged up p. a. system for the float, and a Kate Smith "God Bless America" record came from its speakers throughout the procession. The float was designed by Frank Coogler, with assistance from E. J. Miller, IA International representative, and Clarence Nelson.

ployes are the ones who most resent the I-am-greater-than-thou attitude, thus to antagonize them is to waste one's advantages.

Still another factor is one cited by many projectionists in letters to me. In effect, all these chaps have pointed to a situation in which the head office of a large theatre circuit takes the position that projectionists should accept whatever is supplied them without question. The projectionists are not given any information whatsoever about the equipment, except such as has to do directly with its operation and perhaps how to make a few minor adjustments. As a matter of fact, it is not desired, in such cases, that the projectionist offer any suggestion looking to improvement or a change of any kind.

Every one of the letters came from a high class projectionist. One remarked, "Such procedure constitutes a definite discouragement for projectionists to study and fit themselves to handle equipment so that the best possible results may be obtained." Another said, "Such action is a direct discouragement to projectionists to fit themselves to handle the equipments expertly, and deliver high class results at the lowest possible expense." Still another commented, "Makes a man who has tried hard to excel, feel like telling them all to go plum straight to hell and earn his pay with the least possible effort."

When most of the servicing of equipment, particularly sound equipment, is done by a special circuit department, or by a service organization, such an attitude may be carried to such an extreme that the projectionist is made to feel that he is little more than a robot. It is a destructive attitude, since you cannot expect a man to feel fully responsible for results when he is made to feel like an outsider in his own projection room.

Proper Procedure In Case of Fire

A LETTER from the Tri-State Theatre Corporation brings this inquiry: "Recently a fire started at the aperture of one of our projectors. The projectionist immediately opened the magazine door, feeling that such action would prevent an explosion. We are of the opinion that this was altogether wrong.

"First we believe the fire might not have got past the rollers of the upper magazine fire traps. Second, in the event it did get past them, it might have died from lack of air had the magazine door remained closed.

"Will you kindly advise whether or not our contention is correct. In case of fire at the aperture, what should be done aside from switching off the current?"

The opinion of the management is wholly correct. It is quite true that the fire trap rollers might have prevented the fire from getting into the magazine; also it might not have done so. Having once entered the magazine, it would not die out from lack of air. Film will carbonize, emitting vast clouds of very black smoke, with little or no air.

It is extremely unlikely that the door would be blown open. If this did occur, it probably would mean that either the latch was a very poor one, or the magazine door itself fit so poorly that enough air was admitted to cause the film to burn rapidly, instead of carbonizing rather slowly.

The correct procedure of the projectionist in case fire gets into the magazine, is to drop, as quickly as possible, the port fire shutters, pull the projector main switch and notify the manager. Other action is governed by circumstances but never, under any circumstances should he open the door of either magazine of the projector.

Lens Color to Whiten The Projection Light?

FROM A projectionist in Illinois comes a letter containing a small fragment of a condenser lens of a kind that the older projectionists will well remember. After more or less extended periods of service, they gradually turned a sort of pink, due to some substance used in their manufacture. He wants to know whether or not such lenses can now be had, and goes on to say that he is using low-intensity light sources and that the color in the pink condenser lens serves to kill the amber and whiten the light, to the general improvement of his screen results.

The introduction of color into projection light to neutralize its inherent yellow characteristic would be to effect only a superficial appearance of improvement, rather than to provide the quality of light needed for a well-defined, full-toned image. What is needed is a snow-white light, which is now available at moderate cost.

Particularly now that color pictures form a part of many programs, color in projection light must be kept at a minimum. The proper projection of color productions (without such projection they lose fully half of their beauty) requires an average screen illumination of 10 foot-candles, which means approximately 15 foot-candles at the screen center.

With light sources now available, snow-white light can be produced in any theatre, provided always that an excessive screen size not be used. My advice to exhibitors with low-intensity lamps is to install one of the light sources providing white light, and to reduce the screen area, if necessary, until there is an average of 10 foot-candles of illumination. Your eyes will pop out in amazement the next time a color film is projected; also, you will be delighted to see the black-and-white image show up much better.

Incidentally, the projectionist who asks about the "pink" lenses, winds up his letter with:

"Don't let any one kid you that you did not bring a world of improvement in the condition of prints. In a short while after you 'went after' the issuing of poor prints that exchanges—at least some of them—were sending out, the print condition was improved fully 50%. It still is improving. All this occurred after one of your lecture tours, and BETTER THEATRES articles."

The "Tails-Out" Issue Gives Another Wag

A LETTER now has come from Paul Beck, projectionist of the Heart Theatre in Effingham, Ill., concerning "tails out." "Most projectionists in this section," he writes, "would prefer to receive film from the exchange with the tail end instead of the title out. We can then rewind it to our projection reels, inspecting it as we do so. The extra rewinding thus is avoided.

"Any unnecessary rewinding of course inflicts damage, especially when the shipping reels are more or less badly bent because of their flimsy construction and the abuse they receive in shipment. We also know that most theatres in smaller communities use the exchange reels for projection to avoid the expense of buying their own reels. I am writing you on behalf of many projectionists, as well as myself, asking that you advise as to a possible means of getting prints shipped to theatres tails-out."

This matter received a good deal of attention in these columns not so long ago. It seems that the tide was turned against it, after the trial we set in motion, by the kicks of those who objected to any rewinding at all!—of those preferring to yank the prints out of the shipping case, thread them in the projector, then hope there would be no break. If one happened, and there was a fire, that was just too bad.

Shipping by the exchange, of prints with tails-out, has very definite advantages, one of which is that it encourages use of proper reels in the projector room, and inspection before projection. But, also, all this is regarded as too much bother and expense by a great many projectionists and theatre operators.

Explaining Some Units Of Electricity and Light

JOHN C. BRANSCOME of Chillicothe, Mo., inquires: "Perhaps you will deplore my lack of knowledge, but will you please explain the following: Exactly what do the following terms mean: milliampere, microampere, megohm. Also we are told that in a series of two or more lamps, only voltage is consumed, whereas the amperage is the same all along the line. I cannot understand how voltage alone can produce light, make a motor run, etc. Please make these matters clear."

Milliampere is the term employed to express one-thousandth of an ampere; microampere equals one-millionth of an ampere; 1,000,000 ohms is expressed as one megohm.

The other matter puzzles many. Voltage is pressure, ampere quantity through which pressure works. In the cylinder of a steam engine is steam under pressure. The pressure applied to the piston head causes it to move; as it moves the steam expands and loses pressure.

It is exactly the same with voltage and amperage. Amperage supplies the medium through which voltage (pressure) works. At the end of the stroke of the piston head, all the steam that entered the cylinder under high pressure is exhausted, but at low pressure.

Some other terms have been bothering John L. Evans of Vancouver, B. C. He asks, "Will you kindly explain the exact difference between a foot-candle and a foot-lambert. The latter term is now frequently employed by engineers."

Foot-candle is the term employed to express strength or intensity of illumination. For example, if a 1-candle-power source of illumination be placed 1 foot from a surface, the light falling upon that surface has an intensity of 1-foot-candle.

If the surface reflected 100% of the light (which is never the case), the brightness of the reflected light would be correctly expressed as 1-foot-lambert.

This leads to the general rule that the brightness of any illuminated surface, expressed in foot-lamberts, is equal to the intensity of its illumination in foot-candles multiplied by its co-efficient of reflection, either as a fraction or a percentage.

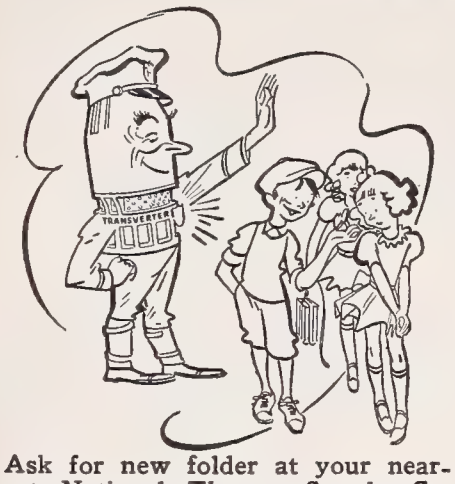
New Amplifiers Employing Inverse Feedback Principle



A NEW GROUP of theatre amplifiers have been added to the line of the S. O. S. Cinema Supply Corporation of New York. Designed by J. L. Rifkin, company engineer, they are said to be based on multi-stage inverse feedback principle depeloped by F. E. Terman and J. R. Day, professors, respectively, at Stanford and Columbia Universities. Full output in each capacity is attained, according to Mr. Rifkin, with distortion at an extremely low level.

The design includes built-in volume level meters, line voltage regulator, and monitor amplifier.

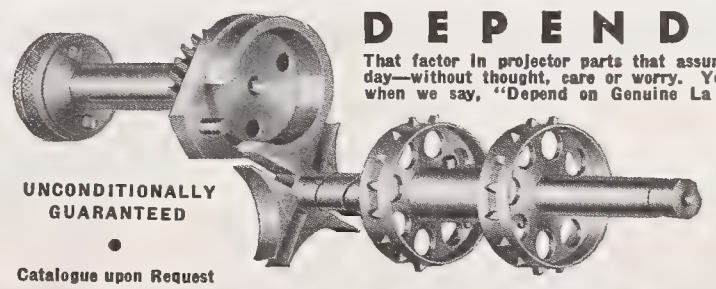
SURFACE TREATED LENSES

25% More Illumination WITH A B&L SUPER CINEPHOR f:2

NOW, with the Bausch & Lomb Super Cinephor f:2, light previously lost by lens surface reflections (4 to 6% at each air to glass surface) is converted into additional screen illumination. A new process of treating lens surfaces which reduces surface reflections to a minimum is responsible for the performance of this f:2 lens which now has the efficiency which heretofore would have been possible with an f:1.79 lens.



Greater contrast and crispness and more clearly defined shadow detail are evident. Color films are projected with greater purity and brilliance. For complete details, write to Bausch & Lomb Optical Company, 679 St. Paul Street, Rochester, N. Y.

Gentlemen:

I feel it is my duty to write to you and congratulate your company on the manufacturing and placing on the market the Simplex E-7 and Simplex Four Star Sound System. I have been wanting to write and tell you what I think of the above-mentioned equipment for some time, but I also wanted to wait and see how this equipment was going to hold up under actual running conditions.

Now, that the Fort Sackville Theatre here in this city has been open for almost two years, equipped with your Simplex E-7's and Type A Simplex Sound, I can tell you what I said when sent around to look over equipment before buying for this theatre. In my report to the management I said if they didn't buy Simplex E-7's they would be buying obsolete equipment. And after operating this equipment myself since this house opened almost two years ago, your equipment has backed up my assertion. Thanks to you.

In my seventeen (17) years' experience as a projectionist, I have never seen any equipment run so smoothly and project such a wonderful picture on the screen, which is just as if the picture was painted thereon. I know this is all due to the many wonderful improvements which you have built into the manufacturing of the E-7's.

This equipment and the splendid service and cooperation of the National Theatre Supply Company of Indianapolis makes one great set-up for any theatre and a projectionist's dream.

I might add also that this equipment is as near trouble-free as it is possible to build it and it is also very quiet in operation after being in service for almost two (2) years. There have been several theatre managers and projectionists from far and near in here to look over this equipment, and being completely sold on it myself, I could recommend it very highly to them all.

If I can be of any service to you in any way or recommend your equipment in the future, I shall be glad to do so.

Yours very truly,
Floyd W. Clark

It's a grand business we're in, Martin.

Your 25 years tell you this business was built by great pictures and showmanship.

So on your anniversary it must be gratifying to see that the same skill and courage that built the past will build an even greater future.

25TH Anniversary

THESE twenty-five years in motion picture journalism have been an experience of abundant satisfactions, not the least of which is to have witnessed in these latter years the realization of starry-eyed expectancies of those earlier years.

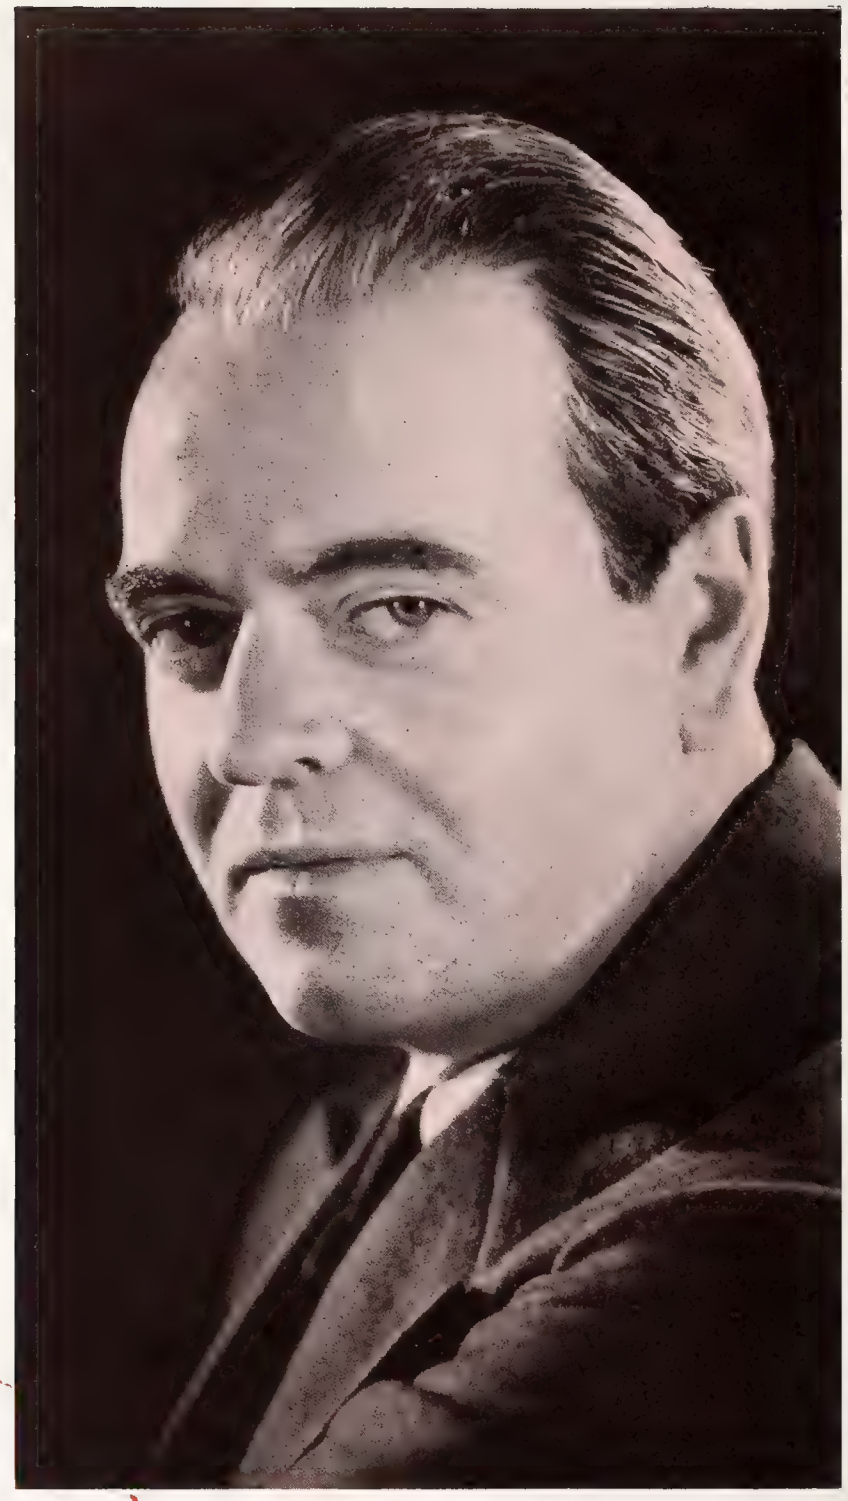
The motion picture, in a swifter moving world than ever before, has been a pace-maker.

In this quarter century it has become a force in the lives and living of a vast public—beyond anything ever previously approximated by any form of the dramatic art.

It has become to a myriad of millions the world over the pre-eminent source of refreshment, inspiration and knowledge.

It has taken honorable place amongst those social agencies which are the sinews of civilizaton.

It has made good the dreams of those who jealously fostered it in its days of obscure beginnings.



To have witnessed and chronicled and lived in the vibrant midst of this parade of progress and betterment of the one natively and genuinely American art has, indeed, been a privilege.

To my colleagues and co-workers who, through the years, have made possible what has been done, I take this occasion to convey appreciation and gratitude.

To the multitude of fellow workers in the art and industry of the motion picture, past and present, with whom I have crossed the years in friendly association—all of those whose encouragement and co-operation have so invaluably contributed to the progress of these years—I offer this word of salutation and good-will.

And now facing, as we of the industry do, a prospect both immediate and remote, in which there is so much to be done, this occasion shall not be passed without renewed emphasis that those policies and practices which, I may presume to say, have through the years been made abundantly clear to the world of the motion picture, shall continue steadfastly to be served.

MOTION PICTURE HERALD

Vol. 140, No. 13 — September 28, 1940

ABIDING POLICY

THROUGH these twenty-five years which we this week commemorate the motion picture, in the large, has had to create and evolve most of what it is and has. Even though the screen is but a newer way of saying what humanity has always had to say, its equipment represents surprisingly little acquisition from the older arts, in any particular from product to processes of conveyance.

Exception however is to be noted, appropriately now, that while the industry of the picture had to start at the beginning a quarter of a century ago in most of the processes by which it was to emerge from a tangled little business into a great industry, it did in that formative year of 1915 acquire a full flowered journalistic service, delivered in the person and the works of Mr. Martin Quigley with his Herald.

Not only is the institution of Quigley Publications the oldest surviving and actively functioning department of the motion picture industry, it is also the only institution of the screen which has required no basic, vital or radical adjustment of policy through these growing years.

Elsewhere in the pages of this issue, the publisher and editor-in-chief's expressions in print on problems and issues through those twenty-five years are presented in excerpts and abstracts. Examination of what he has had to say will reveal that substantially from the beginning those issues and problems which today concern the industry and its showmen have been dealt with by him in his Herald—many of them long enough ago that they might by now have been solved by operating leaderships willing that they should be solved.

THIS quality of anticipation, early to become important in the career of service of the publisher and the Herald, was arrived at by no processes of magic or special revelation. It is token rather that there are fundamentals in all human relations, including business, and that he came with them from the well matured field of journalism, long experienced in the service of the commonweal, long succeeding by understanding and attention. There was, and for twenty-five years has been, no necessity for pioneering in the business journalism of the motion picture. America's press and journalistic standards evolved with the whole of American industry and its heritages of what this land's founders brought with them of the riches of old world experience.

It has been observed that every new industry has evolved its own ethics. That is only another way of saying that young industries, like the human infant, have rather much to go through the phases of the race in its long development. That perhaps is why the motion picture is still talking trade practices which were at issue in 1915, in 1920, in 1925 and in 1930—always. But "always" in the world of the motion picture has so far not been very long, not so long in fact as the active lives of most of its masters.

That "always," from the waning of the Patents Company and its dictations, to Federal Trade Commission, to N.R.A. to "Consent Decree" days of now, has had before it a Martin Quigley contention that fair dealing between branches of the industry, between competitors, was the American way, and the way of the greater final profit for all concerned. It has been a contention that might does not make right, that fundamental rights are ever clear and apparent.

The world of today is a battlefield for the defense of that principle.

WHY NOT NOW?

FOR quite a spell now Mr. Walter Wanger has been urging pictures laden with message and social meaning.

Just now he is about on the road with his "Foreign Correspondent," finding new and local audiences for his outgiving, typically reported last week by Pittsburgh correspondence quoting:

"We must marshal our forces to accept our responsibility," Mr. Wanger declared, in advocating greater use of films as a medium of enlightenment on the American way of life. . . . motion pictures must educate the United States against dictatorial aggression and political oppression. . . ."

Mr. Wanger talks one kind of a picture and makes another.

This zealous producer can, at any time, marshal his forces, and march into production with what he thinks the situation requires.

Meanwhile, if the United States must be educated against dictatorial aggression and political oppression, who is going to educate the educator? Who are to be the authoritative dictators of the dictation against dictators?

The American way of teaching liberty has been to have it.

PLACE TO GO

APPROPRIATELY on this occasion marking the twenty-fifth year of a screen era, may we take cognizance here of the budding manifestations of a new one to come. The intensive experience of the public with the motion picture, and the growing dissemination of the technology, so that most any one with a notion can make, in some fashion, a picture, has more than just begun to widen the audience beyond the theatre of entertainment.

There is probably nothing to concern the theatre in that fact, save for the instances and periods in which amusement wares, made for the theatre screen escape into competitive exhibition. And that manifestation is likely to obtain only through a transition period.

Interesting expression from the leaders of the sixteen millimeter field is to be found in the pages of this issue of Motion Picture Herald, wherein they make their first public utterance on policy to the industry.

The future success of the amusement screen is likely to be governed by the same factors as gave it its success of the past, the same service to its patrons, supplying entertainment of a certain timeliness and calibre—and supplying to a gregarious people some habitual place to go—a theatre.

This Week in the News

A Substitute Decree

TERMING the pending consent decree proposals "unworkable, disastrous and offering no relief to exhibitors," the Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatre Owners this week, divulged an 11-point program which it had given to the Department of Justice as recommendations for a substitute agreement.

Objections to the agreement as now written were made on the grounds that selling pictures in blocks of five would disturb the constant flow of product necessary for the operation of theatres, and that the arbitration clause is "unfair and unworkable."

Proposals made by the organization include:

1. All contracts for features shall clearly identify pictures with the burden of proof as to whether a given picture was included in the contract resting upon the distributor.

2. The exhibitor shall have the right to cancel 20 per cent of pictures in a contract.

3. Distributors shall not have the right to designate preferred playing time.

4. The distributor shall not force, as a condition for entering into a contract with an exhibitor for features, the sale of westerns, re-issues, serials, foreign pictures, shorts, newsreels and trailers.

5. All clearance shall be computed from the opening date of first run in each exchange territory.

6. Unfair clearance shall be eliminated.

7. Where an exhibitor buys a selective contract, he shall be required to announce acceptance, or rejection of any picture in such contract within one week of receipt of notice of availability in order to establish definite availability for such pictures to subsequent runs.

8. New brief standard exhibition contract shall be prepared with the approval of the Department of Justice.

9. Commercialized previews of feature pictures shall be considered first run if such preview is presented to paying audience or announced to the public by any medium whatsoever.

10. The exhibitor shall have the privilege of cancelling, in addition to 20 per cent of unrestricted cancellation, any picture, exclusive of westerns and reissues, that do not have first run in a recognized first run theatre in his exchange center.

11. The exhibitor shall have the right, in addition, to exclude from any licensee agreement, any feature which may be locally offensive on moral, religious or racial grounds, provided he gives the distributor written notice, not later than 14 days after conclusion of its first exhibition in exchange territory.

12. There shall be no discrimination by distributors as to the right to buy priority of runs, clearance, price, etc., in favor of theatre in a given competitive area belonging to or affiliated with the distributor or producer, theatre circuit or booking combination, to the detriment of the theatre in the same competitive area not so affiliated.

Meanwhile the Government and the majors were "polishing up" the pending decree for legal language in New York. (See page 26.)

News on the Screen

A PROJECTOR for a continuous flow of "creeping film" to flash news bulletins on theatre screens, has been designed by Louis Gerard Pacent, of the Pacent Reproducer, which figured in early Warner-Vitaphone sound developments. Pacent Engineering Corporation, now engaged in fac-simile, television and radio-phonographic fields, has been working on the new mechanism with Theatre Communications, Inc., headed by Paul Davis, of Two Park Avenue, New York.

Theatre Communications is replacing its earlier experimentations with the Pacent development, Mr. Davis on Tuesday declaring that an hour-by-hour service of flash news for theatres will be offered exhibitors shortly, saying that Transradio Press, would be "specially edited for screen use."

Bell Telephone teletypewriters will print the flashes on a film developed for the purpose, in the laboratories of Miller-Bryant Pierce, of Aurora, Ill., then relayed to Transradio local pickup and branch press bureaus.

150% More Taxes

THE National Defense Act, enacted last July 1st, reducing the exemption from the Federal admission tax from 40 to 20 cents, resulted in an increase of more than 150 per cent in Treasury collections from that source in the first month of the new revenue act's operation, it was reported this week by the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

Tax collections in August, covering July admissions, totaled $4,407,097, compared with $1,513,468 in August, 1939, and indicated a possible annual revenue of some $55,000,000, as compared with slightly less than $22,000,000 collected in the 1940 fiscal year under the former 40-cent exemption.

As a result of the lowering of the exemption, collections for the first eight months of this year jumped to $17,225,032, compared with $12,202,945 secured in the corresponding period in 1939.

Lawrence In, Pettey Out

JOCK LAWRENCE, former publicity director and production executive for Samuel Goldwyn, was appointed last Saturday to the new office of assistant to the president, in charge of press relations, of the Association of Motion Picture Producers. Y. Frank Freeman, president of the AMPP, said Mr. Lawrence would work with the studio publicity directors' committee which is headed by Harry Brand, Twentieth Century-Fox.

On the day Mr. Lawrence was named, Tom Pettey, who resigned a somewhat similar publicity position to become Hollywood correspondent for the New York newspaper, PM, was released, the newspaper having closed its Hollywood bureau.

In New York, Tuesday, directors, sales managers and advertising heads of MPPDA member companies discussed ways and means of improving the industry's public relations (see page 100).

'The Great Dictator'

UNITED ARTISTS will sell Charles Chaplin's "The Great Dictator" on the same basis as MGM sold David Selznick's "Gone With the Wind"—on a rental basis of 70 per cent, and a guarantee of 10 per cent profit. First terms of this major are understood to have been closed with Loew's, Inc., for the Astor and Capitol simultaneous "world's premiere" October 15th runs on Broadway. Like "Wind," higher admissions will be demanded.

Broadway Wednesday night was talking about the reported offer made by "certain New York financial interests" to buy the film outright for $4,000,000 for "investment purposes."

United Artists is understood to have hopes for a $10,000,000 domestic gross, which is $2,000,000 higher than the world wide gross on Chaplin's "City Lights."

Mr. Chaplin's "Great Dictator" reputedly cost $2,200,000,

Plagiarism Clearance

A CENTRAL bureau to handle all film research on literary properties purchased and copyright infringement cases brought against the majors, has been proposed, again. A similar plan has been offered off and on for the last 12 years.

Emil K. Ellis, an attorney who has figured in a number of film industry cases and is now council to the New York City Council committee investigating the Municipal Civil Service Commission, is now sponsoring a plan to unify the major film companies' activities with respect to establishing originality of plots submitted and dealing with plagiarism suits.

Newsreel History

NEW YORK'S Museum of Modern Art Film Library gained its first comprehensive news film record of the historic years, 1910 to 1930, when, on Friday afternoon, in special ceremony, George J. Schaefer, president of RKO and chairman of the board of Pathe News, presented the latter's entire footage for the period to John Hay Whitney, president of the film library.

The library will have the Pathe collection on "semi-permanent loan"; the collection remains the physical property of Pathe, and the library has full non-commercial rights to it.

The collection includes all Pathe material: news issues, pictorial footage, and footage filmed by Pathe cameramen, but not used.

Pathe and library personnel this week started cataloguing it.

The collection, starting with Pathe's first issue in 1910, showing Rodman Law jumping with parachute from the Statue of Liberty, includes footage showing Hitler in 1924, after his unsuccessful "beer-hall putsch"; Mussolini in 1922, in his March on Rome; the Delhi Durbar of 1911, during which King George the Fifth was crowned Emperor of India; the first draft, in 1917; Lindbergh's flight to Paris, in 1927; the wreckage of the dirigible Shenandoah, and other historic items.

Each January, Pathe will give to the film library another year's footage; thus, next January, the library will receive Pathe's 1931 footage.

Disney, RKO Renew

A CONTRACT was signed Monday by Walt Disney Productions and RKO Radio extending the releasing arrangements on the color cartoons which have been handled by the distributor for four years. It also provides for the release of two cartoon features, "Bambi" and "The Reluctant Dragon."

Deals on previous Disney features, "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" and "Pinocchio," were made separately. The Disney organization will handle the roadshow engagements of its next feature, "Fantasia," which is scheduled to open, probably in November, at the Broadway theatre, New York.

As in former seasons, there will be 18 Disney shorts. Terms of the extended contract were not announced, but it was reported that the distributor's share of the gross would remain about the same, approximately 20 per cent, which is a low for distribution charges, resulting from Walt Disney's belief that his product has goodwill value.

$4,004,000 Gross

GROSSING an average of $77,000 per week during 1939-40, the New York Radio City Music Hall, under direction of W. G. Van Schmus, established a top record for its seven years ago, piling up a total of $4,004,000 for the Rockefeller operation.

During the year the product of five companies was played at the Music Hall. The pictures and runs for each company were: six Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer films, for 14 weeks; five United Artists, for 13 weeks; seven RKO Radio, for 11 weeks; four Columbia, for eight weeks and two Warner Brothers, for six weeks. MGM's share of the theatre's gross amounted to more than $300,000 during the year and United Artists got about $200,000, it is estimated.

A TENTATIVE agreement on all principal issues has been reached by representatives of major film companies, the Dramatists Guild and the League of New York Theatres on proposed changes in the Guild minimum basic agreement to permit purchase of film rights to stage plays prior to their production.

GORDON MILLS, of the Mills-James Roosevelt Novelty Company, claims that the company has obtained $3,000,000 worth of orders for their Panoram Movie Machines.

He said the first factory production order was for 5,000 machines, to be ready for shipment December 1st, and that Panoram's 1941 production would reach the 30,000 mark.

RCA special projectors, amplifiers and other mechanical features are to be used in the cabinet equipment, RCA also increasing recording facilities for the project, it was learned elsewhere.

James Roosevelt has been elected president of Soundies Distributing Corporation with Mills Novelty Company officials as other officers. The company will handle the coin film machines for which the eldest son of the President agrees to produce 60 per cent of the musical films required. Forty subjects will be ready by December 1st.

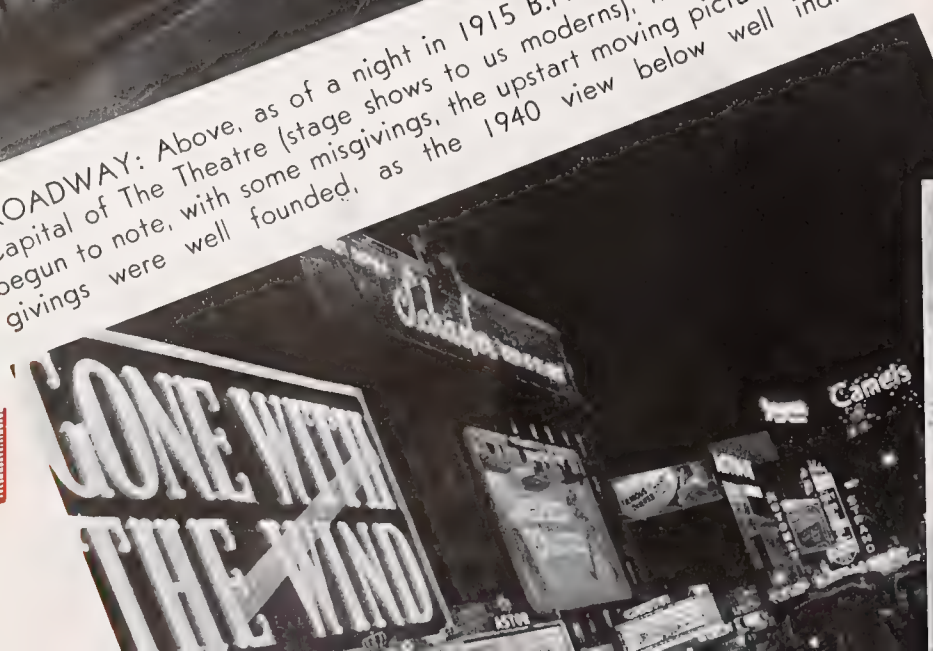
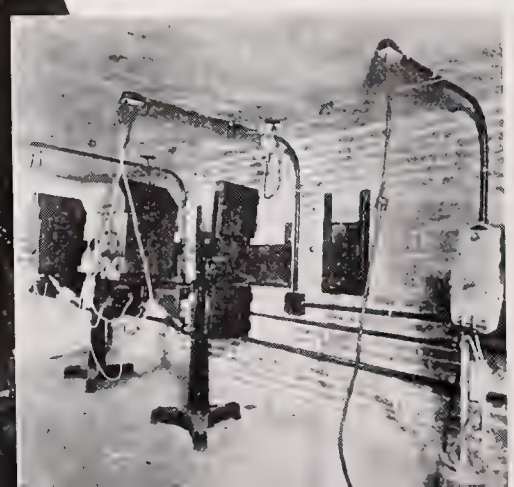
PRODUCTION: Time-dimmed, but authentic, is the reminiscence above of labors at the Jesse L. Lasky studio along about 1915. Cecil B. DeMille must have been around when this scene was being shot, for he was Mr. Lasky's production man. And at righ Mr. DeMille brings us up to date in production matters with an exhibit of artists and technicians at work on his new Paramount Technicolor production, "North West Mounted Police".



DISTRIBUTION: Within the limitations of the camera (which has only so much candor at best), the pictures below reflect the changes that the last quarter-century has wrought in film renting facilities. Contrasted are the General Film Company offices in Washington, D. C., as of 1915, and the new Warner exchange in the same city.



BROADWAY: Above, as of a night in 1915 B.N., meaning Before Neon. Capital of The Theatre (stage shows to us moderns), it had by then just begun to note, with some misgivings, the upstart moving picture. The misgivings were well founded, as the 1940 view below well indicates.

A Remembering of 1915

WITH SOME HIGHLIGHTS OF SOME OF THE YESTERDAYS SINCE

by TERRY RAMSAYE

MID-YEAR of 1915, and the American motion picture industry was as vigorously chaotic as an unweeded garden. It was going everywhere, but apparently nowhere in particular. The two cliches of the day were: "The movies are here to stay" and "The pictures are in their infancy."

Not many, however, were sufficiently sure of any contention to make it the basis of a policy of operation. It was the entertainment hungry public, eager for pastime at a price which supplied the soil and it was by the selections of survival that the structures of the coming industry were ordained.

Only one certain fact obtained. Steadily, swiftly, since the nickelodeon dawn of 1905 there had been ten years of rising profits, bringing competitions, consolidations, classifications into the Motion Picture Patents Company combine and affiliates, and the "independents" who disagreed with everyone and themselves.

Even so early, the screen's first flight of millionaires had matured a crop of comfortable retirements, including Frank Marion and Sam Long of Kalem, H. N. Marvin of Biograph, Jeremiah J. Kennedy of the Patents Company, General Film Company and Kinetograph, and Edwin Thanhouser, most independent.

In fact, Mr. Thanhouser was back again, recalled at great price to return to the operation of the Thanhouser studios, just forty-five minutes from Broadway up at New Rochelle. Mr. Thanhouser, unlike the many, knew when he had enough, and he had gone to a happy valley in the south of Germany to enjoy it. He charged the stockholders quite a fee for coming back to be president again. Now these many years retired all over again he sits in great comfort on an estate looking across Long Island Sound. The European scene being what it is, it would seem that Mr. Thanhouser must have found a horseshoe under that old barn up in New Rochelle.

The principal fact of ferment in this year of 1915 was that there was a tedious, fevered tangle in which the industry waited on product and product waited on the industry, nearly as difficult as that old initial poultry problem—did it start with an egg or a hen? The years before the pictures were waiting to escape vaudeville into a nickelodeon theatre of their own, and the theatre was waiting until the movies should be bigger than vaudeville to do it. It took quite a struggle. Again in 1915 the pictures, impelled by a budding public demand and seeking to break the shell of limitation, as a vaudeville turn, out into a real motion picture theatre, fit competitor for the Broadway stage and roadshow operahouse, were waiting for the theatre, while the theatre waited for pictures.

Distribution was the boss, and as always the standpat defender of the status quo. Distribution meant three "programs," regular services of pictures up to seven daily changes, of one and two reelers, each week, supplied chiefly by the General Film Company, "the trust," the Mutual Film Corporation, big independent, and Universal Film Manufacturing Company, and its allies, almost as big and even more erratically independent.

There were of course several reasons why distribution was boss, some of them intrinsic in the nature of the business as of then, but probably mostly because the strongest figure of the ending era was that iron handed, uncompromising, dominant Jeremiah J. Kennedy, who was first, last and forever a distributor because in that branch of the industry he was so importantly helping to create there could be some undisputed law, order and efficiency. Also Mr. Kennedy was importantly assisted and supported by H. H. Hodkinson, erstwhile exhibitor and exchangeman, selling out to General and joining it in executive capacity. This Mr. Hodkinson, still ably extant by the way, was a man of method, diagrams, rules and good order. He helped much to make Distribution important.

The picture business up to this point had been built, by reason of the forces indicated, around Distribution, but now in 1915 Production was importantly pushing in, breaking up the arrangements with a daring pressure for what were called "features," those being pictures of about five reels and sold somewhat on their individual merit as entertainment.

Only a short time before, about 1911, George Kleine, Chicago importer, supply dealer, contributor to the General program, had disturbed the scene by presenting "Quo Vadis," made in Italy, at a cost of $9,000, Mr. Kleine's money, for which he received the American rights. It was a long picture, far too big for the nickelodeons, and was played on a roadshow policy in legitimate theatres and opera houses to enough profit to make Mr. Kleine another fortune and pay for the Candler Theatre building in New York besides. The picture showed lions eating Christians and everybody was thrilled with it.

"Quo Vadis" sent European picture makers off on a career of long and spectacular pictures, including Harry Raver's distinguished importation entitled "Cabiria," also a roadshow. Pictures were getting far too big for their britches—which included both Distribution and Exhibition.

Pressures were developing, in terms of evolution and personages, in all directions.

Two especially serious facts were markedly manifest in this 1915; one of them was Adolph Zukor and the other was David Wark Griffith. Starting in 1912, about when he was not getting along so very pleasantly in the Marcus Loew organization, Mr. Zukor went off on his own and imported one of those features, the now classic "Queen Elizabeth," starring the then still immortal Sarah Bernhardt, with Lou Tellegen, by the way, in the role of Essex. This had led Mr. Zukor by 1915 to a fullblown feature policy and his Famous Players Film Company, with the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company, and assorted producers like Oliver Morosco and Hobart Bosworth, was collaborating in the Paramount program, dominated for a spell by that same orderly Mr. Hodkinson. So now in 1915 there was a "feature program" in the field—several of them in fact.

Now Mr. Griffith, who had been set afire with determination by the arrival of "Quo Vadis" and its sequelae, so much afire in fact that he had spent $50,000 making a four reeler entitled "Judith of Bethulia" for Biograph which didn't want a four reeler, had broken away, and taken up independent production with a script from Thomas Dixon's novel "The Clansman." This incidentally had been intended as a Mutual feature release, the president of Mutual being at the time Harry E. Aitken, who agreed with Mr. Griffith that pictures should be somewhat bigger and a great deal better.

Quite a time was had at Mutual about "The Clansman." The picture seemed to be running into money and some of it Mutual's money. The directors of that corporation, and it was exceedingly incorporated, found to their amazement and infinite disturbance that the concern was in for $25,000, or about a quarter interest in this mad Griffith venture. They argued with Mr. Aitken, who took his departure and a quarter interest in the picture, at his own expense. By mid-summer of 1915 it was more than apparent that Mr. Aitken had been stuck with a large slice of the biggest box office success that the United States had heard of since "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

Between Mr. Zukor's feature invasion, the same by now being built considerably more around Miss Mary Pickford than those other famous players he started with, and Mr. Aitken and Mr. Griffith's eruption with that "Clansman," by now "The Birth of a Nation," the industry was in a pretty pickle of portent, about equally in a dither about the revolution in product and new vistas of colossal importance, including revenue.

The Old Guard, grown rich on "program" declared that the industry was about to be destroyed by "the feature craze."

General Film was sticking by its policy, and dying of it.

Mutual and Universal were both, about equally, sticking by the old program policy and espousing the new feature idea, distinctly reminding any sober observer of the valiant horseman who leaped on his steed and galloped away in two directions. This annoyed Mr. Hodkinson, entertained Mr. Zukor.

Some of the entertaining confusion of the period was generated by Jack Cohn, film editor for "Imp," which was Carl Laemmle's officially entitled Independent Motion Picture Company and backbone of the Universal program. Mr. Cohn, laden with notions even at that early date, by devices only possible in that chaotic period, had made for Universal a feature entitled "Traffic in Souls," which seemed to have a bit to do with certain aspects of life in the Tenderloin district of New York. It was made, outside of working hours, at lunch time and such, at a cost, if they had kept books, of possibly $5,000. It made an amazing amount of profit, so Mr. Cohn kept his job—which may or may not have had a deal to do with coming events like C.B.C. and Columbia Pictures Corporation. Harry Cohn was, about then, contributing song hit shorts to the Universal program. The pictures invited the audience to make its own music.

Mr. Aitken with the nourishment, actual and spiritual, of "The Birth of a Nation" went immediately into a "bigger and better" campaign with what very shortly was announced as Triangle Pictures Corporation. It was apparently an isosceles triangle, only movieland didn't know it, with its three angles Mr. Griffith, Thomas H. Ince and Mack Sennett. That however was a geometric error, since with Mr. Aitken in the organization, it was unmistakably a quadrilateral parallelogram with him as organizer at the fourth corner.

It was from Mr. Aitken's corner that profound concepts and large ideas emanated, a lot of them in Saturday Evening Post advertising copy. His largest impress, and a real one, was a proclamation of $2.00 a seat movies, as a policy for a forward looking industry.

Triangle was in full flower by late summer of 1915, while "The Birth of a Nation" was still a running sensation. Triangle's show case was the Knickerbocker theatre in New York, with that rising young exhibitor Samuel L. Rothapfel in charge of presentation and Hugo Reisenfeld, former concert master of the Vienna opera house tending to the music. An early program was something with Douglas Fairbanks in it, probably "Don Quixote," with DeWolf Hopper and Fay Tincher, which today would be billed at advanced prices under the title of "Gone With the Windmills."

For a spell it looked as though the star of destiny hung over the Knickerbocker. Mr. Aitken and a Wall street syndicate had it in mind to take that troublesome and aggressive Zukor into camp and made him an offer of one (1) million dollars, cash in hand paid, for his control of Famous Players, etc. As Mr. Zukor remarked, he was "sitting with one ace." That ace was Mary Pickford. He decided to stay for the deal. That was Triangle's mistake. They should have raised another million, and it would have been cheap at that.

Mutual tried to do something about it. The largest, but not so conspicuous box office fact was Charles Chaplin, an English comedian who did not yet know that he was a philosopher burdened with social consciousness, but funny. Mutual knew about him, being the distributor of Keystone comedies made by Mr. Sennett, who had some social consciousness, and a hate of policemen himself.

Mutual had a new president, John Rudolph Freuler, of Milwaukee, exhibitor, exchangeman, and a participant in production in the current utterly terrific wave of serial pictures, including "The Million Dollar Mystery," a Thanhouser production, making an actual 700 per cent and the current "Diamond from the Sky," world's longest serial in thirty chapters and a sequel, directed by William Dean Tanner, alias Taylor—the same who was to be the victim of industry's best murder mystery, if you still think it is a mystery.

Mr. Freuler, taking over the presidency of the Mutual Film Corporation, rather at the instance of Kuhn, Loeb & Company—the first Wall streeters with courage enough to get into the movies since the Empire Trust Company had taken Biograph bonds in the days of the patents wars 'way back in 1905—had come upon a comeuppance. There was somewhere in the books of Mutual, Mutual of Virginia, Mutual of Tennessee, Mutual of Delaware, and sundry other states, including nineteen subsidiaries, a miscalculation, let us say maybe a bookkeeping error, running to about $900,000 of liabilities. For a corporation capitalized at $2,500,000, in a waning program market, and in distribution with a lot of branch managers in the exhibition business, this was an item.

It was about time for a miracle. Mr. Freuler reached for one with a program for several. First he wanted Mr. Chaplin, who was at the moment in the possession of Essanay, meaning George K. Spoor and G. M. Anderson of Chicago, contributors to the General program. Mr. Chaplin was working at the Essanay studios in Niles, California, with a high fence around him. One Jay Casey Cairns, able press agent, and may he rest in peace, established contact with Chaplin by riding into the studio done up as a cowboy. Mutual and Mr. Freuler got him for a series of 12 two reelers to be done in one year for a salary of $520,000 for the year and a bonus of $150,000 of which he gave his brother Sid $75,000 not to get the name of another Chaplin in the way for a while.

There were a lot of details. Among those who had considered was Famous Players, but Mr. Zukor refused to be interested. He did not think Mr. Chaplin was funny. Mr. Chaplin thought Mr. Zukor was very funny.

Meanwhile Mutual had some other notions. So did everybody else about then. After it had been verified that the Chaplin contract was actual, Miss Pickford appeared to be open to a deal. It was made, almost. Mistress Mary listened to an offer of $14,000 a week and accepted tentatively. D. W. Griffith also, since Triangle was proving to be no ball of fire, was open to a discussion. Miss Pickford had some further conversation with Mr. Zukor and decided to take $7,000 a week in cash and "a percentage." Meanwhile Mr. Griffith was off on a project called "Intolerance," which is another story for another day. Too bad for Mutual.

Uptown in the World Tower Building was the World Film Corporation, which advertised its product at times, but always that its vice president and general manager was Lewis J. Selznick.

It was into such a joyously diversified industry that Martin Quigley of Cleveland, Ohio, and Chicago, Illinois, and way stations, engaged in daily newspaper journalism, discovered what is now called the cinema, in Chicago, with the Randolph street mid-west first run showing of "The Birth of a Nation." Young Mr. Quigley had not been in Chicago long, but he had been around a bit from the Examiner to the Tribune to the Evening Post and was prepared to consider something more promising. After seeing "The Birth of a Nation" he went to the newsdealers to see what was to be found out about this exciting manifestation. He acquired copies of Motography, Moving Picture World and Motion Picture News. They left him feeling no better, but inspired. That is why he emerged in September of our year of 1915 with The Herald, Exhibitors' Herald, then. They were all the trade journals of moment then. He bought them by the copy 25 years ago, and by the title since, along with a sprinkling of others.

That was the scene then. The Germans were on their way to Paris. Belgium was bleeding. Assured Britain had not yet shared the lion with M-G-M. The studios of England and all the continent were dark and the screen world was America's.

The feature picture took the field, and corporations rose, flourished and variously sometimes fell. Adolph Zukor's plans and structures grew rapidly as he moved into domination of the Paramount program and became less the producer, more the general executive, with Jesse L. Lasky taking over more the production, his friend Cecil B. DeMille becoming the dominant creative director-general on the lot. Then Samuel Goldfish, friend and affiliate came to dissent and he moved away from Lasky into major production on his own and presently became Sam Goldwyn of that Goldwyn Pictures organization which, somewhat whimsically, produced first rank feature efforts and the while also distributed Henry Ford's screen weekly propaganda for roads and travel.

And, by the bye, it was in that Goldwyn organization that Howard Dietz began to become specially manifest. You'll be recalling that time he sent a story to London to have it come back to the American press, quoting George Bernard Shaw as saying: "Mr. Goldwyn you are so much the artist and I am so much the business man we can never agree." That crack keynoted a quip policy for Goldwyn publicity for many a year.

Then, too, Lewis J. Selznick, outgrowing his relation to World Film Corporation, decided to take a trip for his health and sailed for Havana with Mrs. Selznick. Coincidentally Clara Kimball Young, who was the World's screen mainstay, failed in health and had to sail, too. "L. J." had merely gone south with the chief box office asset. He presently turned up with a star series selling plan, headed by Clara Kimball Young product, and neatly arranged so that by an advance deposit system the exhibitors could finance the project to make the pictures they were to get. It worked.

It worked all too well to please Mr. Zukor who was selling an output which was not arranged to allow playing time for competitors.

Mr. Selznick got ill and took to bed at the Astor. Mr. Zukor called on him, and "L. J." said, "offered me $5,000 a week to go to China and stay there." What eventuated was Select Pictures, in which Mr. Selznick and Mr. Zukor were partners —on the old principle, "If you can't lick 'em join 'em." Select worked fine, until "L. J." felt it necessary to help his son Myron into production, with a big electric sign on Broadway. Mr. Zukor did not like the looks of the sign and the return of the Selznick name to Broadway—so the partnership was over.

Meanwhile remember, too, that these years at the immediate end of the Patents Company era saw the building of the William Fox dominion, evolved from nickelodeon exhibition into distribution and thence into production, under strenuous administrations, too, from Winfield Sheehan, and giving to history Theda Bara of the vampire classics.

In the main the next few years wrote a general success story, with incidental chapters of adventure. General Film, once master and in the millions, died one day lacking $30,000 for rent and payroll. Universal found its new policy and prospered with wide fluctuations and building strongly into foreign distribution. Mutual all but flickered out; what was left of it became a part of Film Booking Offices, that FBO through which Joseph P. Kennedy, long later, was to enter this business and which was to be an ancestor of today's RKO.

As the industry levelled off in those middle years the Famous-Players-Lasky-Paramount structure achieved possession of something like eighty-five per cent of box office talent. Costs, prices, pressures grew. An argument that started when Tom Tally, Los Angeles exhibitor, protested about rentals on Pickford productions, resulted, under certain ministrations from J. D. Williams, of Parkersburg, West Virginia, and Australia, in First National Exhibitors Circuit, exhibitor-producers taking over Miss Pickford, Mr. Chaplin and others.

Meanwhile in the East kindred pressures and issues sent Marcus Loew, exhibitor, into production, giving us Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

The uniform and general pursuit of all the traffic would bear from every factor of power in the industry had borne fruit in new alignments, so it was inevitable, too, that star power should take a hand. Escaping from First National, in quest of higher returns, more independence, Mary Pickford—Mr. Zukor's one time ace—with Charles Chaplin, D. W. Griffith and Douglas Fairbanks, brought into being United Artists Corporation, a bit changed in policy and structure today, but still United Artists.

The production, distribution, exhibition map grew complex, as producer-distributor circuits began abuilding.

Trade practices, buyer and seller relations, always at issue, became poignantly important, much debated and with many alignments and realignments of exhibitors. Court actions, and Federal trade practise conferences, began to invite the Government into the issues and the industry's affairs.

A-top all this beginning, timidly in 1925-26 came sound whispering revolution. Sound came where the technologies of the older screen and young radio met in the laboratories of the Telephone Company and of such concerns as General Electric and Westinghouse.

Against its will and from such external forces, the motion picture had sound forced upon it. Foremost in its espousal, and much to its profit, was Warner Brothers, pioneering with such items as "Don Juan" and "The Jazz Singer."

Meanwhile the financial adventures of the industry, in the various consequences of sound, brought in new names and forces. —Radio Corporation of America, and David Sarnoff, Electrical Research Products and John A. Otterson, Radio City and the Rockefellers, the Chase bank of New York, a rising Technicolor and the Whitneys.

Through these eventful years, Martin Quigley, with his Motion Picture Herald, and affiliated publications, has been in the journalistic service of the ever striving industry—contributing the while to policies and practices such developments as the Production Code, and enunciation of the entertainment only policy demanded by an American public.

Where America goes, the motion picture industry goes and, with and for it, also Motion Picture Herald.

14 EXHIBITOR MEETINGS ON DECREE, PRICES, OTHER PROBLEMS OF THE DAY

One Key Meeting Is Allied's, at Atlantic City; Product Symposium Starts; MPTOA Calls for Decree Finish-Fight

Indicative of the extent of present revolutions and evolutions of normal exhibition-distribution practice and procedure is the turmoil among virtually all of the important organizations of the country over matters presently involving operations, calling conferences, conventions and caucuses for concerted action on the consent decree, on admission price "juggling," on taxes and admission charges, on block booking and cancellation, on new product terms and other items.

Fourteen different groups have held meetings in recent days, or have called meetings to act on one or more of the problems of the day, adding to those which have in the past few weeks met similarly, as previously reported in these columns.

Allied of Jersey in Session

One of the large meetings of the week was the fall convention of Allied Theatres Owners of New Jersey, at the President Hotel, Atlantic City, opening Wednesday morning.

The organization, on Friday (27th) was to turn the event from regional attention to national with a testimonial banquet to Abram F. Myers, general counsel and chairman of the board of Allied States, at which large delegations from distribution and home offices in New York were to be on hand.

Friday afternoon, Mr. Myers made the principal address of the convention on "The War, the Consent Decree and the Exhibitors." See page 25.

On the convention speakers list were such names as William F. Rodgers, MGM general sales manager; H. M. Richey, assistant to Mr. Rodgers; William A. Scully, Universal vice-president and general sales manager; Lee Newbury, N. J. Allied president; Sidney E. Samuelson, representing Allied of Eastern Pennsylvania; Jack Kirsch, Allied of Illinois; M. A. Rosenberg, Allied of Western Pennsylvania; Frank Lydon, Independent Exhibitors, Boston; Pete Wood, I.T.O. of Ohio; Col. H. A. Cole, president of national Allied, and Abram F. Myers.

Manufacturers and distributors who will have exhibits at the trade show include: American Seating Co.; RCA Manufacturing Co., Kroehler Manufacturing Co., National Screen Service, National Theatre Supply Co., Heywood-Wakefield Seating Co., Dennis Games, C. Cretors & Co., Sanitary Automatic Candy Co., Penn State Supply Co., MGM and Universal.

"AID" of Allied on Product Symposium

First on the New Jersey Allied agenda was the expected first report from National Allied Information Department, which was formed several weeks ago, in Chicago, under Sidney E. Samuelson, to conduct an exchange of information on product terms, conditions and policies set down by distributors for 1940-41.

At Wednesday noon, Mr. Samuelson and other members of the AID committee, together with several Allied national board members, went into session in Mr. Samuelson's Philadelphia headquarters to prepare the first AID report. As of midweek, it had not been determined whether the report would be given to Allied members only, or to the trade at large. Mr. Samuelson admitted he was against general release, "but that is for the committee to decide," he said.

Meanwhile AID has already started to exchange among exhibitors first information about certain distributors, certain pictures.

The report said that United Artists owes "Foreign Correspondent" to exhibitor customers holding 1939-40 contracts, that it is not a 1940-41 release, AID claiming that this picture is committed under the description given by U.A. on "Personal History" or "Personal Life," and which was not delivered as such.

It is also claimed that Columbia's "Arizona," withheld, at the end, from 1939-40 release, properly belongs to exhibitors for that season.

Republic is questioned for withholding Gene Autry and Roy Rogers westerns from 1939-40 release, and Universal, for the similar handling of Deanna Durbin's "Spring Parade."

Also, AID reports, "there has been some complaint about Universal allocations," AID informing exhibitors that, "AID has been advised that the local Universal branch manager has definite and absolute authority wherever an improper allocation has been made to re-allocate the picture in a bracket suitable to the theatre in question, and to make whatever adjustments are necessary."

AID wants exhibitors who have shown MGM's "Boom Town" at increased prices, as suggested by Metro's William F. Rodgers, sales manager, to report to AID how they fared in comparison with other "good" attractions shown at regular prices.

"This is of vital importance to every exhibitor," said the AID report, "as there is a tendency on the part of distributors to force exhibitors to raise prices on some of the top pictures.

MPTOA Plans Fight to Finish on Block-of-Five

"A fight to the limit" by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America against the block-of-five clause of the pending Federal consent decree has been authorized unanimously by the executive committee of the organization through a poll of committee members which has just been completed by Edward L. Kuykendall, president.

What form the fight will take has not been decided yet, but Mr. Kuykendall plans to leave for Washington about October 1st to confer further with Department of Justice officials.

If these final conferences fail to result in a change in the five picture clause the MPTOA presumably will resort to litigation to oppose adoption of the decree.

Mr. Kuykendall said he had been advised on Monday that the Government has made no final decision on the decree.

Connecticut Allied Opposes Price Raise

Expressing themselves as unanimously opposed to raising admission prices on any selected feature, members of Allied Theatre Owners of Connecticut, Inc., have instructed executive secretary, Lawrence C. Caplan, to send copies of the following resolution to all distributors:

"At a meeting of the Allied Theatre Owners of Connecticut, Inc., held in New Haven September 10, 1940, the following resolution was unanimously adopted:

'Whereas, certain distributors have instituted the practise of requesting exhibitors to increase their admission prices on special features; and

Whereas, it is felt that such a procedure would tend to earmark the good pictures and make the other features seem inferior by comparison; and

Whereas, it is the experience of the great majority of the exhibitors that the greatest profits at the box office have resulted from lower admissions, rather than higher ones; and

Whereas, the patrons of the neighborhood theatres have been subjected to a recent increase in admission price by virtue of the Federal tax; and

Whereas, such a practise, if encouraged, would be indulged in by a majority of the distributors and on pictures of questionable quality;

Now therefore, be it resolved that the members of Allied Theatre Owners of Connecticut go on record as being unalterably opposed to increased admission prices on any selected feature.

And be it further resolved that a copy of said resolution be sent to all distributors and trade papers.'"

More Connecticut Reasons

Connecticut MPTO members discussed the various provisions of the consent decree in the Government anti-trust suit at a regular luncheon meeting in New Haven last Monday. Special consideration was given the block-of-five booking clause. Herman M. Levy, executive secretary, presented his analysis of the decree preceding the discussion. The secretary also presented his report of the recent fifth annual film golf tournament in this territory.

ITOA Members Vote Against Block-of-Five

A 100 per cent vote against the block-of-five provision of the proposed consent decree, has been registered in the Independent Theatre Owners Association national poll of exhibitors, according to the organization. Hundreds of ballots have been cast in the poll, results of which were to be sent to Thurman Arnold, assistant attorney general, this week, it was disclosed by Lionel Toll, of the ITOA, in New York, Monday.

Ballots have been received from the following 19 states: Missouri, New York, Kentucky, Nebraska, Indiana, North Carolina;

DISBANDING SHEA'S BUFFALO ORCHESTRA

The Shea's Buffalo theatre orchestra, Buffalo, which has been in existence for 14 years, is soon to be disbanded; its 21 members have received dismissal notices. The orchestra's career began in the era of silent films and served the Buffalo theatre at the peak of Publix revue presentations.

Vincent R. McFaul, general manager of the Shea circuit, was in New York last week discussing the fate of the orchestra with Paramount, a partner in the circuit.

Organized in 1926, the orchestra has been considered one of the finest theatre orchestras in the country. Its podium has been occupied by Ferde Grofe, Herbert Straub, John Ingram, Lou Breese, Charles Manning, Ray Sinatra, D'Artega and Joseph Cherniavsky.

FIVE-BLOCK CLAUSE CONDEMNED

Michigan, Florida, Kansas, Pennsylvania; Maryland, New Jersey, Illinois, Mississippi, Iowa, California, Oregon, Texas and Washington.

Every ballot, without exception, according to Mr. Toll, was opposed to the block-of-five proposal. Among those who sent in comments with their ballots, he said, a majority favored the present system of block booking, but with a 20 to 25 per cent cancellation clause.

In addition to individual ballots, several independent organizations voted as a unit against the plan.

Early returns from ballots sent out by Allied of New York indicate a similar trend.

Iowa, Nebraska Allied Also Oppose Block-of-Five

Approximately 100 theatre men attended a special meeting of the Allied Independent Theatre Owners of Iowa and Nebraska recently held at the Savery Hotel.

The meeting was called for the purpose of considering the proposed consent decree, portable circuit competition and free shows, film rental terms and the Allied Information Department.

A strong resolution and protest were adopted and filed with the attorney general against the five picture selling plan in the proposed consent decree. Theatre owners were cautioned against free shows and portable circuit competition and instructed to protect themselves by contract provisions. They were also advised to buy films only on terms they can afford to pay and full cooperation was pledged to aid.

Leo F. Wolcott, Eldora, Iowa, president of the association, presided at the meeting and G. Ralph Branton of Tri-States Theatre Corp., Clifford D. Niles, theatre operator of Anamosa, Iowa, Wesley Mansfield, Tama, Iowa, and Myron N. Blank, of Tri-States, were among the speakers.

Twin City Exhibitors Balk at '41 Contracts

A meeting of Twin City independent Allied exhibitors was held in Minneapolis to consider what the exhibitors have termed the unreasonable demands on the part of distributors for 1940-41 contracts.

Fred Storm, executive secretary, in a statement pointed out that Minnesota has received only a million dollars in defense contracts and that North and South Dakota have received no contracts or benefits from the Government's defense spending and said that it must be obvious that conditions in the northwest cannot be compared with either the west coast or eastern industrial areas.

Northwest Allied claims that as of September 15th, a tabulation and analysis of the Allied AID survey forms returned to the office show that 52 per cent of its members have not signed any 1940-41 contracts. Of the remaining 48 per cent, only one of these has four deals, six of them three deals, and the remainder one or two.

Wisconsin ITPA To Discuss Buying

The Independent Theatre Owners Protective Association of Wisconsin will meet in Milwaukee Wednesday and Thursday at which the principal discussion is expected to center around product buying. Hardly any contracts have been signed by independents in the group, it is said.

The subject is expected to be the topic of Sidney E. Samuelson's talk. Mr. Samuelson is business manager of Allied Independent Theatre Owners of Eastern Pennsylvania and chairman of national Allied's AID.

ARNOLD PRAISES STUDIO CONDITIONS

Edward Arnold, newly elected president of the Screen Actors Guild, hailed the amicable relations that exist between the motion picture producers and actors, upon his arrival in New York, this week, to appear in a Kate Smith broadcast over CBS, Friday night. Conditions at the studios, he added, are in the most satisfactory state they have been in for many years, and there is little liklihood of any disputes with producers this season.

Mr. Arnold advocated reducing by 25 per cent the number of extras on the Guild roster, pointing out that the elimination of 1,000 who earn less than $200 per year, would permit those regularly employed to earn more.

Illinois UTO Condemns Consent Decree "Abuses"

The United Theatre Owners of Illinois in a letter to Thurman W. Arnold, assistant Attorney General, opposes the terms of the pending consent decree, particularly the block-of-five clause and suggests that the Government can best help the exhibitor by insisting upon a 25 per cent cancellation privilege. The letter, dated September 12th and signed by Edward G. Zorn, president of the UTO, follows:

"Dear Mr. Arnold: The United Theatre Owners of Illinois strenuously object to the proposed provision in the consent decree limiting the sale of pictures to 'blocks of five.' This method of distributing film will confirm block-booking, not eradicate it. It will work untold hardships upon the small town exhibitor both in time and expense. His source of supply will be jeopardized, availability of pictures will be delayed and attractions will lose value as a consequence. Most of the exhibitors' time will be occupied with salesmen negotiating for product.

"The most glaring abuse in the mechanics of distribution is in the wrong allocation of pictures in price brackets by the distributor.

"If it is your intention to help the exhibitor, and I believe it is, the best way you can serve that purpose is by insisting upon a 25 per cent cancellation privilege with the exhibitors' right to a voice in the price brackets to which a given picture is designated. Pictures should be allocated as to price by mutual consent according to their merits.

"The block-of-five provision will harm, rather than help, the exhibitor and will serve no public purpose. We respectfully request that it will not be imposed upon the exhibitor."

Western Pennsylvania Allied Hits Block-of-Five

Allied Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Western Pennsylvania, Inc., at a special meeting at the Roosevelt Hotel in Pittsburgh last week unanimously voted against the sale of pictures in blocks of five, on the ground that it would adversely affect both distribution and exhibition.

The action was taken upon a motion by Bennett Amdur, who operates the Garden theatre, North Side, and is a director in the exhibitor organization. He said that block-of-five clause would carry no cancellation privilege, and that if an exhibitor has to pay the full price for every picture he buys, he would probably play them rather than pass them up entirely.

The organization contends that exhibitors in the territory want a 20 per cent cancellation privilege in their yearly contracts.

Memphis Meet October 13th

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Arkansas, Mississippi, and Tennessee will hold its annual convention on October 13th and 14th at the Hotel Gayoso, in Memphis. F. X. Williams, president, will preside.

Ohio ITO To Honor Smith

Featured by a testimonial banquet to its president, Martin Smith, the annual convention of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio will be held at the Deshler-Wallick Hotel, Columbus, October 30th and 31st. John D. Kalafat, of Cleveland, is chairman of the arrangements committee.

Missouri-Illinois Gathering

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners Association of Eastern Missouri and Illinois will meet, in annual convention, at the Coronado Hotel, St. Louis, next Monday. Fred Wehrenberg, of that city, is its head. Edward Kuykendall, president of the national MPTOA, will be chief speaker. Officers will be elected. Invited guests are Charles C. Pettijohn and David Palfreyman of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America.

Indiana Affair November 11th

The Associated Theatre Owners of Indiana will gather, in annual convention and trade show, November 11th and 12th at the Hotel Antlers, Indianapolis, with Marc Wolf as convention chairman.

Rodgers' ITO Talk

William F. Rodgers, general sales manager of MGM, was to address the Independent Theatre Owners Association of New York, at that organization's weekly luncheon, at the Hotel Astor, that city, on Wednesday. He was scheduled to lead a round table discussion of MGM sales policies.

Paramount Officials On Theatre Swing

Sam Dembow, Jr., and Leonard Goldenson, of the Paramount theatre circuit's home offices, left New York Friday, September 20th, to confer with partners and operators in Arizona, Utah, and the Pacific states.

They were expected to discuss budgets and policies for the coming season.

Leon Netter, Paramount theatres home office executive, was scheduled to visit Philadelphia late this week, presumably to discuss cooperative policies with the Warner circuit in that city. Charles Burton, theatre construction and maintenance executive, was to accompany Mr. Netter.

First Concord Theatre

A special town meeting at Concord, Mass., has approved a plan to re-zone five acres of land near Main Street, making possible the erection of Concord's first film house. Boston interests plan to petition selectman for approval of an 800-seat theatre with an adjacent parking lot for 300 cars.

ALLIED DOES NOT FAVOR THE DECREE, BUT WILL MAKE THE BEST OF IT

Myers Tells Jersey Convention Fair Settlement Would Be Welcomed but He Criticizes Decree Provisions; Say Evidence Assured Court Victory

Opposed but resigned is the present attitude of Allied States Association with respect to the consent decree as it was to be presented Friday by Abram F. Myers, general counsel, for the first time since the formulation of the document, several weeks ago. It was believed that the statement also reflected the attitude of other exhibition interests—looking unfavorably upon the present decree form, although citing Allied as prepared to make the best of it should it be adopted.

The occasion was the 21st annual convention of Allied Theatre Owners of New Jersey, at the President Hotel, Atlantic City, where Mr. Myers was to present not only National Allied's position on the consent decree, but to discuss also the effect of the war and American preparedness on exhibition and on exhibition's preparedness for "the shock" resulting from the war and from changes in distribution practice.

Opening Discussions

Lee Newbury, Allied of New Jersey president, called the convention to order at 2 p. m. Wednesday. The opening discussions covered a diversity of interest, including the blocks-of-five clause, nickel-in-slot movies, 16 mm. competition, poster rentals, duals and triples, juggling of admissions, defense taxes, radio's "Pot o' Gold" and buying problems.

Exhibitors Harry Loewenstein, Maury Miller, Morris Spewack and Jacob Unger were named to write resolutions.

George Gold, Dave Snaper, Ira Dollinger, Harry Hect, Helen Heldinger, Ralph Wilkins and Sidney Samuelson were appointed a nominating committee to designate new officers and directors.

In his previously prepared statement Mr. Myers said he was breaking a silence of nearly four months, a silence "self-imposed in the interest of a harmonious settlement of industry's problems. But the time has come," he added, "when silence is no longer golden, and speech can do no harm."

Speaking of the effects of the war on the industry, he said: "The loss of foreign revenue could only be balanced in three ways: by increased business in Latin America, by the practice of economy, and by increasing film rentals in the United States."

Mr. Myers commended some economies of home office executives, but added, "There is no indication, however, that this movement has extended to Hollywood."

After treating the war with its possible results of lower attendance and higher taxes, Mr. Myers turned to the proposed consent decree. He discussed the general theory of the consent decree, quoting at length from Thurman Arnold's new book, "The Bottlenecks of Business," as his authority.

Discussing in detail Allied's stand on the consent decree, he began by saying, "I have always hoped the case would be settled by the entry of a just and equitable consent decree." As reasons for this he cited the need for permanent action and the long delay in litigation.

NAZI RAID CLAIM REFUTED BY FILM

To disprove Nazi claims that London had been destroyed by air raids, films were flown to New Zealand and shown there 12 days later, according to advices reaching New York this week. Pictures showed conditions in London at the end of August.

Meanwhile, in Berlin motion pictures of the bombardment of London, shown in the Reich capital last week purported to show a dock area alleged to be three miles long blazing furiously. The film showed a rain of anti-aircraft shells exploding near the photographer's plane as he took pictures of the burning docks. The pictures are said to confirm German admissions of the increased power of British anti-aircraft guns.

"I am confident the evidence available . . . would bring victory to the Government, if not in Judge Goddard's Court, then in the Supreme Court," Mr. Myers said, "but attorneys general change—also they change their minds—and witnesses die off or are bought off. Besides, a trial means hopes long deferred and the need for relief is immediate and pressing.

"Hence I want to emphasize the fact that I am not opposed to the idea of a fair and just settlement. My criticisms are directed at the document and, to some extent, at the procedure. But if a fair settlement can be arrived at, I will welcome it," Mr. Myers said.

He continued, "All leaders and, I think, most of the rank and file are aware that Allied has kept in close touch with the Department of Justice throughout the negotiations; that is, as close as the Department would permit."

In March, he continued, the Department of Justice sent the organization a proposed settlement drafted by the Department of Commerce. After a poll of the board of directors Allied sent the Attorney General on March 26th a letter which "criticised in strongest terms the several provisions of the plan." As regards the proposal that pictures be sold in small blocks instead of large ones, the letter pointed out that the "poor pictures could still be forced with the good ones." Mr. Myers said the letter concluded, "The exhibitors greatly prefer buying once a year, or as infrequently as possible. They want selectivity, not retail selling."

The next step, according to Mr. Myers, was a visit Col. Cole and he made with Thurman Arnold who "declared flatly that no decree would be entered that was not approved by the independent exhibitors."

At the hearing on the Neely theatre divorcement bill held just before the New York trial opened Mr. Arnold made statements which "are utterly irreconcilable with the proposed decree," according to Mr. Myers.

Mr. Myers then explained that the assurances that the wishes of exhibitors would be heard were made by the Department of Justice but in the informal conferences with government attorneys they found they "were committed to the plan for selling in small groups."

The Allied Executive Committee, on account of the position of the Government attorneys then "decided to recede from its opposition" (to selling pictures in small groups) "provided certain enumerated conditions and safeguards were included in the decree. These conditions and safeguards if adopted, would have conferred on the exhibitors benefits that would have offset in a large measure the objections to the proposed selling plan."

However, after submitting proposed drafts to Mr. Myers for several weeks, in the latter part of July he was not advised of changes until he received on August 1st the "final draft." "It was at once apparent that something had gone wrong" for Allieds' "conditions and safeguards" had been left out, according to Mr. Myers. The executive committee of Allied was summoned and a protest was forwarded to Mr. Arnold. In part the letter said:

"The proposal, therefore, yields the independent exhibitors little or no benefit to offset the inconvenience and disadvantages of 5-group leasing." Col. Cole and Mr. Myers again called on the assistant attorney general who told them "they were premature in seeking to discuss the matter with him," because he had not received the proposed decree from his staff. Next Allied was invited to the meeting when exhibitor groups were heard on September 3rd, when the organization attacked the 5 block selling asserting that all groups which it was to benefit opposed it.

Negotiations Still Under Way

But at the hearing Mr. Arnold told an Allied representative "that his staff had done the best they could and that on the whole he thought it was a pretty good job." He claimed the department had not the time or money to investigate further exhibitor complaints. Mr. Myers concluded that section of his speech by saying, "The negotiations are still under way and we can still hope that at least some of our points will be met."

In the last section of his speech Mr. Myers warned exhibitors that "they may be saved or ruined by their produced deals" made in the next few years and that general costs would rise on account of the war. He added that the average exhibitor could not pay increased film rentals.

On the matter of taxes Mr. Myers said the exhibitor organizations must be on the job "and this does not mean blind opposition to every tax proposal. The American people are going to have to pay for the present extraordinary expenditures. Woe unto that industry that earns a reputation for tax dodging or unwillingness to bear its fair share of the burden."

Again on the consent decree Mr. Myers said it was possible that even at this time the Government might change its position, but in any case an effort was being made to make the best of the case no matter what happens. He pointed out that the arbitration clause was "by far the best method for adjusting clearance disputes that has ever been devised," and that the clause on some runs though containing "weasel words" might be of help.

On the five-block clause Mr. Myers said, "No one is advocating it, no one wants it, in its present form. But assuming that it will come to pass whether we want it or not nothing is to be gained by merely wringing our hands and crying about it. The intelligent thing is to put our heads together and figure out how to make the best of a bad bargain." This, he said, the executive committee is already working on.

The provision would be "bad news for the exhibitor who likes to spend his time at the broker's office instead of his theatre" but to the showmen who work at their business "the outlook may not be as dark as it has been painted," Mr. Myers said. Good pictures will be available no matter what happens, he said.

CONSENT DECREE DOWN TO SYNTAX NOW; EXHIBITORS STILL DISAGREE

Arbitration Provisions Reported Set as Lawyers Rush Phrasing to Fit Document for Court While Theatre Men Argue

At midweek, with but seven court days to go before the October 7th trial date deadline, the lawyers in New York for the Government, complainant, and the "Big Five" distributor defendants were still polishing the form of consent decree and arbitration structure which is to be presented to Attorney General Robert H. Jackson and Federal Judge Henry W. Goddard for their approval in settlement of the key New York anti-trust suit of the Department of Justice. The document was being transformed from the language of the layman, in which it was originally formulated, into the legal language of the courtroom.

Thurman Arnold, assistant attorney-general, apparently continues adamant to the countrywide protests of exhibitors of all classes against the decree's provisions for requiring feature sales in blocks of five, with advance trade showings, but, regardless, the owners are continuing their public attack, with large exhibition groups promising to resort to litigation to oppose adoption if their present protests fail to move the Department of Justice. (Exhibitor organization developments in the case appear on page 231.

Arbitration Agreement Reached

The decree itself was expected to be completed by mid-week, Government representatives in New York said Saturday in New York, indicating they would give their last touches to it early this week.

On Friday, September 20th, a meeting on arbitration was held in New York. Robert Sher, assistant attorney general, attended from Washington. It was learned that the meeting resulted in agreement on all but one or two provisions which were expected to be resolved. The document was then to be sent to the five majors concerned; and after that, to the American Arbitration Association, for approval.

A proposal for the appointment of arbitration coordinators from among experienced industry figures in all exchange centers, who would act as advisers to the arbitration boards to be set up under the proposed Federal consent decree has been abandoned. The proposal was first made in answer to widespread exhibitor criticism of the arbitration panels to be made up of men entirely without industry experience. It contemplated the appointment of the coordinators after consultation with regional exhibitor organizations and other trade groups in every city in which an arbitration board is to be established.

Asked for comment, majors' attorneys over the weekend predicted that Federal Judge Henry Warren Goddard, the trial judge, would undoubtedly approve the decree, even over the protests of exhibitors, who are not legally parties to the affair. They said successful intervention in affairs of equity have been sparse.

It was indicated that no major changes have been made in the decree, as made public several weeks ago. Changes have been made principally in language, it was declared.

Max A. Cohen, New York circuit owner and head of the New York Allied, affiliated with the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, declared on the weekend that he would make a statement at mid-week on his opposition to the blocks-of-five provision of the consent decree, to which he and other exhibitor leaders are opposed, and, also, possibly, on the results of his postcard poll of America's exhibitors, which he hopes to use as a basis for legal intervention at the October 7th Federal hearing on the decree, and which he began two weeks ago.

Mr. Cohen added that, if his move was defeated, he might carry it to the United States Supreme Court. He has already been warned by observers that an intervention by exhibitors, not parties to the suit, might have no standing in the Federal Court hearing but has asserted his intention of going ahead.

The Independent Theatre Owners Association of New York City, under the guidance of Harry Brandt, its president, and also a theatre circuit owner, and through its house organ, The Independent, is also polling exhibitors on their opinion of the selling provision of the consent decree. This week, it was reported that the results were overwhelmingly against the decree's provision for selling in blocks of five.

Copies of the arbitration section of the decree, now virtually completed, were sent on Monday to the Department of Justice in Washington and to the majors, it was learned. The legal advisory committee of the American Arbitration Association was also reported studying them; and views of all three parties were expected to be conveyed to the arbitration committee before the week's end.

Subject to Changes

Some of the arbitration provisions, subject to the changes which may occur before the hearing are:

It is said that pay is provided for arbitrators though this is not customary for appointees of the American Arbitration Association. It is said, too, that each local board will have a clerk to receive applications for hearings on any complaint to be arbitrated, that, when a complaint has been filed, all parties are to be notified simultaneously; and that, if these accept arbitration, the names of the arbitrators be submitted to them. It is asserted that parties will have choices of arbitrators, the whole machinery assuring that the single arbitrator most acceptable to all, be chosen.

The arbitrators are to submit their findings in writing, within 30 days after hearing a case. Because the arbitration provisions are regarded as accessory to the decree, contempt provisions can be attempted against a distributor party to a complaint who fails to observe the decision of an arbitrator.

An appeal board of three arbitrators will sit in New York. Unless charges of irregularities, bias, or other items, are involved, no appeal can be taken from their decision. Rules for the appeals board conduct have not yet been set. It is presumed that these will await the formation of such a board.

Only minor points, such as the keeping of minutes, are said to remain to be settled. It was argued, last week, that the keeping of minutes would increase the cost of the hearings, and, therefore, should not be compelled.

The committee in charge of arbitration this week was understood to be surveying costs of the arbitration setup, and to be seeking suitable arbitrators.

The agreement upon a single neutral arbitrator in local situations was regarded this week as somewhat of a victory for simplification, ending the numerous arguments over the composition of a local board.

KAIMANN SETTLES WARNER DISPUTE

Settlement of the availability dispute in St. Louis between Warners and Clarence Kaimann, independent operator, was settled last week, Mr. Kaimann announced on Monday. Mr. Kaimann had protested against the company making available its product to a rival neighborhood house, the Rio, ahead of his North St. Louis, allegedly in violation of a contract. Mr. Kaimann charged the Rio had abandoned a de luxe, seven day run policy, reducing itself to the classification of his theatre and that, therefore, it was not entitled to films ahead of his theatre.

U. S. To Revise Balaban Decree

When the consent decree in the New York Government anti-trust suit becomes effective, the consent decree covering the Balaban & Katz circuit operations in Chicago will be a matter for consideration.

Paramount, it was noted, had pointed out that the two decrees might conflict. The Government spokesmen said the contention that the company might be held in contempt for one or the other decree "had merit," and that the Chicago ruling would certainly be examined.

However, it was also added that whatever changes are made would probably have no effect on the charges to be heard in court this fall, that the 1932 Chicago consent decree had been violated.

Paramount has filed exceptions to these charges. They are contained in a report of a special master, made last year. The master's report and the Paramount exceptions may be heard in Chicago Federal Court next month.

Griffith Answers Due Next Tuesday

The Griffith Amusement Company of Oklahoma and the majors have until next Tuesday to answer interrogatories of the Government, in the latter's anti-trust suit against them in Oklahoma City Federal Court. The original deadline for such answers was September 15th.

Also in Oklahoma City Federal Court, the Griffith company and affiliates, facing a long-drawn anti-trust suit by an independent theatre operator, have filed objections to 335 of the 342 interrogatories filed by the plaintiff, A. B. Momand, of Shawnee, same state, in his $4,500,000 claim. The affiliated companies are the Consolidated Amusement Company and Consolidated Theatres, Inc.

Columbia Gains Point In Schine Buffalo Case

Columbia Pictures, last week, won a Federal Court order, in Buffalo, for a separate bill of particulars from the Government in an anti-trust suit against the Schine circuit and the majors. Columbia was the only defendant not to answer the Government complaint. Its action delays the case and no trial date can now be set. United States District Judge John Knight directed the Government to furnish Columbia with an itemized list of 34 alleged violations of the Sherman Act.

THE STRANGER

by MARTIN QUIGLEY

WEEKS of adventuring in the time-tinted files of the HERALD have been involved in the preparation of this anniversary issue. These excursions have been like rainy Sundays in the attic turning over old letters and pictures fraught with memories and redolent of the emotions of other days. So it came that the editor of the HERALD, in quest of materials from the hand of Martin Quigley in the formative days of his publication enterprises, turning the pages of 1917—that was twenty-three years ago and he was 27 years of age then—discovered this piece, reaction of a young man in his idealisms facing a war-torn world, trying to find hope in a chaos.

—TERRY RAMSAYE

December 22, 1917

FOR days before the Eve of Christmas a Solemn Figure had dogged the army of invasion without challenging special notice. Among the French peasantry there were noncombatants of patriarchal mien wandering about unmolested at times and it might have been confounded with one of them. At first glance there was nothing to distinguish it from one of these, but looked at more attentively one divined behind the mist and veil the presence of a strange majesty.

The face nobly moulded was lighter in hue than that of a peasant exposed to the intensity of the summer sun. About the brow and head there was a peculiar tenderness and majesty that seemed to bring to mind the idea of centuries of adoration. But above all, the eyes of this strange man drew attention of the onlooker—the eyes of dark and ethereal brilliancy filled now with the light of great pity and sorrow.

Who was this Unknown, whence came He, and what business had He there amid slaughter, rapine, desolation and death? He seemed striving to come near the Hun warriors in the thickest of the carnage but was stopped short finding them all-intent upon their hellish trade and wholly oblivious of His Presence.

They had enough to do without heeding Him and one might feel that it was only their blind, unseeing rage that exempted Him from the fate of so many. It was plain they did not see Him—or would not see Him—else the spectacle of this Unknown figure sorrowing and wringing His hands over their bloody deeds would have brought them to their knees in supplication to Heaven for an armistice.

At night He wandered about the beleagured village, going from one outpost to another, heedless of the sentinel's call. Often abroad in No Man's Land He was fired at, mistaken for a prowling spy, and the soldier running forward to glory in his bloody marksmanship found—nothing. Soon a rumor spread of a mysterious figure moving majestically in the rain of death between the trenches. Many soldiers declared that during the dark watches of the night they heard It moaning and wailing and lamenting in a strange unearthly tongue—a tongue none on that side of the battle front could understand.

In intervals between the hell-sent hail of shot and shell a comrade stout of heart, whispered to a weaker brother that it was an omen of victory. There were others who averred that the strange Visitant foreshadowed the coming of disaster; and indeed disaster did come to the trenches of the invader, seizing with spectral hands and dragging down to death many who fain would greet the enemy as "Brother" if the man called Kaiser would say but the word.

¶ Still the Solemn Figure flitted to and fro from trench to trench and garrison to garrison. Strange and terrible were the sights it looked upon and over which it raised imprecating hands.

Back in the village where every year for centuries the Spirit of Christmas was wont to bathe all in the celestial light of peace and tranquillity It saw lust and murder loosed against a trembling population of young and old, the sick and unfit—poor derelicts in the path of the supreme heartlessness and folly of Prussia's dream of world dominance.

It saw scattered heaps of such as these lying in terrible confusion clinging, one to another in the grim security of death. Here the tiny corpse of a child with terror stamped on its innocent face and little hand clasping a make-shift doll of rags from a Christmas chest impoverished by war; there a white-haired old man—the village Santa for a score of years—with one arm flung protectingly around a young girl in whose eyes might be read the horror of her fate.

And again the Solemn Figure looked upon the most awful and accusing sight under Heaven—the hearth-fire—which was lit to welcome the dawn of Christmas day, quenched in blood and mute forms where joyous life had lately been.

¶ In fire It saw the wanton cruelty and destruction brought to a people and a land that were nestling under the majestic serenity and happiness of a traditional Christmas Eve.

Then the Solemn Figure, outraged by what It had seen back of the German lines, raised an imperial hand pointing to the West. . . .

Suddenly from afar a giant shrapnel shell shot from the mouth of an American cannon burst high against the sombre heavens like a new Star of Bethlehem, a vivid portent of a mighty nation sprung to arms for the salvation of a world threatened with oppression.

. . . and a multitude of troops of the armies of liberty and freedom watched with fixed gaze the miracle of the bursting shell that hung like a star in the area just over the top, bidding them on like the star of a long-gone Christmas Eve to the glorious work of making the world safe for the Spirit of Christmas.

AMAZING GROSSES

— Almost unbelievable figures being rolled up in big cities and little towns! . . . For instance, in the Memphis territory alone, where 30 prints are working . . . the picture is actually DOUBLING and TRIPLING the grosses of top box-office hits of the past five years! . . . Don't try to analyze it — whether it's Lum and Abner's 20,000,000 radio listeners or whether it's just because the picture has what everybody wants...Just be guided by the fact that in many theatres in this land it's proving THE BIGGEST BOX-OFFICE SENSATION THOSE THEATRES EVER HAD!

FORT WORTH FETE FOR 'WESTERNER'; NEW PLANS ON 'ROCKNE', 'POLICE'

Texas Welcome Given Stars and Crowds for Goldwyn Picture; Warners, Paramount Complete Plans for Location Premieres

Plans continued a-pace this week for the premieres of two of the new seasons big pictures—Warner Brothers' "Knute Rockne—All American," at South Bend October 4th, and Paramount's "North West Mounted Police," at Regina, Saskatchewan, October 21st, and Chicago October 24th—the while Samuel Goldwyn's "The Westerner" gave the citizens of Fort Worth and environs something to cheer about on Thursday last.

Plane Loads from Hollywood

A crowd estimated at 100,000 barged into Fort Worth, in the Texas country, for the premiere. They came for the early morning arrival of three plane loads of celebrities from Hollywood, including Sam Goldwyn, William Wyler, the director; Gary Cooper, Bob Hope and others and stayed for the Movie Ball starting shortly before midnight and lasting until early morning.

For about $3,000 Bob O'Donnell and Frank Weatherford of the Interstate Circuit, and Amon Carter, Fort Worth publisher, staged the spectacle which enjoyed all the aspects of a $50,000 ballyhoo.

Aiding the principals were Frank O. Starz and Bob O'Donahue, Interstate; Joseph Shea, who served as contact man for United Artists; Gabe Yorke, advertising and publicity manager for Samuel Goldwyn, and Lynn Farnol, advertising and publicity director for United Artists, who collaborated in arranging for the celebrities from the coast and east to attend.

Visitors to Fort Worth reported that for hundreds of miles around, even to San Antonio, the countryside was covered with news of the premiere. Under Interstate auspices "The Westerner" will play over 100 simultaneous dates throughout Texas. The entire proceedings were broadcast and the premiere was front page news in all the Fort Worth newspapers before, during and after the event.

"Knute Rockne" Week

An official proclamation signed by Governor M. Clifford Townsend of Indiana and naming the week of September 29th through October 5th, "Knute Rockne Week," highlights the latest developments in Warners' campaign on its "Knute Rockne—All American." Following the proclamation Governor Clifford dispatched letters urging the Governors of all the states to issue similar proclamations.

The first to do so is Governor E. D. Rivers of Georgia who officially proclaimed "Knute Rockne Week" in his state for that period.

The climax of the week will arrive on the night of October 4th when the film has its world premiere in three South Bend, Ind., theatres—South Bend being the home of Notre Dame University, where the Norwegian-born Rockne grew famous coaching the "Irish" gridders.

Mayor Jesse I. Pavey of South Bend has invited all the Mayors in the country to attend the celebration, and has declared October 4th a civic holiday. Mayor Edward J. Kelley of Chicago, following the example of the Indiana Governor, has proclaimed September 29th-October 5th "Knute Rockne Week."

Mayor Pavey also has wired the presidents of 86 Notre Dame Clubs in as many cities invitations to attend the premiere. The invitations were sent on behalf of the Mayor's Committee directing "Knute Rockne Week." The committee is also sending personal invitation letters to 10,000 Notre Dame Alumni in all sections of the country. In addition to the world premiere, climaxing events of the week, will include a banquet to be held in the Notre Dame dining hall, a grand ball, and the Notre Dame-College of the Pacific football game October 5th.

Bob Hope will be master of ceremonies at the banquet. Pat O'Brien, Ronald Reagan, Donald Crisp, Gale Page and other members of the cast will attend the banquet which will be nationally broadcast over the Kate Smith hour and will be piped into the many local dinners being held by Notre Dame Alumni Clubs.

Miss Smith also will make daily broadcasts from South Bend, covering the various activities taking place during the week.

RCA-Victor is cooperating in the celebration of "Knute Rockne Week" by reviving three Victor records devoted to Notre Dame. The records are: "Notre Dame Victory March—Notre Dame University Band and Knute Rockne Talks to His Team"; "The Victory March—Larry Clinton and His Orchestra," and "Hike! Notre Dame! and Victory March—Notre Dame University Band."

Grosset and Dunlap has issued a motion picture edition of their book "Knute Rockne—All American," with a special jacket carrying film credit. Over 500 dealers are said to be cooperating in the sale of the book.

In cooperation with the Western Union Company, a jumbo telegram has been prepared and will be posted in 5,000 Western Union store windows. The telegram measures 17 by 22 inches.

"Police" in Five Theatres

Every theatre in Regina, Saskatchewan, five in all, will be used to handle the Canadian premiere of the Cecil B. DeMille-Paramount "North West Mounted Police" on October 21st, R. M. Gillham, advertising and publicity director, said last week on returning to New York from a visit to Ottawa and Toronto.

Mr. Gillham, accompanied by Mr. DeMille's associate producer, William Pine, screened the film for Commissioner S. T. Woods, chief of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police; Deputy Commissioner King, and a group of executives of Famous Players-Canadian circuit and Paramount distribution men in Ottawa and held a similar screening in Toronto.

The entire box office receipts at the five theatres will be turned over to the Royal Canadian Mounted Police for the purchase of field ambulance equipment.

Chicago will have the American premiere of the film Thursday, October 24th, according to Mr. Pine, the associate producer and Karl Krueger, midwest exploitation chief for Paramount.

The plans call for the closing of the Chicago theatre after the matinee performance Thursday.

At 8:30 p.m. the theatre will re-open with tickets selling at $2.20. The stars of the picture including Gary Cooper, Madeleine Carroll, Robert Preston, Preston Foster, Akim Tamiroff, George Bancroft and Paulette Goddard will attend the premiere, according to Mr. Krueger.

WGN will broadcast scenes from the picture with the stars playing the roles on the air that they portray on the screen.

Then after the broadcast a huge parade is planned down Michigan Avenue ending at the Chicago theatre which will be illuminated with giant floodlights.

The State Street Council, an organization of State Street's leading department stores and merchants have evinced their desire to participate in the ceremonies and from all indications the entire loop will be decorated for the event.

Probable reasons for having the premiere and setting the admission price at $2.20 came as a result of screening "North West Mounted Police" last Thursday night at the Chicago theatre in what is termed a "sneak prevue."

John Balaban, Walter Immerman, Nate Platt, William Hollander and a host of other B & K executives, Mr. Pine and Mr. Krueger, attended the "prevue" to obtain audience reaction.

Mr. Pine flew to California immediately after a conference in John Balaban's office which followed the showing of the picture, to make arrangements for the star's appearance in Chicago on the date set for the premiere.

Immediately following the picture's world premiere in Regina, Canada, on October 21 and its United States debut in Chicago on October 24, the picture will be released in the following key spots at advanced prices: Warfield theatre, San Francisco; Paramount, Los Angeles; State theatre, Minneapolis; simultaneously in two theatres, the Orpheum and Paramount, Portland, Ore.; Newman theatre, Kansas City; simultaneously in two theatres, the Wisconsin and Palace, Milwaukee; and in Portland, Me., Louisville, Ky., and Youngstown, O.

Plan "Thief" Premieres

Simultaneous premieres of Alexander Korda's "Thief of Bagdad" may be held in New York and Los Angeles October 17th. The picture will open on that date at the Carthay Circle, Los Angeles, on a roadshow policy. The opening in New York depends upon the availability by that date of a theatre now being sought.

The picture will be roadshown in a half-dozen or more key cities. A prior booking by the Radio City Music Hall automatically becomes deferred to a date following the roadshow run on Broadway as a result of an admission scale in excess of $1.65 top being established for the roadshows, in accordance with the Music Hall contract.

"Fantasia" Theatre Search

William E. Garity, chief engineer of the Walt Disney Studios, arrived in New York last week accompanied by technical assistants to confer with RCA engineers and Hal Horne, in charge of the roadshowing of "Fantasia," on the selections of a theatre in New York for its world premiere.

The choice of a theatre will be made as early as possible since the roadshow premiere of "Fantasia" will take place in mid-November.

SAYS "WESTERNER" GROSSED $401,550

Samuel Goldwyn's United Artists release, "The Westerner", gained $401,550 during its first five days in 94 Texas theatres, the UA home office said Tuesday. The picture opened in Fort Worth Thursday evening, September 19th, and is playing throughout Texas. The grosses it has registered are said to range, in percentages, from 145 per cent of average to 350 per cent of average.

Walter Wanger, UA producer, said this week he would make a sequel to his "Foreign Correspondent", with a United States locale.

Story of Dollars and Names and How the Grosses grew

Sketching the Cavalcade of Magnates and the Tide of Millions

WHEN Martin Quigley was founding Exhibitors Herald back in 1915 the business of the motion picture was, as it appears to be now, passing through an important period of change.

That change was to prove revolutionary, if not violent, and it was to bring about in the few years to follow new conditions which made, with the possible exception of sound motion pictures, the most significant commercial impact on the motion picture.

Some 28,000 theatres were showing motion pictures. Most of the film came from the affiliated studios and through the exchanges of the big program companies—General Film, Mutual Film and Universal.

But already the individual feature picture had brought disquiet to the entrenched program system. The weekly film services of the program companies were adding multiple reel pictures—three, four and sometimes five reels—to their programs in an attempt to hold business that was trickling away to the upstart Famous-Players, Paramount, Fox, Lasky, World and Metro companies and the independent exchanges which were giving the business its first sample of high powered exploitation and its first taste of high grosses.

¶ General Film was to go down fighting. Its members attempted to meet the feature invasion with V-L-S-E and then with K-E-S-E. Mutual was to shift from program to feature policies and lived fitfully a few years. Universal alone survives of the early "majors."

The great business names of the 1915 industry were Jeremiah J. Kennedy, J. A. Berst, Colonel William N. Selig, George K. Spoor, Commodore J. Stuart Blackton, Albert E. Smith, Sigmund Lubin, Harry E. Aitkin, William Fox, John R. Freuler, Samuel S. Hutchinson, Edward Thanhouser, Adam Kessel, Charles Bauman, David Horsley, Carl Laemmle, R. H. Cochrane, P. A. Powers, Mark N. Dintenfass, Walter W. Irwin, George Kleine, J. N. Naulty and G. M. Anderson.

¶ Looming on the horizon, some of them already entrenched in feature production and later to become, a few fleetingly but others more permanently, were: Al Lichtman, Lewis J. Selznick, Richard A. Rowland, Adolph Zukor, Jesse L. Lasky, Samuel Goldwyn, W. W. Hodkinson, Hiram Abrams, Arthur Friend, Robert Brunton, Frank Garbutt, Herman Wobber, William A. Brady, Louis B. Mayer, Joseph Engel, W. R. Sheehan, Saul Rogers, Felix Feist, Walter E. Greene, Sol Lesser, Harry Sherman, Elek J. Ludvigh and Samuel Rothapfel.

Here in a studio, in LaBrea Avenue, there this day in 1917 was history, in the person of Charles Chaplin, then in the Mutual Film Corporation's Lone Star comedies, and Max Linder, just leaving the Essanay lot to return to his native France. Essanay, losing Mr. Chaplin, had imported Mr. Linder with an avowed and advertised purpose of driving Mr. Chaplin off the screen. Mr. Linder's farewell was the end of that—and the last gasp of the dying glory of what had been the Patents Company group. Ahead of Mr. Chaplin in his career with the independents was First National and United Artists.

Out of the mists of 1915, the hurly-burly of a rapidly growing business, the confusions of changing conditions, there are only clouded statistics, and not many of them, but the motion picture was, dollar-wise, a healthy infant industry. Its exchanges were collecting, including a relatively inconsequential foreign income, in the neighborhood of $40,000,000 a year. Nearly two-thirds of that was pouring into the treasuries of the program companies. Most of the rest went to the feature companies, although dependent upon product, the "state-righter" was collecting significant grosses.

¶ All dollar history of the motion picture goes back to "The Birth of a Nation" but nobody knows really what "The Birth of a Nation" grossed. The best estimate is that at the boxoffice it did $15,000,000, but that picture was never consistently distributed as later motion pictures were distributed, and the income from the boxoffice was so intermingled with the income from state-rights that it is exceedingly difficult to determine even an approximate gross measured by general gross standards.

The average feature in 1915 was grossing its distributor around $40,000. Famous-Players, with its first Mary Pickford productions, grossed probably twice that. But $50,000 grosses were exceptional. World Film and Metro were striving for that sum with their features.

The transition period between 1915 and 1920 produced no pictures of outstanding box office gross, although Griffith's "Hearts of the World," Ince's "Civilization," Selig's "The Spoilers," "Damaged Goods," all marketed on a state-rights basis, reached high figures, but like "The Birth of a Nation," the marketing methods were confused and only a rough approximation of their revenue can be estimated.

Famous-Players, Metro, Triangle and Goldwyn set successively higher and higher rental peaks, but it was not until First National Exhibitors Circuit got into full operation with Chaplin and Pickford, the Talmadges, Anita Stewart and an array of stars competitive with Famous-Players-Lasky, that general release grosses began to reach really high peaks.

¶ There was a succession of new companies, reorganizations and liquidations in the period between 1915 and 1920. Triangle was short lived. Paramount brought together Famous Players and the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company as Famous-Players-Lasky. Artcraft Pictures Corporation was organized as an affiliate. W. W. Hodkinson organized his own company. Adolph Zukor formed Realart Pictures Corporation. Famous Players-Lasky absorbed Paramount and Artcraft. United Artists Corporation was founded. William R. Hearst organized Cosmopolitan Productions. Lewis J. Selznick started Select Pictures. Louis B. Mayer formed his own production company. Educational Film Company was started. Robertson-Cole came into being and took over what was left of Mutual, and the "granddaddy" of them all, General Film, went into liquidation under a bankruptcy action.

¶ Then came 1920. Chaplin produced his first feature picture, "The Kid," for First National. Griffith produced "Way Down East." Both grossed at least $2,000,000. Metro produced "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" which set a new high gross at $5,000,000. Paramount brought out "The Ten Commandments" and "The Covered Wagon." Together they hit close to $6,000,000. All grosses stepped upward—two hundred thousand, three hundred thousand, five hundred thousand, seven hundred thousand dollars. "The Big Parade," "The Gold Rush," "The Sea Hawk" in 1925 collected peak rentals, and in 1926 "Ben Hur" established another high.

¶ In the meanwhile Marcus Loew had bought control of Metro, merged it with the declining Goldwyn Company and consolidated it with the Louis B. Mayer Pictures Corporation as Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Columbia had been started as C.B.C. Associated Producers had come and gone.

The Warner Brothers, who had started back in 1905 with "The Great Train Robbery" as a road show, had organized their own producing company, and after many vicissitudes had joined with the Western Electric Company to develop talking pictures.

Suddenly "The Jazz Singer" startled the business—the first feature length all-talking motion picture. Its gross of $3,500,000 was followed in 1928 by "The Singing Fool," with a reported gross of $5,000,000. Sound threw the motion picture into a revolution of a proportion seldom equalled in American industry. Silent pictures died in a few months. The very virility of the business took it over the seemingly insurmountable obstacle of studio and theatre re-equipment.

Just as the million dollar pictures of the early 20's stimulated bigger pictures which brought bigger grosses, so the renaissance of sound brought bigger pictures and bigger grosses. Million dollar grosses were not unusual. "Rio Rita," "Sunny Side Up," "Broadway Melody," "Cimarron" and "Cavalcade," among others, set new standards of production with grosses ranging from $2,000,000 to $3,500,000.

The depths of the economic depression were to test the fundamental strength of the business. An over-extension of theatre acquisition in the several years before and the two years after the Wall Street collapse of 1929 and the tremendous financial outlays for sound equipment had left the business particularly vulnerable. The motion picture proved to be one of the last of the industries to feel the effects of materially reduced public purchasing power, but not the last to sense recovery under increased industrial activity.

¶ The slump of grosses which occurred in 1932 and 1933, and lapped over into 1934, vanished in 1935, but it was 1936 before another really top money picture came in "San Francisco" which hit $2,500,000. When "Snow White" was released in 1938, it set out on a boxoffice career which rolled up approximately $8,000,000 world gross, more than $5,000,000 of it in the United States. It was assumed that an all-time high had probably been reached, but came 1940 and "Gone With the Wind," which will double, or better, "Snow White" in both world and domestic rentals.

¶ Over a twenty-five year span, the business had multiplied twice, three times, four times, five times. Foreign gross alone was, when the new World War began to curtail markets abroad, easily double the gross of the whole industry in 1915.

This is the dollar story of the film not the dollar story of the boxoffice. The alleged 28,000 theatres of 1915 shrunk to 18,000 and then to 16,000. New, larger, more modern houses displaced the "shooting galleries," mostly renovated stores, and the converted vaudeville theatres. The coming of sound, with its costly equipment, further cut the number of theatres to an estimated figure of around 11,500, which figure has been gradually increased by about 2,000.

Any estimate of the box-office gross in 1915 is pure guesswork because films were bought by the foot and sold by the week, admissions ranged from five cents to twenty-five cents and nobody knew, or particularly cared, how much the exhibitor was taking in for everybody was making money.

The theatres in the United States will collect in 1940 at their boxoffices somewhere around, but under, $900,000,000.

The Story of the Rialto Theatre in New York

Above and left, the Rialto theatre when it was new and glistening. The blaze of lights above is for Douglas Fairbanks and Fatty Arbuckle pictures. Below, the remodeled house as it is today.

THE Rialto Theatre is seven months younger than the Motion Picture Herald, but it looks fifty years older. The passing years only improve the Herald's circulation; her appearance gains in girth and distinction; her contents in masculine apeal. The Rialto, on the other hand, shows the ravages of time. Our seating capacity has shrunk. Our once dignified and impressive facade is now shared with a Chinese restaurant, a liquor store and a men's haberdashery. Our marquee, where the names of Fairbanks, Pickford and Valentino used to sparkle, now boasts at best only a Karloff or Lugosi. During recent years, while the Herald was surging forward to national prestige, the Rialto was battling a blitzkrieg of distributors, playing "B' product and suffering from the inroads of double features, china nights and bingo. No wonder it looks old and tired!

It was not always thus!

"The most beautiful playhouse in the city" is what the movie critic of the conservative New York Tribune called the Rialto when it opened its doors on April 21, 1916. "A veritable triumph—staggering in its splendor," caroled the American, while the Times and the Sun commented approvingly on the luxuriousness of its appointments. The late Douglas Fairbanks was the star of the opening night's picture, "The Good Bad Man," and the directing genius of the whole show was S. L. Rothafel, Broadway's beloved Roxy. "Temple of Motion Pictures" is what the Rialto styled itself in those early days, and "Shrine

IT was another New York and another Broadway then, when they started a-building the Rialto on the old Hammerstein site on the west of Times Square, where Forty-second dashes across Seventh Avenue. There was still David Belasco; Klaw & Erlanger was a large fact. The House of Frohman still loomed. There were the Knickerbocker Bar, Wallack's, Bustanoby's, Mouquin's, Shanley's, Jack's, Rector's. Surviving now are only The Astor, William A. Brady—and that Old King Cole mural, by Maxfield Parrish, from the Knickerbocker, now in mellowed grandeur up at the St. Regis. Like most of us, it has moved uptown a bit.

The Rialto corner was to be a sort of vortex of destiny. It began as a plain investment in showmanship. It was to be, however, that whatever happened in the picture business also happened to the Rialto. Few other theatres have so lived the life of the industry these twenty-five years past. It was there through the interest represented by Crawford Livingston and Felix Kahn that Wall Street learned about exhibition and the profits thereof. It was there that elegance came to the cinema's school of showmanship; there that Music most grandly served a voiceless screen; there that Distribution learned about Broadway showcases. It was there that First National Theatres Circuit, as an exhibitor uprising, sought the famed Roxy as its first president. It was there that Paramount capstoned a theatre acquisition campaign, in the war that First National started. It was there, too, that remote control chain operation, of the Publix pattern, met a Broadway defeat.

With its greater glory of those early years departed, lost to the super-splendors, successively of Capitol, Roxy, Paramount, Music Hall, the old Rialto, muchly changed and narrowed by mercantile pressures, has returned again to individual showmanship and a specialized address at the tides of traffic that flow about its historic corner. One showman's policy made it great. One showman's policy keeps it alive functioning. It has lived a cycle of cinema.—T. R.

of Music and Allied Arts"—the latter title a tribute to Hugo Riesenfeld, whose baton directed the Rialto Orchestra and the "largest and finest organ ever installed in any theatre anywhere." Little did the management or its patrons realize that one day it would become the "House of Horrors."

What aparently amazed Broadway most about the new house was that the theatre had been constructed without a stage, the screen being placed against the back wall. "It is built on the conviction that the American passion for the movies is here to stay," said the New York Times reporter, not without an undertone of skepticism.

Thus out of Triangle Pictures by Roxy the Rialto Theatre was born, to bring to the great American public bigger and better pictures featuring Fatty Arbuckle, William S. Hart, Charlie Chaplin, H. B. Warner, Norma Talmadge and other luminaries of the so-called good old days.

¶ Dominated by Roxy's abundant enthusiasm, the Rialto staff quickly developed into a close-knit clan working together in amazing harmony. The philosophic Riesenfeld, the erudite music librarian Victor Wagner, the fun-loving pianist Emanuel Baer and all the temperamental musicians of the orchestra of thirty-five worked together month after month for the greater glory of their theatre, staying up nights scoring and rehearsing their programs, and letting the inevitable flare-ups of artistic tempers affect the smooth functioning of their ensemble not one whit—or at least so we are now told by venerable and, we trust, veracious survivors.

¶ Because of the key position of the Rialto as the nation's number one film theatre, and his own especial prestige, Roxy found his film buying problem rather simple. He was a good trader, if need be, but it was rarely necessary. His method was to sign for all of the product offered, take his pick of pictures and dismiss the rest with nonchalance, reinforced by the fact that no distributor cared to have the Rialto screen closed to him in a contract argument. That procedure has been, in some situations, continued for a long time.

¶ When Terry Ramsaye and the Mutual Film Corporation both got influenza in the big war-time epidemic, the Mutual did not recover and Terry went to the Rialto-Rivoli organization as press agent. If I were not writing for the Motion Picture Herald, I would add that he was one of the most effective press agents in Broadway annals. His distribution experience soon involved him in some of the more esoteric aspects of the film buy. It was to be discovered that Roxy, concerned only with the overall drawing power of his show, preferred reviews of decided candour about the film component. Presently he and Mr. Ramsaye could have been found collaborating on reviews, supplied in pre-digested form to representatives of the press who appreciated having their Sunday work done for them and delivered by messenger. The result was on occasion some decidedly high powered criticism in the papers tending to support Mr. Ramsaye's requirements in matters of film rental and contract adjustment. Reading some recent Rialto reviews might convey the impression that the same system was still in operation but unfortunately a more conscientious generation of critics insist on writing their own bad notices.

Pressure for Rialto bookings and playdates in those happy days was sometimes extreme. One master producer, burdened with a production of high budget and low drawing power, decided on a master stroke campaign by offering it to the Rialto as an Easter week special at $5,000 for the week —that being about $1,500 above the top price then paid for such star items as Elsie Ferguson. This was in the Hugo Riesenfeld administration, right after he had succeeded Roxy. Hugo, winced at the pressure and delegated screening and negotiation, if any, to Ramsaye. The picture was rejected, but the sales argument wore on far into the night in the little office up on the third floor. At last Hugo called up. "What happened?'

"Nothing, so far. I didn't want the picture, he wanted five grand, now he is offering the five grand if we'll run it."

"Five?" Hugo answered, "tell him please that our honor is worth $45,000 and we must have $50,000 to make any profit."

Incidentally, if the picture was ever released, no one remembers it.

¶ Of Riesenfeld it might be observed that he knew as much about music as Roxy felt. Roxy was northwest American out of Stillwater, Minnesota, by way of the Marine Corps and the seven seas, book-agenting and tending bar along the way to the movies and showmanship. He was natively sensitive, emotionally excitable, insistent. Hugo was from Vienna, the Vienna of Straus and Gustave Mahler, by way of Paris and some hard knocks in the United States. He was cool, suave, restrained, caustically competent, and philosophically amused in the midst of storms. Memorable was an occasion when he called in the first violin, a player since long celebrated in the annals of the musical stage and sat him down for a lecture in the scoring room. "Remember you are a violinist and that's a violin—on the program, but here in this room and when I am talking to you that's just a fiddle and you are a fiddler." That from Hugo, one time concert master of the Vienna Opera House, was debunking in an emphatic manner.

Hugo was a master of music but he did not let it master him.

¶ When things got a bit thick around the Rialto and the debating was too heavy, Hugo would achieve escape by calling anybody on the staff who was in sight and taking off to the Childs Restaurant next door for coffee and coffee cake. He was the master dunker of Broadway long before that was discovered to be a classic art.

On scoring nights Hugo, ending the day's work at 3 or 4 A.M. would often invite the staff across the way to the Lambs club for scrambled eggs—and of course more coffee. On one such occasion, Manny Baer at the piano in a wearied hurry to get going slurred a final phrase at the keys.

¶ Hugo was frowning all the way to the club and half way through his supper. Suddenly he dropped his fork and called to the pianist as he pointed across the room to an open instrument: "Manny for God's sake 'G,' 'G' I tell you."

Mr. Baer arose, walked to the piano and struck "G." After that Hugo felt better and the party was a success.

Our theatre prospered mightily under

HUGO RIESENFELD

ARTHUR MAYER

Three of the men intimately associated with the life of the Rialto are the late S. L. Rothafel, who was managing director when the house opened in 1915; the late Hugo Riesenfeld who supplied the "Shrine of Music" half of the theatre's slogan, and Arthur Mayer, present operator.

Corner at Crossroads of the World

Hugo's mellow musical management. Indeed, it was so successful that on January 29, 1921, Paramount acquired the house. With admission prices that had risen from the original fifty-cent top to as high as ninety-nine cents, and with first-class features framed in a semi-classical musical program a la Riesenfeld, the Rialto for many years easily maintained its leading position on Broadway.

"The Way of All Flesh," starring Emil Jannings, packed the house for twelve solid weeks in 1927, and in the next year "The Patriot" had an eight-week run. The most sensational of the crowds was that which turned out for "Heliotrope," a Hearst-produced picture publicized by none other than Murray Silverstone. When the doors opened, the line in front of the box office extended around the corner all the way down to Eighth Avenue. It looked like a Paramount Theatre opening with Goodman or Artie Shaw on the stage—but not a jitterbug in the crowd. Parenthetically it may be added that this particular audience stole everything that wasn't nailed down—even the cuspidors. It was never discovered why Mr. Heart's "Heliotrope" should have attracted so many cleptomaniacs.

With Gloria Swanson in "The Trespasser" in 1929, the Rialto established its all-time weekly house record of $68,000; and even in the dark year 1932 it managed with "Shanghai Express" to gross $65,500 in one week. In spite of these occasional big weeks, however, the Rialto by this time was losing money, and on February 1, 1933, Paramount closed the theatre's doors.

It is a striking commentary on the much vaunted efficiency of circuit operation, that this two-thousand-seat theatre located at 42nd Street and Broadway, was unsuccessful. No individual operator, with a minimum of experience or initiative, could have failed to make a profit from such a house. But the Paramount Trustees, more impressed by red figures than location or logic, planned to default on the lease and return the property to its owners.

¶ With difficulty I persuaded them that a partnership with me was preferable to surrender. As a clinching argument, I offered to resign as head of their advertising and publicity department. This was too good to refuse and on March 9, 1933, just as the banks closed, I reopened the theatre. Any one lacking cash was admitted in return for an IOU.

As a matter of record, it should be reported that our confidence in public honesty was entirely misplaced. We received a considerable number of promises to pay, a very small percentage of which were ever redeemed.

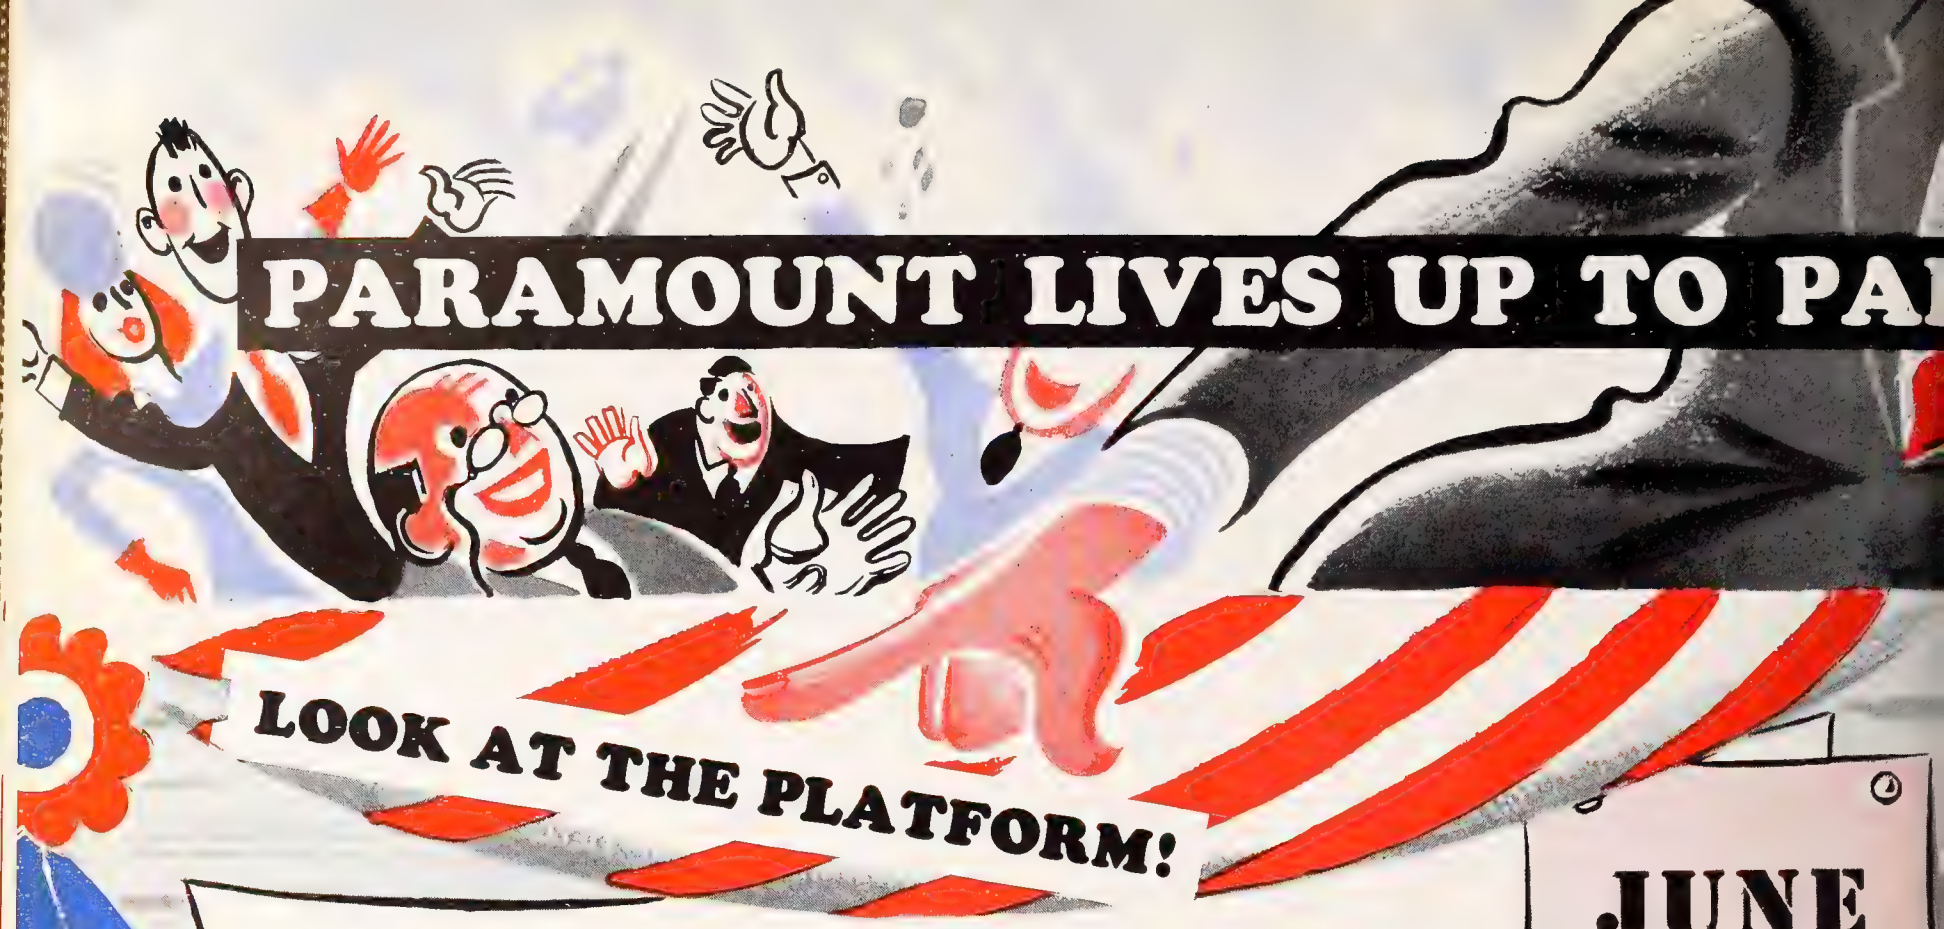
It did not take long to discover that second-rate musical comedies and love stories without important stars, feeble comedies and kiddie features minus Deanna Durbin or Mickey Rooney were not what our public craved. Competitive theatres, whose association with the major producing companies gave them first choice of all products completely outclassed us in this field. Murder, horror, mystery and fighting, on the other hand, however inadequately portrayed, invariably did well. By good fortune, these were the pictures most frequently available. We had the most successful three weeks in our history with "The Lost Patrol" when all the male bookers passed it up because it had no women in the cast. We played to over 200,000 patrons, proving that sex and success are not as synonymous as generally believed.

Only a year ago, with a revival of the horror pictures, "Dracula" and "Frankenstein," we again demonstrated that the clamor for saccharine sweetness can be overestimated. We dared blase Broadway audiences to see these two old pictures on the same program, and jammed the house for two weeks, operating twenty-four hours a day, with admission prices on Saturday and Sunday evenings running as high as seventy-five cents for pictures that had frequently been shown around the corner for ten cents.

This show, incidentally, marked one of the few violations of our famous slogan: "Not such a good picture, but only one."

¶ Hollywood has always proceeded on the assumption that audiences prefer the synthetic article to the genuine—but no fictional fight was ever so popular with our paying customers as the first Louis-Schmeling bout. We filled every seat in the theatre more than ten times a day for over a week. It was evident that our patrons preferred Schmeling's right on Louis' kisser to the most sparkling dialogue ever perpetrated over the tea-cups. It also became more and more obvious that a clutching hand projecting from a sliding panel poised above the hapless heroine's head meant more at the box office than a sentimental youth's arm slipped about a responsive virgin's waist; and that two-fisted triggermen packed a more potent appeal than all the coloratura sopranos in captivity.

Fortified by these experiences, we barred from the Rialto screen all sophisticated drawing-room chatter, precocious kiddies, and men fencing in doublet and hose. We specialize in sinister murders in haunted houses, bow-legged cowboys riding recklessly across the plains, gangsters victorious until the final reel over G-men, and corpses rising from their graves to imperil lovely white women. Our short subjects are confined chiefly to sport reels and comedies with all the ancient gags and pratt falls so dear to masculine hearts. In addition, we show at least a half hour of newsreels, omitting only the fashion items and the Mardi Gras parade in New Orleans.



Our ushers, whom the original Rialto had disguised as admirals—"elegantly upholstered," the Times reviewer had called them back in 1916—have been replaced with amiable hospitable lads who urge you to smoke and take the seats you desire. In 1935, we reconstructed the house, dispensing not only with the Paramount partnership but also with marble stairways and tons of bastard Renaissance decorations in plaster. We banished perfume machines, statutes of Greek gods and paintings of cows grazing in lush meadows.

¶ Working in this direction, without any preconceived plan, we gave birth to something quite unprecedented in de luxe motion picture theatre operation—a theatre with a specific character. Most theatres as a result of block-booking or producer-ownership play a musical one week and a melodrama the next; a story culled from the latest newspaper scandal is succeeded by a historical romance; a drawing-room comedy is followed by a slapstick farce. The Rialto's fundamental weakness was its inability to buy groups of pictures. This liability we transfromed into an asset by selecting, from the limited choice submitted to us, only films that conformed to our policy of action pictures. Across the street, the New Amsterdam Theatre under Flo Ziegfeld had "glorified the American girl.' We declared that our mission was to "gorify the American ghoul"—and in spite of the lack of cooperation from gentle minded producers, we have persisted in this policy. In this fashion, we built up a steady and sturdy clientele, primarily male, which had been alienated from the movies by their increasing preoccupation with sentimental romance, their over-indulgence in their newly acquired gift of speech, and their static reproduction of stage technique.

Thus we have carved out for ourselves a unique place in the Broadway entertainment world. A veteran of nearly a quarter of a century, the Rialto has lost its youthful looks, and its fabulous grosses, but age has not impaired its zest and its enthusiasms.

¶ We go marching on to our second quarter century, like the Motion Picture Herald proud of our traditions, confident of our prestige in our own field, and dedicated to the service of our industry and our nation.

DEFENSE ARMY TO GET MANY MORE THEATRES, ADDING TO PRESENT 100

Military and YMCA Officials Draw Plans for Film Entertainment Facilities at Camps; Canvas Theatres at Camp Dix

The Army and the YMCA were going ahead this week with plans for expanding, recreation facilities including screen entertainment for the growing military forces of the United States. The Government is building new and reconstructing old theatres on army posts and the YMCA has a program providing for 36 new buildings near army camps, all to be equipped with motion picture facilities.

The industry's committees to aid the national defense program with films for entertainment and instruction have not made any announcement of specific action planned. But the newsreels and certain short subjects are giving attention to defense efforts and it is believed that a method of providing adequate film entertainment to the hundreds of thousands of men which are to be inducted into the army this year will be worked out.

Camps to Have Facilities

Army officials have pointed out that the two chief forms of entertainment and relaxation available to men in military service are sports and motion pictures. Many of the camps are located far from other communities and amusement facilities will be provided on and near the encampments.

At the present time the YMCA operates 41 Army and Navy clubs, most of which are equipped to show motion pictures. Under the program of 36 proposed new buildings the organization will have facilities at practically every military camp in this country and possessions. However, unlike the case in World War I, neither the YMCA nor any other non-governmental group will be able to own property in the camps. The YMCA officials believe that in the last war their organization was asked to do many things which were outside its sphere. YMCA clubs will be established near the camps and forts on the theory that when the men have time off they wish to leave the army post. Also, subject to the invitation of the army commandant, the YMCA will direct motion pictures and other amusements in the camp itself.

At Camp Dix, N. J., where many of the National Guardsmen from New York are scheduled to spend a year in training, a canvas theatre, to seat about 2,000, is to be completed this week. Two permanent theatres, seating over 1,000 each, are scheduled to be completed in January. The canvas theatre is being erected immediately to provide some place for film entertainment before the wooden buildings are constructed.

Theatres to Be Expanded

Recreation buildings which will have motion picture equipment are planned by the army for many of the new camps which are as yet still in the blue-print stage. New camps are now under construction in many sections of the country and work on others is to begin shortly. On account of more favorable weather conditions for winter maneuvers most of the camps are being located in the south. Many sites are distant from all neighboring towns.

Most of the 80 odd army posts now have facilities for motion picture shows which will have to be expanded. It was reported that the total army film bill was about $400,000 in 1939. Bookings are handled through the nearest exchange center and usually are for only $10 to $25. The army makes a small admission charge to motion picture performances. However this admission fee is usually much lower than that asked by theatres.

Navy Has Central Office

The Navy, unlike the army, handles all its film business through a central office. A regular exchange has been set up at the Brooklyn Navy Yard. The Navy rents two prints of each picture made by the major companies and sends them on its own circuit. Because ships are at sea for long periods and some shore bases are thousands of miles from New York, it is estimated that it takes a print about a year to go over the "Navy circuit." All prints are returned to the major companies after the Navy is through with them.

For the year ending June 30, 1939, the Navy paid a total of $343,000 for its film. Of this total Congress contributed $85,000 and the rest came from profits made by the ships' stores accruing from purchases made by sailors. Congress this session refused to contribute an additional $50,000 for the rental of entertainment motion pictures for the Navy.

With the Navy slowly expanding it was reported that it would probably spend more and more money for films but that on account of the rapid expansion the Army would spend several times the 1939 film rental total during the coming year.

Typical of the best film facilities in YMCA Army and Navy centers is San Diego where three film shows are given each week to a total of about 1,000 sailors. Unlike the army the YMCA makes no charge for its film entertainment, feeling that it is part of the service offered by the organization. Costs are met by the endowment and voluntary contributions.

Last year there were 12,000,000 visitors to the YMCA Army and Navy recreation centers. This coming year with over a million men in service the YMCA hopes to expand all its facilities, including those for motion pictures, at an equal rate.

Miss Eleanor Wilson, Army and Navy Department of the National Council of the YMCA, said the department was 50 years old and that of the 28 non-governmental agencies which functioned in a similar capacity during the World War, the YMCA was the only one which has been in constant operation and with plans ready for any emergency.

Motion picture entertainment which the YMCA will offer this year in its own centers near military establishments or in the camps, when requested by the commanding officer, will be handled, at least in part, by the organization's motion picture bureau which has been functioning for many years.

Extensive 16mm Library

The film bureau of the YMCA, headed by George Jay Zehrung, director, and Alfred L. Frederick, associate director, is at present one of the largest sources of 16mm film in the country and has many subjects available which could be used to entertain the draftees.

Mr. Zehrung pointed out that the YMCA film bureau which has over 10,000 organizations using its services does not rent films in competition with theatres. He said that films are never rented to itinerant showmen or to dealers so that the distribution can be accurately controlled. The organization, he added, recognizes the importance of the motion picture exhibitor in his community. It believes that films, however, can help other organizations such as schools, clubs, churches and the like, accomplish their purpose.

The aim, Mr. Zehrung said, was to make the film shows put on by organizations attractive, yet not competitive to regular motion picture theatres. The Motion Picture Bureau makes from 75,000 to 85,000 bookings a year, with exhibitors in all the States. More than half of the bureau's customers, 58 percent, are educational institutions, with high schools and grade schools the largest users of the 16mm subjects. Churches, clubs and industries each furnish about seven percent of the total bookings. Local YMCA organizations furnish over three percent of the bookings.

The YMCA film service handles hundreds of subjects of all kinds, including commercials, and educational and amusement pictures. In some cases as many as 40 prints are kept in circulation on a single reel. The large library of subjects will be available for use in the YMCA's clubs which will service military camps this year.

The bulk of the entertainment films shown to the men called to service, however, will probably be current major company booked in the usual manner by the individual Army post. It was said that some special plan may be formed to supply prints in large numbers and at less than the usual cost to the Army camps. At any rate it was said that there is little prospect that increased revenue from additional Army bookings of prints will offset the loss in revenue resulting from large numbers of men leaving civilian life for the period of a year.

Indications that motion picture activities on Army and Navy bases would be restricted was given this week by the announcement that permission to photograph any base in the Third Naval District which includes New York must come from the commanding officer of the base or ship.

ALTEC TO SUPPLY ARMY SOUND

Altec Service Corporation in New York has been selected by the United States Veterans Administration to provide sound service and supply both sound and projection booths and parts for the projection equipment in the government's 91 veterans hospitals of which there is at least one in every state. Colonel J. B. Dester represented the Veterans Administration in the negotiations. The contract is for ten years.

L. W. Conrow, Altec president, reported that the hospitals give a quality of film entertainment comparable to the best theatres.

Marguerite Clark Dead

Marguerite Clark, star of silent films, died Wednesday afternoon at the Leroy Sanitorium, New York, of pneumonia. She had been in the hospital five days.

Beetson in Active Charge

The Producers Association has placed Fred Beetson, president, in active charge of Central Casting Corporation. Howard Philbrick is general manager.

NEW YORK PUBLIC TELLS DUMONT IT WANTS HOLLYWOOD FILMS TELECAST

Poll of Receiver Owners Shows Preference for Newsreels, Cartoons and Features; Mutual Gets License for New Station

Television programs featuring motion pictures are favored by one-third of the metropolitan New York television audience, according to the announcement Monday of the results of a survey made by the program department of the Allen B. DuMont Laboratories, television affiliate of Paramount Pictures.

Elsewhere in television, Bamberger Broadcasting Service which owns WOR, key radio station of the Mutual Network, has been authorized by the Federal Communications Commission to erect a television station in New York City and the Atlantic Refining Company, through its agent, N. W. Ayer & Son, will sponsor telecasts of all home football games of the University of Pennsylvania over W3XP, Philco's television transmitter in Philadelphia.

Program Preferences Asked

About 700 owners of DuMont television receivers, dealers and stores in 24 communities in New York, Long Island and New Jersey were asked to indicate their preferences in the matter of television programs in the survey made by Will Baltin, program director of W2XWV, DuMont station in New York. About 50 percent of the questionnaires were returned, it was reported.

Preferences of those voting for film telecasts show that the motion picture newsreel was the favorite in film entertainment. 71 percent voted for newsreels; 53 percent for two-reel comedies; 42 percent for feature-length pictures and 30 percent for cartoons.

A demand for an increased program service predominated the responses, with an especial plea for more news pickups, particularly sports, according to Mr. Baltin. A great majority favored variety studio programs while others asked for more shows with feminine appeal during matinee presentations, it was said.

Poll participants were asked to mark their choices of the following types of programs: variety, short dramas, educational telecasts, athletic events, news pickups, children's shows and movie shorts. Of those responding, 82 percent favored sports pickups; 60 percent asked for variety programs; 48 percent voted for news pickups; only 32 percent favored motion pictures.

On the question: "How many hours a day would you like to see programs televised?" 65 percent favored six hours daily; 10 percent suggested eight hours daily and a small number demanded a 12 hour daily service. The most popular viewing hours were listed as 2 to 5 p. m. and 7 to 10 p. m.

Viewers were questioned as to the desirability of short or long individual programs. 58 percent favored short programs; 25 percent didn't mind if the telecasts were long or short.

Boxing was singled out as the most desirable sports event on the television screen. Asked what sports programs they preferred, televiewers were almost unanimously in favor of fisticuffs. 92 percent voted for boxing; 60 percent for football; 42 percent for racing.

Results obtained in the poll will form the basis for building up a program schedule for the DuMont television station which is scheduled to begin regular operation sometime this Winter.

CONTROL OF RADIO IN WAR STUDIED

Proposals for the defense coordination of communications now awaiting the approval of President Roosevelt will call for no immediate control of broadcasting or other activities but only for the development of "paper plans" which will be placed under lock and key, for application only in the event the United States becomes involved in war, it was disclosed this week by James L. Fly, chairman, of the Federal Communications Commission.

At the same time, Mr. Fly emphasized that there is no intent to set up any dictatorship over the radio industries or to set up a new and expensive agency. The work of developing war plans, he said, will be carried out by a committee on which will be representatives of the various Federal agencies interested and of the several branches of the industry.

J. R. Poppele, chief engineer of WOR, announced, following word from Washington that the FCC had officially affirmed its tentative grant of a television construction made last June 18th, that the new station would be on the air within six to nine months. A television studio will be constructed at 1440 Broadway where the radio station has its main office. The location of the transmitter where an auxiliary studio will be located has not been selected but it was said that it may be at 444 Madison Avenue, site of the company's new FM station.

Four in New York Area

When the WOR television station goes on the air there will probably be four operating in the New York area: NBC's W2XBS, CBS's W2XAX, W2XWV, the DuMont station and the Bamberger station. Mr. Poppele said that a daily program of four hours, two in the afternoon and two in the evening, is planned.

Present television sets will require adjustments before they can receive the WOR station. However since all the receivers will have to be adjusted anyway, no difficulty is seen in this point. It was said that all television equipment manufactured in the future will be able to receive the new television frequencies, including the number 6 band (92-102 mc.) on which the WOR station will operate. 1,000 watt power will be used.

A minimum of one hundred thousand dollars has been set aside by WOR for the initial television operations, Mr. Poppele said. An extensive research and experimentation in the technical, program and production problems of the new medium will be carried on, he added.

WOR's plans for television research include tests of both horizontal and vertical antennas. Engineers will experiment with the transmission of images of 441-507-585-637 and 729 lines, using from 15 to 30 frames per second. Through such comparative experimentation, WOR hopes to be able to furnish data that will be of aid in developing and determining standards for the television industry, Mr. Poppele said. Among the technical problems to be investigated by WOR in addition to line structure, are flicker, eye fatigue, noise interference, smoothness of motion, smearing of moving objects, sharpness of detail and general quality of images.

WOR's television activities date back to 1928, Mr. Poppele pointed out. In that year one of the technical sensations of the day was the television demonstration which WOR conducted at the Bamberger store in Newark. A 2-minute puppet play, with synchronized sound, was transmitted from one room in the store in a hall in the same building where an audience of newspapermen and other guests saw the image on a three-inch screen.

To Telecast Football

All the home football games of the University of Pennsylvania will be telecast by W3XE, Philcos, Philadelphia station through a tieup with the Atlantic Refining Company. The sound part of the program will feature Bill Slater's description which is carried in the Atlantic radio program. N. W. Ayer & Son, advertising agent, is working out program details with Philco.

The first of the six games will be telecon October 5th. The Ayer agency plans to synchronize commercial announcements with rest periods. Special visual ads, featuring the sponsor's products are planned.

A platform for the television cameras will be suspended from the south balcony of Franklin Field. A crew of ten engineers will handle the programs. Signals will be carried by coaxial cable to the relay transmitter, W3XP, atop Convention Hall and sent to the regular Philco transmitter, W3XE. Power of 10 kilowatts will be used and 525 lines instead of the former standard of 441. It is hoped that the series of outdoor pick-ups under varying weather conditions will give information of value in determining the best standards for television, as well as data on program technique.

Paul Raibourn, Paramount's television coordinator, issued a week ago Thursday the following comment on the color television developed by the Columbia Broadcasting System: "The system of color television which Adrian Murphy and Dr. Peter Goldmark have developed for CBS represents a significant advance in the television art. The patient and precise engineering and the careful development of technique which it took to bring the system to its present standard are to be as much admired as that of Dr. Nees and Mannes and Dogowsky on Kodachrome and Dr. Herbert Kalmus and his staff on Technicolor."

Committee Debates Color

Meanwhile the National Television Systems Committee, the all-industry group formed to adopt standards to be submitted to the FCC, was considering the added problems created by the demonstration of the CBS color television. It was reported, however, that no delay beyond the January 1st date for the final committee report, was expected.

Last week NBC's W2XBS was on the air again, having switched from the old to the new number one television channel. It was pointed out by engineers that, although the major part of the work had been completed on schedule, the transmitter was not ready for regular program operation. No date for resumption of program operations has been announced. It was reported that NBC officials were considering the possibility of remaining off the air until some standards are set so that receivers will not require two adjustments.

An amateur television station is scheduled to be dedicated on Friday at the New York World's Fair. Arthur H. Lynch, managing director of W2USA Radio Club, a non-profit organization interested in the Fair's amateur radio station, said "we are doing with television exactly what amateurs do with telegraphy."

American Picture Market "Over There" from War to War

Twenty-five years of evolution in selling Hollywood to the World

WORLD WAR I shifted the international capital of film trading from London to New York and, coupled with the emerging importance of the feature picture, revolutionized foreign selling methods and opened up the foreign market to its highly profitable subsequent development.

Nineteen fifteen, like 1940, brought the crystallization of an important change in world operations. In 1915 there existed a rich and unrealized market with substantially no marketing machinery for American pictures. In 1940 the American industry controls a distribution system which extends to the remote parts of the earth and is adjusting itself to the extensive contraction of war-lost marketing areas.

The distribution of American pictures in export territories has followed somewhat the general pattern of domestic distribution, but until the American industry geared its foreign distribution to the speed of the American exchange system, foreign distribution lagged from a few months to several years behind American operations.

In 1915 foreign film trade was changing over from the method of selling pictures by the positive foot, with virtually no territorial restrictions, to the licensing of pictures on a royalty basis to individual territories. London was the world marketplace. There the established American companies maintained sales representatives, and buyers from all over the world bought their prints. Ten cents a foot was the standard price, although the more desirable pictures brought a higher price. Gradually custom established minimum print buys and the royalty, represented by positive print profit, was increased in proportion to the increased print buy.

"Quo Vadis" and "Cabiria", the Italian made spectacles, had pioneered the merchandising of pictures on a territorial royalty basis, and the American feature motion picture fell quickly into that merchandising channel.

UNIVERSAL was the first of the American companies to establish its own exchanges in foreign territories. The other program companies of 1915 sold positive prints. Famous Players marketed its product early as a trademarked program unit, but it was not until 1918 that it began to absorb, under direct operation, the independent agencies which had been established in foreign territories for Famous Players pictures.

The sale of foreign rights on the basis of positive footage disappeared with the abandonment of program selling in the United States.

In 1915 the American industry, as a whole, had little appreciation of the profitable overseas potentialities of its product, and the sale of total "world rights" of the complete output of the established American companies was not unusual.

Shortly after 1915 the foreign film trade became an increasingly important factor in the financing of American production. When the First National Exhibitors Circuit made its deal with Chaplin for eight pictures at $1,075,000, William Vogel was reported to have underwritten 40 per cent of the deal and to have advanced more than half of the deposit money for foreign rights.

Then came the 20's. Famous Players had recaptured substantially all of its foreign distribution. Metro - Goldwyn - Mayer was organized and became aggressively active internationally. First National was on the ascendency. The United Artists group early established widespread foreign distribution.

The war had cut off, in 1914, the German and Austria-Hungarian territories, and the revolution had eliminated Russia as a market, so that the era of expansion of foreign trade was stimulated after the Versailles Treaty by an intensive development of the vast areas of Central Europe which now again have been lost to the American industry. Russia was never recaptured.

THE contrasting methods of selling which existed in 1915 make it almost impossible to calculate the dollar value of export sales. Royalty was the difference between the cost and sales price of positive prints, and it accumulated in the ratio of the number of prints sold, and the number of prints sold reflected, generally, the popularity of the subject. Even after the sale of territorial rights on a royalty basis was established as a practice, custom maintained a premium price on export prints for many territories.

However, by the time that pictures generally were marketed abroad on a royalty basis or by direct distribution, foreign revenue stabilized itself at approximately twenty percent of the domestic gross and increased during the 1920's to nearly thirty percent.

Sound, with its problems of language and increasing governmental restrictions in important territories, brought a drop in the curve of foreign income, but the ingenuity with which American production was adapted for foreign exhibition, plus rapidly expanding consumer markets in the English-speaking territories, sent foreign grosses up to thirty, then thirty-five percent, to a point where early in 1939, foreign income was estimated at the rate of ninety million dollars a year, nearly three times the total film rental of the entire American business of 1915.

WHILE the international business of the motion picture has multiplied in these twenty-five years and has increased more rapidly percentage-wise than the domestic business, its growth has been beset with handicaps more serious than the natural obstacles of racial psychology, language and geographical distance. Sensing the influence of the American picture on general commerce, and with a hope of fostering national production by hobbling competition, country after country set up difficult trade barriers in the form of kontingents, quotas and other restrictions to a degree which, in some territories, made American operations almost profitless. Germany established the first trade barriers with the kontingent to be followed by various other forms of official obstacles throughout continental Europe, subsequently to be followed by the British quota system. Then followed, out of the world's monetary chaos, currency export restrictions which beset foreign film operations equally with general foreign trade.

Down the years of expansion of the foreign markets of the film industry are many conspicuous names, some of them now forgotten and some still familiarly known. Among them are William Vogel, David P. Howells, Emil E. Shauer, Hyman Winik, E. Bruce Johnson, Edna Williams, Ben Blumenthal, Millard Johnson, Louis Auerbach, Winfield Sheehan, John Cecil Graham, Walter Hutchinson, Ernest Mattson, Ike Blumenthal, Juan Kunzler, J. Bryson, Al Aaronson, Herman Wobber, Arthur Levy, Robert Schless, Horace Clarke, Karl MacDonald, Jacob Glucksman, Jacques Barnstyn, Clayton Sheehan, Abe Berman, Maurice Silverstone, Edward R. Russell, Harry Rowson, Nate Manheim.

Overseas operations are now under the general direction of the following: Paramount, John W. Hicks; Twentieth Century-Fox, Walter J. Hutchinson; Warner Brothers, Joseph Hummel; Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Arthur Loew; RKO Radio, Phil Reisman; Universal, Joseph Seidelman; United Artists, Arthur Kelly; Columbia, Joseph McConville; Monogram, Norton V. BRITISH INDUSTRY READJUSTS TO CARRY ON AS TOTAL WAR EXPLODES

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

The cataclysmic suddenness with which Hitler's aerial blitzkrieg has burst over Britain, in particular over the capital itself, has called upon the trade once again to a more serious consideration of the constant wartime problem of adjustment. Since the first raid warning on September 3, 1939, the process of adjustment to worsening conditions has gone on, and the industry has survived with less war wounds than the most optimistic had believed possible. Now, with the battle at its toughest, and with worse almost certainly to follow, new problems arise.

Most Theatres Open

Despite constant day and night raids on London and other industrial and tactical centres, despite damage, dislocation, and deathrolls, British picture theatres—save probably some 150 or so, the majority of which had already closed down before the recent flareup—remain open. In the affected areas, the Midlands, the North, and the Metropolis, earlier closing now operates. With the advent of winter and the likelihood that the raids, which normally start between eight and nine in the evening, will commence earlier as the evenings lengthen, the closing hour, in general around nine in the bombed districts, and ten-thirty elsewhere, will be set forward.

It would seem inevitable that an entirely new trading condition, adjustable according to area and circumstance, will be devised by the British exhibitor. The theatre going habits of the British patronage are suffering a natural change with the logical preoccupation with the question of shelter from air raid and of personal survival.

Equally clear is it that "adjustment" rather than sheer "abandonment" is the watchword. There can be no question of an utter and wholesale closing down. Numerically the cinemas affected are in a minority. They may swell their ranks. In the long run, when full measure has been taken and picture houses have set their procedure to meet the changed and changing circumstances, trade will still be operating and the vast majority of British cinema patrons will be patronising cinemas.

Invasion and other explosive forces are, of course, on the tapis. Nobody can hope to forecast their courses or assess their intensity. Whatever the conditions, the imperturbable, stolid, phlegmatic character of the British people is a factor the vital importance of which cannot and must not be ignored. Only immediate and local danger will interfere with their normal routine.

The Government attitude to cinemas in particular has been expressed by the Chancellor of the Exchequer, who in putting before Parliament the new theatre tax scale, insisted that he had no intention of discouraging cinemagoing, made it abundantly clear that he and his government realized the important role fulfilled by the picture house. The War Office, which recently has appointed vaudeville impresario George Black as an Honorary Advisor on Entertainment, has likewise given public voice to its belief in the significance and importance of entertainment in sustaining military and civil morale. Entertainment was, to quote the War Office, to play a role against Hitler, in the Battle of Boredom.

COMPLETE WITH TRAILER

George Bernard Shaw is making a trailer in London for "Major Barbara", Gabriel Pascal production which is based on Mr. Shaw's play of the same name. The film, now being edited and scored, will be released by United Artists this fall.

That trade in the generality will suffer, and suffer considerably, is certain. That it will go on, and that picture houses will operate and people frequent them, even in the face of attack from sea, land and air, is equally certain, though it may be less easy to believe for those who do not know the English temperament.

Two-Thirds Unaffected

Consideration of the situation in terms of the recent past and immediate present must of necessity take two forms: the situation as regards London, the Midlands, the North, and certain other areas, and the situation as regards the greater untouched areas of Great Britain.

Probably at least two-thirds of the country's theatres are unaffected by the more urgent and catastrophic facts of the War. They represent rural areas, West Country towns, Southern districts, Welsh and West Scottish regions. Cinemagoing, far from dropping there has, by reason of evacuation, greatly increased. That it will be affected in the not far distant future by the worsening of the War situation and the likelihood of an enemy attempt at invasion is probable—in some cases certain. These areas, however, have not considerably been affected by the present emergencies.

London, the Midlands and the industrial North, have been and are suffering from the continued bombing raids. The Eastern and South Eastern coasts, with the country immediately behind, are greatly affected by evacuation and military restrictions. Here conditions are likely to worsen.

Suffered from Raids

The former group have suffered gravely from bombing raids. London, which only recently has felt the full force of Hitler's merciless blitzkrieg, which, whatever its intentions or motives, has succeeded mainly in devastating working class areas and rendering vast numbers of people homeless, is not necessarily the worst sufferer in intensity. It is the worst in extent, and numerically. The Dockside areas of the East, and working class suburbs in South East and South West London, have been bombed without mercy or regard. Probably thousands of homes have been destroyed, cinemas have been damaged, and whole areas because of the dangers of collapsing buildings, and the incalculable perils of delayed action bombs, roped off and virtually evacuated. It is no exaggeration to say that as far as picture house trade is concerned the East End is, for the time being, dead.

Over the Greater London area, however, cinemagoing as an evening habit has virtually ceased for the time being. With regular nightly bombing raids the first consideration of the picture house patron is to get home before the sirens sound, or to seek shelter at the first alarm. The West End, which used to see nightly invasions of pleasure seekers, bent on visiting the cinemas of Leicester Square and Piccadilly, now sees invasions of homeless East Enders, queuing up, not outside the Plaza or the Empire, but outside the vast underground shelters of Regent Street and Oxford Street.

With trade so affected, and entertainment habits so altered, it is not surprising that West End cinemas have considered closing at six, and that all picture houses in the London area have decided on a nine o'clock curfew.

Even this nine o'clock curfew is criticised by exhibitors, who say that those cinemas which are affected take no money at all after six o'clock, and that those which have patrons at nine will still have them at eleven.

Meanwhile, though the principle of complete closing has been considered by the authorities, it is the fact that for the time being no change is contemplated, that the Home Office and the Police believe cinemas should continue to operate and thus help to sustain public morale.

London theatres have now been allowed to open at 3:00 p. m. on Sundays.

Curfews Voluntary

The conciliatory attitude of the authorities who in the vast majority of cases have left the matter of opening and closing hours to the good sense of exhibitors, is taken as an indication of the official feeling towards the cinema trade. In some cases a curfew has been insisted upon by the local authorities; in the vast majority of instances the trade has been invited to devise its own formula.

First big move towards earlier closing was taken in the heavily bombed Midlands, where approaches were made by the local authorities in the direction of a general nine o'clock curfew. A wholesale edict was opposed by the exhibitors. Now Birmingham, Kidderminster and Smethwick, have been ordered to observe a nine o'clock curfew. Further North, Leeds and Manchester have agreed upon nine-thirty and ten o'clock closing respectively. In both cases collaboration between the Police Department and the cinemas has been responsible. Liverpool is likely to agree upon a nine o'clock close down.

It is found that where programs have been adjusted appropriately, early closing has brought about improved trade. In one Sussex town, Lewes, the patrons themselves have plumped for a nine o'clock curtain, if the shows are so arranged that they can see the whole programme.

Those exhibitors who have had to close down as a result of conditions are finding the Kinematograph Renters Society amenable to pleas for adjustment and have in the main succeeded without effort in being let out from contracts they obviously cannot fulfill.

Five Minutes for Propaganda

British exhibitors continue to allot the Government five minutes from each programme to screen propaganda. The Ministry of Information's five minute films are shown in most British cinemas. They reach a weekly audience of 25,000,000 and at a rate of £1 per minute are netting the Ministry £25,000 of screen time each week gratuitously.

With the prospect of damage to communications and transport British picture house owners are increasingly concerning themselves with the question of emergency film supplies. From Bristol has come a demand for both more dumps and more films in them, a demand which is being echoed from more than one point of the compass.

In the studios around bombed London this week no less than eight films are in active production—a figure higher than for many weeks past.

What the future holds it would be invidious to forecast.

PRESS, EXHIBITORS DEVELOP LOCAL THEATRE DIRECTORIES, FREE AND PAID

But Amusement Rates Remain Generally Higher, Survey of 32 Cities Shows; National, Local Rates Show Variation

Motion picture theatre newspaper advertising rates are still generally higher than local retail or general rates it is shown in a first hand survey of 32 cities but the development of daily motion picture directories, the principal change of late in exhibitor press relations, in some cases is bringing special, more favorable deals.

The high amusement advertising rates set in earlier days on the grounds that entertainment enterprises lacked stability are still being defended by publishers with the arguments that theatres receive "free publicity" and their ads have "preferred position." Exhibitors claim that editorial matter on pictures and film personalities have greater reader interest for newspapers and that it is also to the paper's advantage to place all the theatre ads together on the amusement page.

Loew Directory in New York

Loew's theatres in New York started in July their own paid newspaper film directory, listing attractions at all their neighborhood houses. The newspaper budget was increased $300,000 for the purpose. It was estimated that the new policy will save patrons $100,000 in telephone calls each year. The weekly mailing piece Loew's Weekly, which had a peak circulation of 1,200,000 and cost of $400,000 was discontinued. Loew officials predicted that the participating newspapers will help promote the directory because it will be a circulation builder for them. Newspapers in some other cities have already made a similar decision and run directories of all theatres in the area.

With the Loew New York daily theatre directory now appearing in seven of the city's nine daily newspapers, averaging 4,500,000 daily and 7,500,000 Sunday circulation, and with an extension made this week to list both current and the following week's bookings each Wednesday, the idea is beginning to take hold elsewhere in the city.

Loew's competitive Skouras Metropolitan Theatres, last Friday started publishing a daily guide to its current pictures, in the New York Daily Mirror and Evening Journal-American. These two papers will serve as tests, the results of which will determine whether Skouras will extend to other local dailies. Listed are the Skouras houses in Manhattan, Bronx, Westchester, Long Island and New Jersey, appearing with daily advertisement for the circuit's Academy of Music, at Union Square.

Local, National Rates Vary

In addition to the variation between the general advertising and the amusement rates most newspapers charge different prices for local and national film advertising. There is no general rule; some papers asks less for nationally placed ads, others more. The film companies generally print newspaper ads at the lower rate in each city. The local rate guarantees a position on the amusement page; the national rate on the amusement page or the page opposite it.

Highlights in the motion picture theatre newspaper advertising rate survey are:

Two Baltimore papers have an exchange deal with members of the local exhibitors' organization: a free film "ad calendar" is published and the theatres show a trailer advertising a newspaper feature.

In Chicago exhibitors buy a listing in newspaper directories at less than the regular amusement rates.

The price is from 15c and 30c a line for the Philadelphia paid theatre directories.

Neighborhood theatres in New York are charged from 3c to 69c less than the regular amusement rate, depending on the newspaper. PM lists free 200 theatres, including admission prices and starting times.

San Francisco newspapers charge from 40c to 60c per line for listings in neighborhood directories.

In Denver theatres that advertise are listed in the daily "Where to Go" column.

Free Guide in Atlanta

The Atlanta papers run a free theatre guide.

The regular amusement rate in Scranton is 18c a line.

The Richmond, Va., paper lists shows at first run theatres gratis. The amusement rate is the same as the general rate, with the scale starting at $2.25 per inch.

Two Oregon papers list on week days neighborhood houses which buy one inch ads in the Sunday editions.

The full amusement rate is charged for listing in the Milwaukee theatre directories.

Only one of the three St. Louis papers charges less than the regular amusement rate for the neighborhood theatre listings.

A variety of free directories and time-tables are carried without charge to the exhibitor by the Providence papers.

Columbus and Cincinnati newspapers run theatre advertising on one page but no directory form is used.

English-speaking theatres are listed in San Antonio, Texas, as a convenience to readers.

Daily directories are run free for theatres that advertise in Wilkes-Barre.

Special theatre-newspaper contracts have been worked out in Buffalo.

The two daily papers in Delaware carry a "Theatre Guide" for which there is no charge to theatremen.

Theatres which use two inches or more of display advertising each week are listed in the Dallas newspapers.

Theatres in Lincoln, Neb., can place no ad of less than 2 inches. Theatres which spend over $60 are entitled to space in the Sunday pictorial layout.

Theatre, Newspaper Tie-up in Baltimore

Directories of pictures playing at motion picture theaters in Baltimore, Md., are carried without charge in four newspapers in that city: Evening Sun, News-Post, Sunday American and Sunday Sun. Through a tie-up with the Motion Picture Theater Owners of Maryland, Inc., of which Frank A. Hornig is president, the daily calendar in the evening News-Post and the weekly calendar in the Sunday American carry only those theater members of the organization.

In return for the calendar published daily and weekly in these two Hearst newspapers, each theater listed runs a trailer several times a day advertising some feature in those newspapers. The Evening Sun and the Sunday Sun carry a daily and weekly calendar made up in three parts. Heading the column are the first runs and three theaters with occasional first runs; the second part includes members of the MPTOA of Maryland, Inc., and the third contains other theaters not members of the Maryland organization. The Morning Sun does not carry any listing except paid advertising. The Evening Sun and Sunday Sun receive nothing from theaters in return for the listings given, amounting to one column per day and two columns each Sunday. This directory is carried in the eighth column of the last classified page daily and the seventh and eighth columns of the last classified page on Sundays.

There is no connection or tie-up between the motion picture directories in the Baltimore newspapers and the advertising paid space.

Special Directory Rates In Some Chicago Papers

Several of the Chicago newspapers have motion picture directories for which prices less than the regular amusement rate are charged. The Chicago Tribune charges in its directory $1.25 per agate line Daily and $1.55 on Sundays for downtown theatres and 95c and $1.30 for outlying and suburban houses. On a yearly contract basis the prices are 94c, $1.29 and 79c and $1.09. The general "run of paper" amusement rate is $1.00 daily and $1.10 Sundays. The general display advertising rate is $1.30 daily and $1.55 Sundays. The Tribune has five special metropolitan sections on Sunday, with the retail rate ranging from 18c to 27c per agate line in a single edition but theatre advertising is not accepted.

The Chicago Daily News rates are as follows: Motion Picture directory, Loop theatres, 75c per line and outlying theatres 65c. The amusement rate is 75c. Motion picture companies (producers and distributors) are charged 90c in the general advertising rates. Local display advertising costs 55c.

Downtown theatres pay 75c per line daily and 80c Sundays in the Chicago Herald-American. Theatres outside the loop pay 65c and 60c. The regular retail rate is 55c.

The rate is 45c for downtown houses in The Times and 35c for other theatres. The regular amusement rate is 50c per line. The local rate is 40c, discounted to 33c. The open rate on general display advertising is 50c.

Paid Directory Lists Theatres in Philadelphia

All the Philadelphia newspapers, daily and Sundays, carry neighborhood and circuit theatre directories on the amusement page, with separate slugs for the Warner theatres and the

NEWSPAPER ADDS TO THEATRE PAGE

After six years of negotiations, downtown New Haven theatres have succeeded in gaining concessions for a more complete and attractive theatre page in the evening New Haven Register. A Sunday composite art layout was a recent concession to the first-runs, and this same art space will be granted on Wednesdays as well. Short daily readers will be eliminated and a more comprehensive reader will run on Thursdays. Special feature news will be used on Mondays and syndicated Hollywood columns Wednesdays and Sundays. Bingo and restaurant ads will be eliminated from the amusement page. Exhibitors in the territory have found Bingo stiff competition.

PRESS IS COOPERATIVE

independents. The rates vary with each paper. The Record charges a flat rate of 20c per agate line for both the daily and Sunday editions for the directories as compared to the display amusement rates of 50c a line for the daily and 60c for the Sunday edition. The general advertising rates vary greatly according to contract and department but generally average the same as the amusement display rates.

The Inquirer also charges a flat 20c rate for directories, but insists upon seven consecutive insertions, the rate being the same for the daily and Sunday. Display amusement rates are 65c a line in the daily and $1 in the Sunday on a flat rate, no contract rates offered. General advertising rates vary on contract with an average flat rate of 55 cents a line.

The Ledger cites 30c a line as the flat rate for directories with 48c a line for display amusement ads, the general advertising rates averaging 45c a line.

The Daily News charges only 15c a line but stipulates that each theatre carry a screen credit, usually a slide calling attention to the fact that the theatre advertises its coming attractions in the Daily News and suggesting that patrons read that newspaper. Display amusement rates are 45c a line flat, general advertising rates at 40c per line with the sports department getting 50c a line and all political advertising 75c a line.

The Bulletin, which is conceded to have the best home delivery service, makes no distinction between the display and classified directory, charging a flat rate of 65c a line for both, which is the same as the general advertising rate.

At the height of the season, as many as 120 neighborhood houses, including suburban theatres, are included in the independent directory while the Warner listing lists as many as 70 circuit houses, including the suburban theatres.

Neighborhood Prices On New York Papers

In New York City the amusement rates are as follows: Times $1.10 per line, 60c neighborhood; Post, 33c, 30c; Sun, 62c, 50c; Tribune, 71c, 48c; Daily Mirror, 80c, 55c; World-Telegram, 80c, 65c; Daily News, $1.60 and 91c.

Loew's theatre directory is carried in the Journal-American, Post, World-Telegram, Times and Sun. The directory replaces the Weekly of which at one time 1,200,000 copies were distributed. However about 6,000 telephone calls had been made to Loew neighborhood theatres by patrons who apparently did not read the Weekly. Special rates, amount to 25 percent in some cases, were negotiated for the Loew directory.

PM, the new nickel-a-copy magazine newspaper, gives a full page to listing programs of 200 theatres daily. Information includes the starting time of shows after dinner and admission prices. As PM accepts no paid advertising, exhibitors pay nothing for this listing.

No Theatre Guide In New Haven Papers

Neither of the two dailies in New Haven have daily neighborhood theatre directories. About 20 of the 25 houses in town advertise daily in the evening Register, which has an amusement rate of $3.00 per inch daily, national, and Sunday. This compares with a flat rate of $2.50 per inch for general advertising. All the downtowns and a few of the neighborhood houses also advertise in the morning Journal-Courier, which has an amusement rate of $1.89 daily, and $2.24 national as compared with $1.54 per inch general, or lower on contract. Both these papers give free readers to all the downtowns, and a free art display on Sundays. The more important subsequents also receive the free readers. The weekly Theatre News, amusement guide for New Haven County, has an advertising rate of $1.50 per inch, but each issue carries full listing of programs of all theatres in New Haven, East and West Haven, Hamden, Waterbury, Ansonia, Cheshire, Clinton, Deep River, Derby, Essex, Guildford, Madison, Meriden, Naugatuck, Saybrook, Seymour, Wallingford, and Watertown. This service to readers is free to theatres, regardless of whether or not they advertise in the magazine.

Bridgeport and Worcester papers carry a time-table of features of the downtowns.

40¢ to 60¢ Scale in San Francisco Papers

All San Francisco newspapers carry daily neighborhood theatre directories of pictures playing. Agate line rates are as follows:

Neighborhood Directories: Examiner, 48 cents (62 cents Sunday); Chronicle, 35 (40 Sunday); News, 42; Call-Bulletin, 42.

Regular amusement: Examiner, 60 cents (85 cents Sunday); Chronicle, 40 (45 Sunday); News, 60; Call-Bulletin, 60.

General ad rate, national: Examiner, 50 cents (60 cents Sunday); Chronicle, 32 (39 Sunday); News, 30; Call-Bulletin, 25.

General amusement rate, national: Examiner, 90 cents ($1.25 Sunday); Chronicle, 55 (60 Sunday); News, 52; Call-Bulletin, 60.

Denver Newspapers List Advertising Theatres

Both the Denver Post, evening, and the Rocky Mountain (Denver) News, morning, print a daily listing for those theatres carrying a regular schedule of advertising with them. If a theatre does not advertise, no listing is made in the "Where to Go."

The general rates on the News is 16 cents, while their rate for theatres is 17c daily and 25c Sunday.

No Movie Guide In Tampa Papers

The newspapers in Tampa, Florida do not have anything in the way of a daily directory of amusements. The theatres use display ads and there is an occasional "write-up." The Tribune, the morning paper, gives a column each Sunday to a list of pictures for the week in each house that advertises. There is no additional charge for this service.

$4.75 Minimum Ad Rate in Omaha

The Omaha World-Herald and weekly newspapers in the territory do not have theatre directories. The advertising rates for theatres in the World-Herald are from $4.75 to $5.65 per inch depending on the volume. The regular amusement rate is $6.40 per inch. The basic general advertising rate is $5.42 per inch Daily or Sunday.

Display Ads Used In Des Moines

Des Moines papers do not run daily neighborhood theatre directories. The large theatres run display ads regularly and a few small houses advertise only occasionally. The morning and evening papers are owned by the same company and some of the independent theatres alternate between the two. The RKO Orpheum and Tri-States use display ads in all issues.

Directories in All New Orleans Papers

All four New Orleans papers, two morning and two afternoon, carry daily directories of neighborhood theatres, including a list of United

Letters

MOTION PICTURE PRODUCERS AND DISTRIBUTORS OF AMERICA, INC.

For these 25 years our Art-Industry has been most fortunate in having the assistance, guidance and inspiration of Martin Quigley. Out of the warmth of his heart and the brilliance of his mind, he has given unstintedly of time and effort to help shape the course of motion pictures and make them one of the great social forces of our era.

On days that seemed dark and foreboding Martin Quigley's encouragement, counsel and strength of character helped and inspired us. On days when hardly a cloud could be seen he wisely cautioned us all against enervating self-satisfaction and complacency. His special aid in the development of the Production Code has been invaluable.

In all his endeavors he has had one thought—to promote the welfare of the motion picture as an art and as an industry. He has succeeded well and all of us unitedly pay grateful tribute to him on this occasion.

Twenty-five years are done. I know that he would be the last to say that the work is completed. In the days ahead the Art-Industry may feel secure in knowing that Martin Quigley will be working side by side with us all in behalf of motion pictures and of America.

Theatres, (16 houses) and a separate group of independents. Times-Picayune (morning) and its afternoon paper, New Orleans States, charge theaters general advertising rate of 40c agate line for morning, heavy circulation, and 30c for States with a 50c combination rate for both papers. New Orleans Item (afternoon) and its morning paper (Tribune-tabloid) have a "fly" rate which generally runs about 20 per cent under the Picayune.

Birmingham Suburban Rate Is 30¢ a Line

The newspaper advertising rates for the Birmingham News and Age-Herald is as follows: for classified neighborhood theatre directories, 30c an agate line; for regular amusement rate, 30c an agate line; general advertising rate, 30c an agate line if national advertising and 18c an agate line if local. The rate of the Birmingham Post is 18c for national and 10c per agate line for local advertising.

St. Louis Directories' Scale from 26¢ to 55¢

All three daily newspapers in St. Louis publish movie directories, rates ranging from 26c to 55c a line. First-run houses pay 55c a line in the Globe-Democrat; 47c in the Post-Pispatch and 38c a line in the Star-Times. Neighborhood houses pay 40c a line in the Globe-Democrat; 41c in the Post-Dispatch and 26c in the Star-Times. For enterprises, in which patrons amuse themselves, such as dances and picnics, the rate is about 37c on all papers. These amusement rates compare with other advertising rates as follows: Open local rate is between 26c and 42c, and national rate averages 49c. The newspapers also publish a directory listing attractions at the first-run houses with the time of each performance—gratis.

Free Theatre Guide In Atlanta Papers

Both The Atlanta Journal and the Atlanta Constitution run daily motion picture directories but they are not charged for as such. This is included in the amusement rate which is $3.82 per inch for both papers. One inch a week entitles any theater to a listing in the daily directory, although all of them run more space than this. The regular advertising rate for the Journal is $3.04 and The Constitution $2.94.

18¢ Film Advertising Rate in Scranton

Scranton advertising rates are as follows: Tribune (morning) regular amusement—18c per line and general advertising, 11c. The Times (afternoon) charges $1.54 per inch (12.83c per line) for general advertising and $2.00 per inch (16.66c per line). Both papers publish a theatre directory.

Gratis Theatre List In Richmond, Va.

The Times Dispatch, Richmond, Va., (morning) lists gratis the shows at first run theatres. It has the same amusement rate as the local scale, sliding according to the amount used, starting at $2.25 per inch. The News Leader (afternoon) has a daily calendar of all theatres, a free service, and also a weekly list of coming attractions at subsequent houses and colored theatres, also gratis.

Two Oregon Newspapers Publish Neighborhood List

Both the Portland Oregonian, and the Oregon Journal have daily neighborhood directories of pictures playing.

The Journal's amusement rate is $2.80 per inch daily, $2.94 Sunday. The general rate is $3.50 daily, $4.48 Sunday. The Journal has 15,000 more circulation than the Oregonian which charges $2.66 daily and $3.01 Sundays on its amusement rate and $3.50 daily and $4.48 Sunday for general.

Neighborhood houses buying one inch in the Sunday editions each week of both papers are listed gratis for seven days in the neighborhood directories.

Full Rate Guide In Milwaukee

Both the Milwaukee Journal and the Milwaukee Sentinel conduct theatre directories and in each instance the directory rate per agate line is the same as the regular amusement rate. The Journal charges a flat 35c per line rate for amusements, while the Sentinel charges 27c per line daily and 29c on Sundays.

In both instances this flat rate for theatre advertising is slightly higher than the papers' general advertising rates which are based on the number of lines used per month, the rate per line dropping as the number of lines used is increased.

The theatre guide in the Journal, an evening paper, lists practically all the houses in Milwaukee, while the Sentinel's guide numbers only some 25 theatres against the Journal's 71.

Neighborhood Listings In Indianapolis Papers

All three Indianapolis dailies have directories for neighborhood theatres, which are used by virtually all of the larger neighborhood houses.

The News charges 30c for general, directory or amusement; the Star 24c, general; 25c, directory and 25c, amusement; the Times 17c, general; 20c, directory, and 25c amusement.

Standard Size Ads In Pittsburgh Guides

Neighborhood theatre directories in the Pittsburgh papers are gradually growing larger. Neighborhood houses are charged by all three papers $1.00 per theatre for a minimum and maximum ad of 7 agate lines. The Press' rate for display amusement advertising, for local and national copy, is 50c per line. The Sun-Telegraph charges 45c a line for first-run national amusement copy, and $6 per inch (50c per line) for downtown theatre ads. The Post-Gazette's rates are 50c per line for local first-run advertising, 55c per line for nationally placed ads.

The Press carries from 32 to 36 independent theatre listings daily, plus 21 Warner neighborhood houses and the six Harris circuit theatres. The Post-Gazette runs the Warner and Harris ads but only about two-fifths as many from independent exhibitors. Pittsburgh exhibitors favor evening papers for their advertising. Surveys have shown that theatre ads in the three papers are seen by as many as four times as many readers as the news stories and reviews, it was reported.

20¢ Amusement Rate In Syracuse

The Syracuse, N. Y. Herald-Journal has an amusement rate of 20c per line, with a 28-line minimum for display ads.

Rate Is $1.50 In Little Rock

Newspapers in Little Rock, Ark., do not have daily neighborhood directories.

ALLIED STATES ASSOCIATION OF MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITORS

The quality of Mr. Quigley that most impresses me is his undeviating adherence to certain basic principles which, if generally recognized and adopted, would rescue the industry from its present predicament and put it in an unassailable position.

He has stood for wholesomeness and has opposed smut; he has stood for entertainment and has opposed propaganda; he has advocated selling pictures on their merits and has opposed forcing poor pictures on the public; he has looked upon motion pictures as an institution and has opposed an opportunism which would sacrifice future good will for a present gain.

I have observed that numerous publishers, executives and leaders have advocated many ideas that made little headway and were soon forgotten. The principles Mr. Quigley has stood for inevitably will prevail and will be the salvation of the industry.

largest paper charges $1.50 per inch daily and Sunday for amusement and $1.20 per inch daily and Sunday retail.

No Theatre Directory In Kansas City Papers

In Kansas City, Mo., neither the Star (which has the Times for its morning edition) nor the Journal run a directory of neighborhood movies. The Journal did for a time, but discontinued the practice some months ago; instead, it now carries a half-inch display listing of some of the neighborhood houses at $3.50 a week for daily insertions, in connection with which it provides occasional publicity (if the picture is especially good, even though it is second, third, or fourth run). Regular admission rate of the Journal is 50c agate line Sunday, 35c daily. This compares with open retail store rate (which is the basic rate) of 20c an agate line. The Star does not run a directory but carries advertisements on all neighborhood theatres.

Combined Rate of $2.50 in Salt Lake City

There are no neighborhood theatre directories in any of the Salt Lake City papers. The ad policy of the combined Salt Lake Tribune and Telegram calls for a minimum of two inches at $3.50 per inch, local amusement rate; the Desert News, a one inch minimum at $1.50 per inch.

Free Theatre Lists In Providence, R. I.

Providence, R. I. papers print a variety of theatre directories and time-tables without charge to the exhibitor and the advertising rate on the Journal and Bulletin for local advertisers is the same for all. There is no special amusement rate. The local rates are 18c per agate line in the Bulletin and 10c in the Journal. The combinated rate of 25c is used for ads placed in both papers.

The Saturday evening Bulletin lists the week's program for all exhibitors who send it in; the Sunday Journal gives a listing of second run attractions; schedules are also carried in the regular news columns of the suburban sections; the Journal (morning) and the Bulletin (evening) also list first run starting times and second run attractions.

No Cincinnati or Columbus Listings

The Columbus and Cincinnati newspapers run theatre advertising on one page but no directory form is used. The Cleveland newspapers group small ads of the members of the Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors Association but also have no regular directory.

Charlotte Contract Rate Is 10¢ a Line

The Charlotte (Va.) Observer charges 10c a line as a contract rate for local theatres; 17c a line is the "general rate." On Sunday the paper carries four full pages on theatres, including a complete directory. Theatres in nearby towns also have the week's program listed in the Sunday Observer.

No Directory In San Antonio

San Antonio papers do not carry paid directories of pictures at downtown or neighborhood theatres. The Express lists, as a convenience for its readers, pictures at English-speaking theatres. The regular amusement rates range from $2.25 per inch to $2.60 daily and $3.08 to $3.70 per inch Sunday. The local rates on the Light are $2.94, daily and $3.71 Sunday. The general advertising prices (open rate) are from 15c to 20c per agate line ($1.80 to $2.40 per inch).

Daily Schedules Published In Wilkes-Barre Newspapers

Wilkes-Barre papers use daily theatre schedules. The advertising rates in Wilkes-Barre are as follows: Record, amusement rate of $1.50 per inch and general $1.26; Times Leader, $2.40 and $1.96 per inch. Daily directories are run free for theatres which advertise. The contract rate for theatres is lower than the regular amusement rate. Although the papers recently announced a ban on commercial publicity this is reported not to apply to theatres because contracts are said to have a provision covering a certain amount of free space because of the high rate and big contract.

Neighborhood Lists Carried in Buffalo

The Buffalo papers, Courier-Express and Evening News, have daily neighborhood theatre directories. The Courier-Express offers a 52-week contract for Sunday for 1½ inches at $10.50 per inch, with six daily 1-inch ads per week gratis. The general rate for the amusement page is $3.50 per inch daily, $4.90, Sunday. Rates for other than neighborhood houses, general classification, $5 an inch daily and $7 Sunday. The News charges 40c per line with a special weekly rate of $7.35 which allows for double space on special occasions. The general advertising rate is 35c per line. It is reported that almost all theatres have arranged special contracts of one kind or another with the two newspapers.

Delaware "Theatre Guide" In Two Daily Newspapers

The two daily newspapers in the state of Delaware, the Journal-Every Evening and Wilmington Morning News, both owned and operated by the News-Journal Company. Both papers carry a daily directory, "Theatre Guide," for which there is no charge to theatremen. The combined advertising rate is 16c per line local and 20c national for amusements and a general advertising rate of 12c local and 16c national. It was reported that the amusement rate is higher than the general advertising rate because of the weekly amusement reader page (every Thursday in both papers), giving over a complete page to motion picture film readers, reviews and pictures plugging current and coming attractions. The size of advertising carried by the various theares has much to do in determining the size of these readers and mats, it was said. Advertising at a reduced rate for only one paper is not accepted.

Advertisers Listed In Three Dallas Papers

The three Dallas, Texas, papers, the Journal, Times-Herald and the Morning News, each list a theatre in their directory if two inches of display advertising is used each week. The amusement rate on the Journal is 16c a line open and 14c contract and the general rate is 18c. The Times-Herald charges $1.96 per inch for suburban theatres and $2.80 for downtown houses. The Morning News' rates are: amusement—29c per line, $4.06 per inch Sunday, for suburban; 25c a line and $3.50 for downtown and by contract 22c a line, daily and 26c Sunday. The general rate is 25c daily and 29c Sunday.

Mr. Quigley's fine conception of the problems of this industry and his faculty for putting them into understandable language has been an inspiration to me and to others. FANCHON AND MARCO SERVICE CORPORATION

No one individual has earned a more highly-esteemed place in the cinema sun than Martin Quigley, whose devotion of one quarter of a century to the steady improvement of motion pictures has had an indelible effect upon everyone concerned, upon matters ranging from sales policies governing distributor-exhibitor relationships, to the moral soundness of film product and the practical exploitation and publicizing of that product in theatres throughout the world.

His keen, clear mind, and honest criticisms, set forth in unmistakable print week in and week out, have given to us all the benefit of his pointed observations.

"Tearing down" is a common fault of many who find negative criticism an easy road to renown. Such is not a possession of Martin Quigley who writes without rancor or prejudice, whose criticisms pull no punches, yet which constantly strive to view matters from a constructive viewpoint.

Sentimental Journey among the Yesterdays of Hollywood

Places and Personalities around which the Movies Grew, Fought and Prospered

by ALFRED COHN

WE of the Los Angeles newspapers didn't give the movies much of a tumble in the early days. After all the Chamber of Commerce didn't bring 'em here, and they were regarded pretty much as a nuisance—a minor nuisance at that. They were always butting into parades, auto races, and other events which attracted masses of people. Yet the first company to come to Los Angeles—Hollywood wasn't invaded until 1911—provided us with a first-rate murder story. The director's name was Francis Boggs and he was slain by a demented Japanese studio gardener, who became obsessed with the idea that the camera was the operating base of evil spirits which had designs on his soul.

How Boggs happened to come to California, however, is worthy of brief reference. He was employed by Colonel Selig, the pioneer producer, who had his studio in Chicago. The winter of 1908 was pretty bad back there for outdoor shooting—the only kind there was then—, so Boggs was packed off with his troupe to seek shooting weather in New Orleans. There he again failed to locate the sun, so he put his company into a day coach and came to Los Angeles. That started the invasion. The first picture ever made in California was "The Heart of a Race Track Tout," which Boggs shot one afternoon at the old Santa Anita Race Track, hard by the new lavishly upholstered racing plant of the same name. It was the last meet at the historic old Lucky Baldwin course, as racing in California was outlawed that year.

Asked to Write Feature On Blanche Sweet

In the early months of 1915 I was asked by Julian Johnson, editor of Photoplay Magazine in Chicago, to do a story on Blanche Sweet. I felt such an assignment was quite beneath the dignity of a night city editor, until I learned that the reward would be equivalent to an entire week's salary. So dignity was waived. Theretofore my only acquaintance with the movies had been meager. For some time I had watched the copy boys scramble for the first edition to see if they could find a news story upon which they could base a scenario. They were getting $15 each for them and the competition was keen. I had personal acquaintance with but one player, Roscoe Arbuckle, whom I had first met in Arizona some years before while he was playing in a tabloid two-a-night show. And at the Press Club I had met a shy little Englishman named Charlie Chaplin, who had just joined Mack Sennett. He seemed quite bewildered and lonesome.

A few doors away from the Press Club was the Photoplayers, the first coast social organization of film players, whose president was Wallie Reid. Under the city law they had to close the bar at midnight, just about the time the Press Club swung into high, thanks to a friendly chief of police who liked to see his name in the papers. So quite often the film folk would drop in for their night cap or a game of Kelly pool.

ALFRED COHN

The Blanche Sweet story gave me the questionable honor of being the first fan magazine writer in Hollywood—that is, a paid one, as the few picture magazines of the time depended entirely on press agents for their material. This story, followed by others done under the pen name of K. Owen (in deference to, or in fear of Mr. Hearst), led to an associate editorship of Photoplay. There followed several years which I regard as the most pleasant of a long and varied writing career under the ægis of Julian Johnson and the late Jimmy Quirk, one of the most able publishers and lovable men I have ever had the good fortune of knowing. As for Mr. Johnson, I believe his intelligent, highly literate, and constructive reviews of the pictures of that period constituted one of the most beneficial and lasting influences on the art of the photoplay. He treated the movies as a grown up art form, and they tried to live up to it.

Griffith Tried to Stop Use of "Movie" Term

The period from 1915 to the early 20's was the most important in the entire history of the movies (Griffith once tried to get us to help him banish the word "movies" as undignified and slangish, but the "movies" had come to stay). In the period mentioned the lowly American movie conquered the world, due largely to a quartet of producer-directors, each of whom contributed mightily to the conquest. The producing giants of the period were D. W. Griffith, C. B. DeMille, Thomas H. Ince, and Mack Sennett. "D. W." was the inventor of "Boy Meets Girl," and the film spectacle. DeMille brought glamor to the screen, both in feminine charm and scenic investiture, and at times he outdid Griffith in spectacles. Ince brought domestic drama—the eternal triangle, and small town, homespun comedy drama—of course you remember Charley Ray. Ince also brought to full flower the horse opera. Bill Hart has never had a real successor. Sennett glorified the bathing girl, to say nothing of the pratt-fall and the belly laugh.

Tom Ince also was first to pay a straight "grand-a-week" salary; and to a character man at that, Frank Keenan. He established another record when he paid Billie Burke $40,000 for one picture for which Victor Schertzinger, then a theatre violinist and now a director, wrote the screen's first theme song, "Peggy." As I recall it, "Peggy" was the first to have a premiere—at the old legitimate Majestic Theatre in Los Angeles. DeMille also paid a feminine star $40,000, but for that amount Geraldine Farrar made three pictures in eight weeks.

Many Large Fortunes Massed in Early Days

That was real money in those pre-income tax days. No such fortunes as those amassed by Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, Harold Lloyd, C. B. DeMille, and Ince would be possible in these days. There were other and great fortunes piled up by a few producers of that golden era, but little or nothing remains of them. Of the pioneer producers who have passed away, I believe only Tom Ince and Carl Laemmle left substantial fortunes.

My first knowledge of such a thing as income tax came in 1918. I had left Photoplay to become Mary Pickford's "personal representative." We were in Washington to help start the Liberty Loan drive, and Mary took occasion to appear before the Commissioner of Internal Revenue to lodge a protest. She was getting $10,000 each and every payday and was paying her manager-mother $2,000 weekly. Why that was more than the President got! They finally allowed half the deduction.

That Liberty Loan tour was memorable in more than one way. The romance between Mary and Doug began to blossom.

I can say for Mary that she was quite the nicest, most considerate person who ever signed a payroll check in my name. I still regard it as one of the greatest thrills of my life—the picture of Mary in the full uniform of a colonel, riding a cream colored horse alongside the actual Colonel at the head of the 143rd Field Artillery, as the regiment entered Los Angeles on the trek up from Camp Kearny on Memorial Day, 1918, just before the regiment sailed for France and the front. She had been made honorary colonel of the regiment some weeks before in an elaborate ceremony at the post. May I take a bow for establishing that precedent—that is, if it rates any credit. But it was great stuff then.

Hollywood's first casualty of the war was Larry Peyton, who enlisted after playing a bit in one of Mary's wartime pictures.

Hollywood's First Night Spot

John's Chop House, on Hollywood Boulevard near Highland, was the first "night spot" in Hollywood. You couldn't exactly call the famous Hollywood Hotel, a half block away, a "spot," because even the Thursday night dances ended promptly at 11 o'clock. John's had a counter and oil cloth covered tables, and was open all night. For the most part picture folk went in to Los Angeles for dinner and entertainment. The Alexandria Hotel and Levy's were the favorite places, though a small group dined nightly at the Hoffman, because of its good beer and German cooking. Bill Hart never ate dinner anywhere but the Hoffman. Bill would sit at the round table reserved for publicity men and himself, always in character as the rough, uncouth Westerner, never the polished Shakespearean actor, once leading man for Madame Modjeska. I recall an interview I did for Bill for the magazine. As we sat dining, he told me pridefully he was getting $300 a week, and that if "they let him alone for a couple years" he would have enough to buy a fine ranch in Arizona and retire. A couple years later he followed Ince out of ill-fated Triangle, turning down that company's offer of $7,000 weekly.

What they now call the cocktail time found most of the male stars lined up at the brass-bound mahogany bar of the Alexandria. Here one would find Bill Farnum, Tom Mix, Lew Cody, Fatty Arbuckle, Buster Keaton and other headliners of the period.

Los Angeles voted out liquor during the war period and the night trade went to the Vernon Country Club, the Ship Cafe, at Venice, Nat Goodwin's and the Sunset Inn, at Santa Monica, each of which had its vogue. But all of these eventually gave way to the Frenchily ornate Montmarte, which was launched in Hollywood about 1922. However, during all that period the old Hollywood Hotel held its unique place as the film capital's chief social center. Most of the "Eminent Authors," brought out by Sam Goldwyn, including Elinor Glyn, Sir Gilbert Parker, and Gertrude Atherton, made it their home. They always appeared at the weekly party in the lobby, sharing honors with Gloria Swanson, Rudolph Valentino, Viola Dana, Mae Murray, Irene Rich, Mary Pickford and others. Norma Shearer was among the many who owed their start to being seen at these parties.

The first stars to own their own homes were Charley Ray and Polly Fredericks who began the invasion of Beverly Hills. Charley was the first to have a butler—and the first to go broke financing his own pictures. Nazimova, whose Hollywood home is now the exclusive "Garden of Allah" apartment-hotel, also came to grief making her own pictures.

One-Act Plays In Writers Club

At the southwest corner of Sunset Boulevard and Las Palmas is a vine covered, rambling, quite deserted frame place, the ghost of the old Writers Club. There, in the Tyrolean Playroom which the club had built, silent film actors monthly glowed to the applause they were denied in the studios. Every month for about ten years, there was a series of one-act plays, mostly written by studio scenarists, and an occasional dinner to a visiting celebrity—the last was to Emil Ludwig—the most brilliant the one given to Mary, Doug and Charlie, all of the famous trio being charter members of the club. Brilliant and witty Rupert Hughes was the permanent toastmaster.

The Writers used to have a weekly preview of a new picture, but one night they laughed when they should have cried and from then on the studios never seemed to have prints for the club.

Sound Brings Hectic Period

The transition from the silent to the audible screen was the most hectic period in Hollywood's history; replete with tragic and comic incidents. I had the good fortune of being assigned to write the adaptation and script of the picture that started it all, "The Jazz Singer," and it was the first scenario to contain sound effects. It was originally intended for George Jessel, the star of the successful stage play, but when Georgie heard that he was supposed to sing in it, he upped his price by some $10,000. That was a lot of money to the game but harried Warner Brothers, and they sought elsewhere for a star. Eddie Cantor turned it down because of friendship for Jessel, but the two couldn't talk Al Jolson out of it. Al maintained that it was his life story anyhow, and it was, for Samson Raphaelson, who wrote the play, had based his original short story, "The Day of Atonement," on Jolson's life. It took several years for the studios to become re-oriented; an extremely costly period because the producers felt that only stage players, stage writers, and stage directors could provide what they wanted. In other words, they went stage-crazy. Today the top directors include Frank Capra, Clarence Brown, Frank Lloyd, Victor Fleming, Greg LaCava, Woody Van Dyke, Wes Ruggles, Bob Leonard, Norman Taurog, Victor Schertzinger, Archie Mayo, Henry King, Lloyd Bacon, Norman McLeod, Al Green, Bill Seiter, Eddie Sutherland, George Marshall—all graduates of the silent era, and many eligible for membership in the Quarter Century Club. Also eligible are two very charming women—Anita Loos and Frances Marion, who were top writers then just as they are today.

It's been fun watching the years go by.

Deanna Durbin in Old Vienna

Scene of this eighth and different Deanna Durbin vehicle is the old Vienna of Franz Josef and the waltz, monarchal grandeur and plebeian contentment, a place and a time recreated to the letter and spirit by the art director, Jack Otterson, in settings surpassing all past distinguished precedents. Against these, Miss Durbin and a support matching her lead, phrase for phrase and line for line, play out a romantic adventure utilizing song and dance but not dominated by them, a story that moves at a smart pace and with deviations only for light humor and mild pathos from pastoral start to palatial end.

Miss Durbin sings four songs in the picture, all in the lighter and pleasanter manner, three by the Robert Stolz, who composed "Two Hearts in Three Quarter Time," and one by Hans Salter, Gus Kahn supplying lyrics for all. This would be news to tell the customers in exploitation, also the tidings that in this venture Miss Durbin goes in for dancing and extends her employment of humor as entertainment material. It is also news of the kind her followers want to know, that she enters this story as a young lady of marriageable age and proceeds at once to the business of romance. This seems to bring her to the estate of grown-up star, with childhood put behind her.

The story, an original by Ernst Marischka, adapted by Bruce Manning and Felix Jackson, opens with Miss Durbin as a peasant girl who buys a printed forecast of her future and is guided by it to its fulfillment. This takes her to Vienna where she is employed by a baker, meets a soldier who is also a composer, meets also the emperor and, following clarification of misunderstandings, sings at a Palace reception and finds romantic happiness. Coincidence and happenstance figure largely in the incidents which make up the narrative, none of which are violent, implausible or artificial, all credible and diverting.

Direction by Henry Koster and production by Joseph Pasternak are on a par with their past accomplishments. Like its predecessors, the film has the steady tempo and sustained movement, the deft touches and the novel side lights, which have set the Durbin films apart from others. Like them, also, it is a film for all the family and all the places and times.

Previewed at the Pantages Theatre, Hollywood, to a mixed audience which manifested complete satisfaction in applause.—WILLIAM R. WEAVER.

Formation of Reuter's, the world's first press association, and a fight for freedom of the press in England are the backgrounds of "A Dispatch from Reuter's," a Warner picture in which Edward G. Robinson enacts "Julius Reuter." Given the same embellishment in production mounting and the same tenor that have marked the studio's other biographical stories, "A Dispatch from Reuter's" tells of the life of Reuter, his "pigeon post" in which he spans the portions of Europe not covered by telegraph wires, the start of his new service over leased wires, and the fight to hold that which he earned.

William Dieterle, who directed "The Life of Emile Zola," "The Story of Louis Pasteur," "Juarez," and "Dr. Ehrlich's Magic Bullet," and Henry Blanke, who was the associate producer on the first three of the aforementioned, teamed again on "A Dispatch from Reuter's." It primarily is a story of the sacrifice of a pioneer, upon whom is heaped ridicule, and then abuse, with approbation at the climax.

Robinson enacts his role with conviction, and is supported by a name-ful cast of Edna Best, Eddie Albert, Albert Basserman, Gene Lockhart, Otto Kruger, Nigel Bruce, Montagu Love and others.

Milton Krims, who adapted the story of Valentine Williams and Wolfgang Wilhelm, has the scenario open with Reuter as a boy, being impressed by the then new telegraph system and the need for speed in transmitting news. Sixteen years later Reuter starts his "pigeon post" using carrier pigeons to link telegraph stations in Europe. After a struggle, he manages to obtain clients among the bankers who want early stock market quotations. His pigeon service is ruined by the complete bridging of the continent by telegraph. Desperate, Reuter embarks on a plan to transmit news by wire to newspapers. His first "scoop" is the peace speech of Napoleon III, and his service becomes a success.

A rival firm, Anglo-Irish, springs up to eclipse Reuter's, but Reuter through an ingenious device beats it on the story of Lincoln's assassination. His subscriber papers in London print the news, and the stock market crashes. Parliament begins an investigation because official news of the tragedy had not been received, and the mail boat on which the news normally would arrive had not been sighted. As a member of Parliament begins a move to force a censorship to prevent the spread of rumor, official notice of Lincoln's death arrives.

Reuter, in addressing Parliament from the press gallery, declares: "A censored press is the tool of a corrupt minority. A free press is the symbol of a free people. But to be worthy of freedom, the press must always tell the truth, for truth is freedom and without truth there can only be slavery and degradation.

Cisco Kid Rides Again

The "Cisco Kid" created by O. Henry and interpreted by Cesar Romero, here sees that justice is done an Englishman and his daughter portrayed by Montague Shaw and Sheila Ryan, who have bought into a western rancher's holdings.

The ranch's owner, Janet Beecher, crazy to own all the land she can, attempts to have the buyers robbed of their money.

Chris-Pin Martin, as always, is the "Kid's" friend and sidekick, while Robert Sterling appears as the owner's nephew and Edmund MacDonald as her gang leader.

The original story was written by Walter Bullock and Albert Duffy, with the screen play contributed by Mr. Duffy and John Larkin. Walter Morosco and Ralph Dietrich were associate producers, and Otto Brewer directed.

So You Won't Talk

(Columbia)

Columbia Farce

Joe E. Brown's latest vehicle, "So You Won't Talk" may be regarded as his best since Elmer the Great. Although using the familiar mistaken identity as the main point of the story, the film elicited from its preview audience much approbation.

Robert Sparks, producer of the Blondie series, was the associate producer. Edward Sedgwick, the director, and Richard Flournoy, who wrote the original screenplay, executed their assignments with verve. Brown's supporting cast includes Frances Robinson, Vivienne Osborne, Bernard Nedell and others.

The plot consists of the scrambling of the identities of a timid book reviewer and a gangster and the final denouement comes when the gangster is captured by the reviewer aided by his sweetheart.

Previewed at the Pantages Theatre, Hollywood, to enthusiastic reception.—V. K.

The Kid from Santa Fe

(Monogram)

Western

A familiar theme of western productions crops up again in this latest in the series starring Jack Randall. It is about smuggling—what is smuggled is left to the imagination of the audience—across the Mexican border. The usual quota of fist fights is exceeded but the film is below the quota in close-up gun play. The other essentials of the well-rounded outdoor melodrama are all there.

The side of law and order is represented by Randall and Forrest Taylor as "Sheriff Holt" and the heavy element is led by Tom London as "Bill Stewart" and George Chesbro as "Kent." Both sides, this time, are represented in the romantic angle. Clarence Logan as the sheriff's daughter and Randall making one pair, and Chesebro and Claire Rochelle the other.

"The Kid from Santa Fe" (Randall) traveling along the border is stopped by "Kent" and his men, who are waiting for smuggled goods. They turn him over to the sheriff, who appoints the "Kid" a deputy when he learns who the "Kid" is. The "Kid," tracking down the smugglers, comes across "Kent," starting a fight. "Kent" is killed by "Stewart," who has trailed the "Kid" and the blame is put on the "Kid." The "Kid" escapes and in a climactic scene turns over the real murderer to the sheriff.

The Living Corpse

(Juno Films)

French Melodrama

Headed by two of France's most prominent stage and screen stars, Victor Francen, who appeared in "The End of the Day," "That They May Live" and "Entente Cordiale," and Gaby Morlay, "The Living Corpse" is an adaptation of Leo Tolstoy's stage success produced many times throughout Europe and the United States. Francen enacts the part made famous by John Barrymore, Alexander Moissi and by the Yiddish actor, Maurice Schwartz, that of "Fedor Andreiev," the prosecuting attorney who follows his own advice to a prisoner when the man is convicted of slaying his wife's lover. Ably supported by George Rigaud and Signoret the picture depends, since there is little action, upon the dialogue and English subtitles to convey the story to the audience.

Adapted to the screen by Marcel L'Herbier, who also directed the production, and T. H. Robert, the story, seen before on the American screen in numerous variations, is that of an aging husband who finds himself unwanted by his younger and flirtatious wife and disappears. A body is found in the river and is believed by the police and all concerned to be that of the missing man. Meanwhile he is in the army under an assumed name. The wife is tried for murder and the missing man returns to save her from sentence.

Reviewed at the 55th Street Playhouse in New York at an early afternoon showing to an audience whose response seemed to prove that they enjoyed the picture.—GEORGE SPIRES.

An Alliance Production produced in France and released in the United States by Juno Films, Inc. Directed by Marcel L'Herbier. SHORT PRODUCT

The Baron and the Rose

(MGM)

Passing Parade Particular

The human interest story behind a strange, yearly, rent-paying event is the interesting material documented in the newest chapter from the Passing Parade section. Once a year a red rose is placed upon the altar of a church in Manhein, Pennsylvania, as lease payment. Behind this odd tribute is the equally peculiar story of the instigator of the annual practice, "Baron" Henry Steigel, an iron maker who lived in the middle of the eighteenth century in the province of what later became the Quaker state. Although Steigel was by profession an iron molder, his real joy and fame came from glass manufacturing. The artisan modeled his delicate product from his fondness for roses. Fame and fortune came to the craftsman and with his uprise in station he prefixed to his name the title of baron and lived on a lavish style comparable with a mode of existence suited to the newly acquired title. But, a mounting pile of debts forced Steigel into bankruptcy and he began once more in the humble surroundings of his iron plant. Before he died, he made the strange will requesting as yearly payment for a gift of church building and property, given in the era of affluency, the return of one red rose. The revelation is done dramatically and speedily.—Running time, 11 minutes.

Soak the Old

(MGM)

Crime Doesn't Pay Indictment

The plight of poverty stricken old folks as they are victimized by a pension plan promotion scheme is the sober, serious and sensible stuff prepared for the newest screen indictment of "Crime Doesn't Pay." The unsettled status of the elderly person with a loathing for being a family burden and a longing for independent and safe security is the "sucker" crux used by the racketeers in working their illegal and inhuman game. A well-meaning and blameless social-minded individual allows himself to be high-pressured into associating himself with a shady group of promoters in sponsoring an organization to work for a pension plan for the aged. The gullible poor people contribute their life savings and "rainy day" collections to foster the aims of the society. When an elderly man, who has sold a piece of property in order to become financially independent of his son-in-law's care and subsequently has turned over the sum derived from the sale to the pension club, demands his money back in order to meet a money emergency in his daughter's household, the case against the crooks begins to break. The old man dies as a result of his swindle experience and the duped instigator of old age benefits is murdered by his racketeer associates. However, the gang is rounded up for the punishment they so justly deserve.—Running time, 20 minutes.

Papa Gets the Bird

(MGM)

Color Cartoon

In the current offering, third of the Bear family cartoons, Papa is the featured family figure. Daddy Bruin is particularly perplexed with the problem of giving the household pet, a canary, a bath. Naturally, Papa, who is none too delicate or energetic in his conduct, allows the bird to escape and in attempting to bag the chirping fugitive he finds himself down the backyard well. In such a watery predicament, the old man has his ups and downs. Mama in the meantime, with a few well-chosen, cooing words of encouragement, has captured the recalcitrant canary. Nicely applied color adds considerable brightness to the domestic tribulations of the Bear domicile.—Running time, eight minutes.

Football Thrills of 1939

(MGM)

Pete Smith Sport Slant

Pete Smith, whose screen services have extended from the offering of advice on how to carve the family festive turkey to the removal of stains, now offers a sport slant subject timed for the opening of the pigskin period. From newsreel coverage, there has been collected and tinted in restful sepia shades some of the football highlights of the past year. The games reviewed are many and enough for a nationwide audience of gridiron fans. Ball rushing tactics are easily appreciated by the manipulation of slow motion pacing. To make the review more complete, Mr. Smith has furnished one of his customary witty commentaries.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Grosses, Then and Now

by SAM SHAIN
Editor, Motion Picture Daily

Twenty-five years ago there were no million-dollar motion picture negative costs, and mighty few million-dollar grosses. Today, million-dollar films are no rarity, in either cost or rental. Back in 1915, feature negative costs usually ran around $30,000 to $35,000, and a worldwide gross might have hit about $100,000. "The Birth of a Nation" cost David Wark Griffith only $100,000, although that was a multi-million-dollar grosser. No one has ever computed the gross of "The Birth", at least for public consumption.

The most costly picture ever produced, on straight filming, is David Selznick's "Gone with the Wind", with a $3,800,000 negative cost. It is also the biggest grosser of all, reputedly exceeding $13,000,000 in rentals from the domestic market alone. "Ben Hur", Metro, and "Hell's Angels", Howard Hughes, may have exceeded "Wind's" negative costs, but that was because of re-shooting of large sections.

Typical of costs and grosses of pictures of the 1915 era was "Carmen"—negative cost, $35,000; world gross, $105,000, including $92,000 grossed from the domestic market.

Today, nearly every producing company has million-dollar pictures, both in negative costs and rental returns. One of the "Big Three" is known to have no less than twenty million-dollar grossers this year.

In the following record of some of the large companies' grosses are the titles and grosses of the biggest grossers of 1915—or of a later year if the company started after 1915—and the biggest gross of a single picture in the history of the company, together with the estimated top gross for the coming season:

"Gone with the Wind"	$13,500,000(ab)	1939–40

Court Upholds State Ticket Fee Maximum

The state law which limits brokers to advances of 75 cents on tickets was upheld in the New York supreme court, Wednesday, by Justice J. Sidney Bernstein, who denied a writ to restrain License Commissioner Paul Moss and Police Commissioner Lewis J. Valentine from enforcing the law.

In a 15-page opinion, it was held that the United States supreme court has changed its opinion since that court ruled limitations on ticket brokers' prices being unconstitutional. Justice Bernstein pointed out that most of the brokers in the city have been operating for the past two years under an agreement with the League of New York Theatres.

Rogers' Reissues Boom

A boom in Will Rogers' re-issues is anticipated by 20th Century-Fox, as a result of the eight-installment story in the Saturday Evening Post on the late actor-humorist-philosopher by his widow. Requests for prints on: "In Old Kentucky," and "Steamboat 'Round the Bend," have already been received from the midwest.

KINEMATOGRAPH RENTERS SOCIETY, LIMITED—LONDON

We whose business it is in Britain to market American motion pictures—together with some of our own—would find it hard without Anglo-American goodwill.

Because Martin Quigley, by his personal integrity, the authority of his papers and the goodwill of his personnel, has enhanced the prestige not only of trade journalism but of the film industry in general, we are much the richer for his twenty-five years of work.

To wish him the same again is also to wish ourselves the best of luck. So Many Happy Returns Martin Quigley! . . .

LANSDOWNE AMUSEMENT COMPANY

I have been in this business only a short time but it did not take me long to sense the outstanding qualifications of Mr. Quigley. I immediately became a subscriber to your outstanding trade journal and acquired quite a lot of knowledge and information concerning the motion picture industry from your editorials and the Round Table column, and also authentic information in connection with what goes on in your business. I hope to always be a subscriber of your outstanding periodical as long as I am associated with the motion picture industry.

May I add a full hot house of orchids to Mr. Quigley for what he has accomplished during his regime with Motion Picture Herald.

RKO to Handle U.S. 'Power' Short

A "government documentary" in three and a half reels pertaining to the collectivist cooperative electric service associations, under the title of "Power and the Land," is announced for free distribution to theatres through RKO by Ned E. Depinet, vice president. "Many government agencies will cooperate," says the announcement.

The picture is in series with "The Plough that Broke the Plains," prelude to the "Triple A ploughed under" matter, "The River" in behalf of the Tennessee Valley project, "Fight for Life" relating to the socialized medicine campaign, all products of Pare Lorenz. The "Power" picture, started under Mr. Lorenz's auspices, has been completed apparently since his departure from federal service, by Joris Ivens, an associate.

Mr. Ivens, it will be remembered, made "Spanish Earth" and has been identified with various other left-wing activities.

"The River" was distributed by Paramount Pictures Corporation, while "Fight for Life" is a Columbia release. "The Plough" was distributed by the Government.

No release date for "Power and the Land" has been announced.

"I Married Adventure" Opens with Osa Johnson

Columbia's feature of Osa Johnson's "I Married Adventure," depicting the treks of the Martin Johnsons into the wilds, opened Monday evening at Leo Brecher's Plaza theatre, New York. The film was based on Mrs. Johnson's book of the same title. It is being presented as a tribute to the late Martin Johnson, with Mrs. Johnson making personal appearances at all performances.

Howard Barnes, of the New York Times, describes the film as episodic, since numerous safaris are included. He found the best sequences those dealing with the flight of animals across a scorched veldt in search of water, and the shots of pygmies and headhunters, of giraffes and crocodiles.

"I Married Adventure" was reviewed in Motion Picture Herald on July 20th.

Norberg in New Post

Gunnar Norberg, former magazine editor, has been appointed publicity director for Playhouse theatre, Carmel, Cal. The house is owned and operated by Edward G. Kuster. Mr. Norberg was formerly managing editor of Radio Guide, and prior to that assistant to the managing editor in charge of movie magazines at Fawcett Publications in New York.

Moore Chosen President

James Moore, Vitagraph booker, has been elected president of the Capitol District Warner Clubs of Albany, and vicinity, succeeding Max Friedman, Warner booker. Others chosen included: Joseph Weinstein, Leo Drexler and Howard Goldstein, vice presidents; Pauline Steinbach, secretary; Joseph Tanski, treasurer; and James P. Faughman, chairman of contributions and loans. Mr. Moore represented the Capitol district clubs at national meetings of the Warner clubs in New York, this week.

"Dictator" Premiere In New York, Oct. 15

The world premiere of the long-awaited Charles Chaplin's "The Great Dictator" will be held simultaneously at the Astor and Capitol, New York, Tuesday night, October 15th, it was announced by United Artists on Wednesday. Although details were lacking, it was made known that all seats would be reserved for the opening.

Announcement of the opening of "The Great Dictator" indicates the probability that the lengthy run of "Gone With the Wind" would come to a close unless plans are later made to shift to another house.

Decision Reserved On Electric Companies Suit

New York Supreme Court Justice Bernard Schientag reserved decision, Friday, September 20th, on an application to dismiss a consolidated stockholder suit against the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, Inc., Western Electric, Electrical Research Products, Inc., Westinghouse Electric, and the Victor Talking Machine Company.

The suit is for $270,000,000 damages. It charges a $10,000,000 loss by the Radio Corporation of America's investment in RKO, more loss by the purchase of allegedly worthless patents from Westinghouse and the electrical companies, and loss through investments in Victor. Besides the defendants, also named are more than 20 officers and directors of RCA.

The dismissal was asked because the plaintiffs had allegedly failed to state a cause of action.

Last May, attempts to settle the suit ended unsuccessfully.

CINEMATOGRAPH EXHIBITORS' ASSOCIATION OF GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND

I am in a quandary as to whether I should congratulate you, Martin Quigley, or the motion picture industry, on this 25th birthday. One thing is certain—that the cinematograph industry has benefited materially and morally by your quarter century of honesty, decency and zeal. However, as a British exhibitor and national president of the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association of Great Britain and Ireland, which represents 98 per cent of the cinemas in Great Britain, I salute you for what you have achieved!

What have you achieved? You have made honesty pay, and decency profitable. Your work for a clean screen—clean in the moral sense—and unsullied by politics —is work which we British exhibitors understand and appreciate. You have further established a unique standard in motion picture journalism so that authority, accuracy and vision, without fear or favor, have combined to build the Motion Picture Herald, especially, into one of the most powerful journalistic forces in the industry. Incidentally, we British exhibitors are conscious of the seriousness and fairness with which our own problems have been considered and reported in your columns. This has gone a long way to help cement those cordial Anglo-American relations on which our existence, to a great extent, depends.

Martin Quigley—America should be proud of you. We are grateful both to you and for you!

COUNCILLOR H. P. E. MEARS
National President.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES (as of 1915)

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

The motion picture "vampire" and the screen's first "recluse" was born just 25 years ago, in the person of Theda Bara, when she signed a contract submitted to her by William Fox, who insisted upon the following stipulations:

That she would not appear any place in public unless heavily veiled; would not ride in a street car, in the subway or on the elevated, or go shopping unless heavily veiled.

Nor could Theda go to her costumer unless her features were entirely covered; or show her physical features to the public, but could only show them through the medium of Fox pictures on the screen, or by photographs supplied by William Fox.

Too, she was prohibited, for a period of three years, from taking her daily constitutional by the light of day. She had to do that at night, and then had to be veiled.

One of the first public industry moves ever made to raise the standards of motion picture advertising to secure the confidence and good will of the public, was Martin Quigley's shot at the 1915-16 practice of some exhibitors—("probably working under instruction of the president of a big film company")—who used displays that read something like this:

Billie Ritchie in a better motion picture than a

FIRST RUN CHAPLIN

It was a long and rocky road from those days to the Advertising Advisory Council, where a staff of experts inspect for objectionalities motion picture advertisements that are voluntarily submitted by the industry.

The only case on record where prison authorities were downright unappreciative of the industry's contribution of motion pictures for showing in penal institutions occurred when the Warden at Sing Sing in New York abruptly discontinued the weekly showings of "The Murder Mystery" serial.

"Well, you see," he explained, "your serial shows Harry Houdini, 'Handcuff King' and 'Lock-breaking Champion,' doing his stuff. And the jailbirds were learning too many new tricks, picking cell locks, unloosening their leg chains and the like."

Many a distribution pioneer will remember with a chuckle the early-day "chisel" by which shootin' gallery operators sought to get motion pictures for public showing without paying any rentals. "Send me some samples of your films, and I will let you know by return mail if I can use same," they would write to the exchanges, staggering their letters to various companies in the hope they would get a continuous supply.

William Farnum's silent-picture contract with William Fox made a 'piker' of Connie Bennett's $15,000-a-week agreement, 10 years later, with Pathe.

Farnum got $20,526.33 for each of 38 weeks a year. This amounted to $3,420 a day, $1,140 an hour, or $190 a minute, which is 31⅔ cents a second.

Besides, eggs and butter cost less then.

Columnist "Mac," writing in an early issue of Exhibitors Herald, made the potent observation that "We'll soon be flying across continent by aeroplane and never give it a thought."

In that middle of the 1910-years, Massachusetts was trying to push through a piece of legislation which would have limited the length of any motion picture to 20 minutes. In later years that would have made Dave Selznick release his epochal length of "Gone With the Wind" in 12 installments.

Some small motion picture companies, like Cosmofotofilm Company, were selling film to exchanges and exhibitors at ten cents a foot! And the Selig Polyscope Company, which was releasing Selig two-reel pictureplays, had a sideline of travel tours to the west, for $128 for seven days, round trip, in Pullman cars, without meals.

Conditions around studios in the early days were more like those of some tenement house districts. Take the case of Michael Schlesser, animal trainer, who sued the old Thanhouser Company for $1,600 for the death of his snake, which expired, it was charged, because Thanhouser did not have enough heat in its studio.

Believe it or not, but the Mutual Film Company one day received the following letter from the management of the Princess theatre, at Piqua, Ohio:

Dear Sir:

We presented your picture entitled "The Rink," featuring Charles Chaplin, in our theatre last night. Persistent laughter and shouting on the part of the audience brought down most of the house. The plaster fell off the ceiling and part of the floor sagged.

We have been showing pictures many years without loss of life or damage to property. "The Rink" has proven a menace to real estate, and the result of one day's run cost us considerable outlay in repairs. Therefore, we enclose plasterer's and carpenter's bills and would appreciate a check by return mail.

There were some pretty stirring titles in the fall of 1915, oldtimers remembering such items as His Wife's New Lid, How Johnny Came Home, The Parson's Button-Matcher, Oh, Doctor!, One Plus One Equals One, Itsky the Inventor and Is Christmas a Bore?, to say nothing of Jack Spratt and the Scales of Love, The Night That Sophie Graduated, Nell of the Dance Hall, The Landing of the Hose Reel, Levy's Seven Daughters, Limberger's Victory, Minnie the Tiger and Miss Stickie-Moufie Kiss, Saved from the Harem, Muscles and Merriment, To Cherish and Protect, He Was Only a Bathing Suit Salesman.

There were also such 'pippins' as Bill's Plumber and Plumber's Bill, Does Flirting Pay? and, a sequel, "Does It End Right? Also, When Hooligan and Dooligan Ran for Mayor, Almost a Papa, Silk Hose and High Pressure, There's Good in the Worst of Us, Tillie the Terrible Typist, To Rent, Furnished, When William's Whiskers Worked, Zablitzky's Waterloo, Clarence Cheats at Croquet, Dicky's Demon Daschund, Hattie the Hair Heiress, The Innocent Sandwich Man, Perplexing Pickle Puzzle, Hot Stuff, etc., etc.

The 1915 custard-pie slapstick comedy vogue was reinstated on production schedules immediately after the Armistice, in November, 1919, when the United States lifted the restrictions on the use of flour!

To Joseph Ignatius Breen, director general of the Production Code Administration in Hollywood, we repeat this record of eliminations ordered from some feature releases of early days, by the Chicago Board of Censors:

MUSKETEERS OF THE SLUMS (King Pictures)—Cut: Solo dancer wiggling her back.

They were a zealously patriotic lot of picturegoers a quarter of a century ago, as witness:

David Wark Griffith's "Birth of a Nation" was in its seventh week of a roadshow engagement at the Liberty theatre near Times Square, in New York, when, on April 9, 1915, there came the 50th anniversary of General Lee's Civil War surrender to General Grant at Appomattox. When the reproduction of this scene of "The Birth" was flashed on the screen, the entire audience arose as one and stood impressively quiet as the historic event passed before its vision, to the tune of "Yankee-Doodle Dandy."

When a press agent changed jobs in the 1915 era, the announcement went something like this: "Joseph White Farnham, advertising man, publicity expert, press agent, before and after-dinner speaker, and master of things pertaining to the better way manufacturing of motion pictures, has harkened to the call of the little wanderlust midgets who tug at the coattails of 'we of the photoplays'." Joe joined Lubin, in the City of Brotherly Love, in Philadelphia.

DISTRIBUTOR AND PIONEER

A lot of water has flowed under the bridge since you started Motion Picture Herald. You've been in the business twenty-five years. A little more than that, if one considers the time you spent learning things about the industry before you decided that you could teach such strongly entrenched publications as the old Dramatic Mirror, the Moving Picture World, and the Motion Picture News a thing or two about how a film trade paper should be conducted.

You were right in your belief in spite of what a lot of us thought, back in those good old days.

Had you been wrong, the Dramatic Mirror would not have silently faded just when the film industry began its phenomenal growth and you would never have seen the day when you absorbed, first, Motography, and the Moving Picture World, and then the Motion Picture News.

As I remember, you had your own, and very definite, ideas on what a trade paper should be. You have had them ever since. If the result is a fine, forceful, yet dignified publication which has never ceased in its efforts to make both the trade and the world in general realize that we are a fine and dignified industry, it is what you planned from the very beginning. For that, I, as a pioneer of some thirty years' activity in the motion picture business, congratulate you who are a mere infant with only twenty-five years as a toiler in this field to your credit.

Because no man can persistently stand up for what he considers the good and the fine without becoming the target for the slings and arrows of the envious, you have endured more than your share of these missiles. However, no man has ever been able to say that such criticism has ever deflected your purpose. Farragut damned the torpedoes and continued on his course. I cannot remember that you ever damned anything or anyone, unless that thing or that individual was re-

General Register Has Ticket with New Safeguards

A new type admission ticket will be offered to theatre owners soon by the General Register Corporation of New York. As part of a system of box office control, it is said to offer new safeguards against money leaks.

"Palming" Difficult

Whereas the ordinary ticket is one inch wide by two inches long, this new ticket is approximately two inches wide by one inch long.

Both "short changing" and "palming" are said to be made more difficult, if not impossible, by the Unicon ticket, so-called because it is part of the company's Unicon control system. When more than one ticket is issued per sale, there is no perforation betwen the tickets, which come out of the machine in one continuous strip. Instead, they are scored vertically, and the doorkeeper tears them vertically, one half going into the chopper and the other half being returned to the customer. But since it is next to impossible to fold the strip of tickets, the two halves remain in the form of an unbroken strip.

Whenever more than one ticket is issued at one sale, the machine prints the number of tickets issued, making it easier for the doorkeeper to check and for the manager's office or home office to count the stubs where this is desired. Tickets also are issued with the date of issue imprinted and bearing a code symbol which can be changed at the will of the management and used to identify this particular theatre in a circuit or to give any other information required.

One side of the Unicon ticket remains white while the other side . . . the side returned to the customer by the doorkeeper . . . is colored. The theatre may use a different color for each particular admission price. A controlled watermarked bristol stock, made by only one paper mill in the United States, will be used in the manufacture of the tickets, as a safeguard against possible counterfeiting.

Double Issuance Impossible

As a preventive of still another form of fraud, the ticket issuing machine has been so constructed that it will permit only one thickness of ticket to go through at one time. This method of control . . . the same as used by the United States Government in printing currency and by the railroads in printing railroad tickets . . . makes it impossible to fan-fold two strips of tickets (one counterfeit) together and issue them simultaneously.

The electrically controlled printing time clock which is a part of the Unicon system, is designed to give the theatre circuit's head office a positive check on time of opening the box-office, time of closing, time of price change, etc. On opening the box office, or at any other time when a check is required, the cashier turns a knob on the time clock to a letter assigned to her, and issues a ticket from each unit of the machine. These tickets show the time at which they were issued, and the cashier's code letter. They are moistened and placed on a gummed strip on the reporting form, giving the head office or its accounting department the required information in the form of original entries.

Goldwyn Continuing Fight Against U. A.

Declaring that "the fight is just beginning," Samuel Goldwyn announced in New York this week that he would continue his legal battle for a declaratory judgment to have his United Artists releasing contract pronounced invalid.

He also announced that he would retain a new attorney to handle the case, to succeed the late Max Steuer. In film circles, it was hinted that Mr. Goldwyn has in mind William D. Mitchell, former U. S. Attorney General.

The producer declared that the issues were of a kind to be settled by a court of law and that his case was well prepared. Mr. Goldwyn expects the case to be tried this fall and adjudicated before his next picture is released.

He plans to proceed with production of "The Little Foxes," with Bette Davis, this Winter; also make a musical with Bob Hope, whom he will borrow from Paramount.

He also has in preparation, "City Without Men," "Black Gold," "Seventh Cavalry," and a story based on the life of Hans Christian Andersen. He was expected to leave for the Coast Friday.

National, Local Circuits Book Rogers' "Outsider"

"The Outsider," says Mr. Rogers, was completed one month before England's declaration of war, and was one of the last British-made "A" films.

Last week, W. Ray Johnston, for Monogram, extended relations with Alliance, under which "The Outsider," among others, will be distributed by Monogram in the U. S.

sponsible for something which didn't square with your conception of right and wrong. Even then you continued inflexibly on your way towards helping make the motion picture industry one with which we could all be proud to be associated.

Nor am I able to remember that you ever maintained a pasture in which sacred cows were kept. You have consistently, in season and out, hit at the things you considered detrimental to the ultimate welfare of this industry, never pausing to think or care about whose sacred cow you were doing your utmost to destroy. Oddly enough, after the owners of these sacred cattle stopped weeping and dried their eyes, you were found justified in your attitude in the great majority of cases. You have been wrong upon occasion, but that only proved you to be human and we love you for it.

You and I have seen some amazing changes in this business during the years since the Motion Picture Herald started. Changes such as the pioneers of that day could never have foreseen and would never have believed possible had some seer predicted them. Equally startling changes are due to take place in the next quarter century insofar as our industry is concerned. Foolish and foolhardy, the prophet who ventures to predict what these changes will be in an industry wherein only five years sees upheavals in the way of developments, while ten years represents a lifetime during which anything may well happen to make the motion picture business unrecognizable. It is as remarkable as it is heartening to note that, thanks to you, Martin, the executive heads of this industry have always been forewarned well in advance of impending developments.

The chances are that you and I won't be around twenty-five years from the date of this Anniversary Issue, but I hope we will be. You see, I want the pleasure of writing you another letter, like this one, on your Golden Anniversary as a trade paper publisher.

Hays 'Roundtable' Talks Conditions, Lists Product

"The major changing conditions abroad, with the resultant effect on domestic situations, bring modified problems for the industry," Will H. Hays, MPPDA president, declared Tuesday. Because "these conditions call for thorough study and clear thinking and action in charting and executing the future course," the general sales managers and directors of advertising and publicity departments of member companies, were called, Tuesday afternoon, to a clinical meeting with the Hays board of directors, "so that there might be a general exchange of views on the situation."

Mr. Hays said that these roundtable discussions would continue, out of them coming "a clearer recognition of the industry's needs and requirements."

The MPPDA president declared, "There is no readymade solution to the task confronting us today which is, to meet the changed situation in a manner that in no way will impair the quality of motion picture entertainment."

He pointed out that pictures today "reflect America's intensified patriotism and interest in the problems of democracy and citizenship, the world situation having influenced a trend," he said, which brought "The Howards of Virginia," "Chad Hanna," "The Westerner," "The Amazing Story of Sergeant York," "Brigham Young—Frontiersman," "Kit Carson," "The Californian," "Virginia," "Arizona," "The Ramparts We Watch," "Meet John Doe," "Citizen Kane," and "Land of Liberty."

Mr. Hays stated that "a solid public demand continues" for Americana in motion pictures. "There is also keen interest in present day themes," he added.

The meeting discussed ways and means of improving the industry's public relations, of increasing theatre attendance and of assuring a continuous flow of top-grade entertainment despite the industry's foreign and domestic problems.

Whether the diagnosis was completed and a prescription compounded was not stated.

Among those attending were: Will H. Hays, Frederick L. Herron and Carl Milliken, MPPDA; Barney Balaban, Neil F. Agnew, Robert Gillham and Leon Netter, Paramount; Joseph H. Hazen, Gradwell L. Sears, Mort Blumenstock and Harry Goldberg, Warners; Nicholas M. Schenck, William F. Rodgers, C. C. Moskowitz and Howard Dietz, Loew's; W. C. Michel, Charles E. McCarthy and William Sussman, 20th Century-Fox; Spyros Skouras, National Theatres; Jack Cohn, Nate Spingold and Abe Montague, Columbia; George J. Schaefer, Richard C. Patterson, Ned E. Depinet and S. Barret McCormick, RKO; John J. O'Connor and Malcolm Kingsberg, RKO Theatres; Nate J. Blumberg, Joseph Seidelman and Lou Pollock, Universal, and Earle W. Hammons.

Mr. Jones' last assignment was "Shepherd of the Hills," for Paramount. He started his career as a laborer at Universal and worked in virtually every branch of the business from scene painting to directing. He was first president of the Screen Playwrights.

Early in his career, he made 125 short features for Vitagraph, 121 of which he wrote himself. Some of the important features upon which he worked were:

"If I Had a Million," "One Sunday Afternoon," "Lives of a Bengal Lancer," "The Milky Way," "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine," "The Plainsman," "Souls at Sea," "52nd Street," "Captain Fury," "The Under-Pup," and "Abe Lincoln in Illinois," his last credit.

During most of his career he had been under contract to Paramount.

ACADEMY OF MOTION PICTURE ARTS AND SCIENCES

Martin Quigley's silver anniversary comes at a crucial moment for everyone of us in the motion picture industry. The fact that we are not succeeding as we should is the concern not only of the producers and the distributors, but is certainly of vital importance to the exhibitors, the studio and home office and branch office workers and, just as vitally, to the trade papers.

With the sympathetic cooperation of all concerned and with the courage to try change where the usual methods do not seem to work as they once did, we are bound to achieve the results that we not only seek but that we so definitely need for the healthy continuance and growth of our industry.

To Martin Quigley I offer congratulations. To him and to the entire industry, of which he is so important a part, I submit our common problem.

WALTER WANGER,
President.

PRODUCER

On this very auspicious occasion it is indeed a pleasure to express to you my hearty congratulations.

Your twenty-fifth anniversary is an event in which the entire motion picture industry can take pride. Your success has been built in the service of this industry and, as the industry has grown, you have grown in just proportion.

We who are concerned in the production of pictures consider ourselves fortunate in having a man such as you publishing a journal dedicated to the interests of the industry. We know that in you and in your journalistic enterprises we have a critic who is first of all a friend. Our sincerest wish is that you have many more years of vigorous and useful service to the industry you love so well.

DARRYL F. ZANUCK.

Warner Program

Giving the studio one of its busiest months in history, seven new Warner feature pictures are slated to go before the cameras during the next 30 days.

First of the new crop to get under way is to be "Carnival," starring Humphrey Bogart, and directed by Ray Enright. "Trial and Error," adaption of an Anthony Berkeley play, is next on the schedule, followed by "Hard Luck Dame," Ida Lupino's first starring vehicle, and "Church Mouse," Ladislaus Fodor play, which will be directed by Noel Smith.

After that come "One Sunday Afternoon," the next James Cagney starring picture, and "Three Strangers," original by John Huston, while the last in the group is to be "The Fabulous Thirties," in which John Garfield, Priscilla Lane and Jeffrey Lynn play the leads.

Tay Garnett, of "Slightly Honorable," "Trade Winds" and many another, has reported to Richard Rowland and has started to prepare "Cheers for Miss Bishop," which is to star Martha Scott of "Our Town" and "The Howards of Virginia."

Bess Streeter Aldrich, author of the story on which the picture is based, has also arrived in Hollywood, and will confer with Messrs. Rowland and Garnett on the final shooting script, which has also had a preliminary treatment by Stephen Vincent Benet.

As his first in a new three picture deal, Thomas Mitchell will be starred by Warners in "Trial and Error," adaption by Robert Rossen and Charles Kenyon of the Anthony Berkeley play. The story is a mystery, with what is described as "a psychological background," and Mr. Mitchell will portray a college professor.

Forum Films' entire new season program of 26 subjects are to be in Cinecolor, according to James S. Burkett, president of the company. The first subject is to go before the cameras in a week.

SCIENCE IS WONDERFUL

Twentieth Century-Fox technicians, if anything, are up on their toes.

The camera department has evolved a process called "diaphragm calibration" which enables cameras close and far to impart the same quality to the negatives.

While this was being announced, and being given to the Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences for approval and industry-wide publicity, another new technical development came to the fore at the studio.

The nursery department had perfected a method of "embalming" plants and trees, enabling the foliage to remain green and unwilted for months under the strong lights.

With its action taking place in New York, "Forty Thousand Smiths," a three-act comedy, will be presented at Hollywood's Ben Bard Playhouse October 15th. Written and produced by Desider Pek, the play is directed by Don Brodie.

BARBARA STANWYCK is to be co-starred with HENRY FONDA in the new PRESTON STURGES' film, "Lady Eve."

CASEY ROBINSON will write the screen play of "One Foot in Heaven" for Warners.

JULIAN BLAUSTEIN has been appointed to succeed RICHARD HALLIDAY as head of the Paramount Story Department.

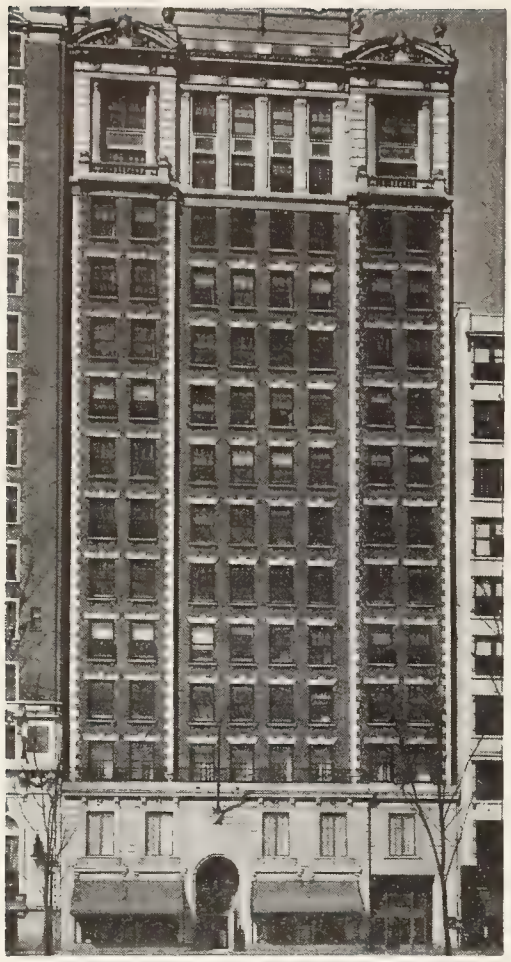
BOB CROSBY and his band have been signed to appear in RKO's "Let's Find a Song."

IRENE DUNNE is to star in "Mrs. Skeffington" for Warners.

CARY GRANT will next appear in "Before the Fact" for RKO. The picture is to be directed by ALFRED HITCHCOCK.

CHARLES VIDOR has been assigned to direct "New York Town," MARY MARTIN-FRED MACMURRAY co-starring vehicle at Paramount.

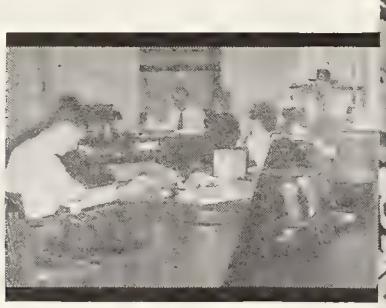
Form Cartoon Company



Stokes-Edmonds Productions has been formed in Hollywood to produce a series of one-reel animated color cartoons, starring "Sassy Sis." Negotiations are underway for a major release. Plans call for 13 cartoons to be produced the first year. Bob Stokes, who has been connected with the Disney studio for the last five years, is president, and Paul Edmonds, until recently personal business representative for Boris Morros Productions, is vice-president and treasurer. The George R. Bilson office has been engaged to handle press relations.

Ranch for Film Actors

A plan is under way to turn the Will Rogers ranch in Santa Monica, covering 346 acres, into a permanent home for motion picture actors. The idea was broached by Amon Carter, publisher of the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, at a luncheon given by Samuel Goldwyn for several publishers in Los Angeles. Mr. Carter, trustee of the Will Rogers Memorial Commission and a friend of the family, suggested that the purchasing funds might be raised through cooperation of newspapers and theatres throughout the country.



Ida Lupino Signed

Ida Lupino has signed a long term contract with Twentieth Century-Fox studios, under which she will make one picture a year for that studio.

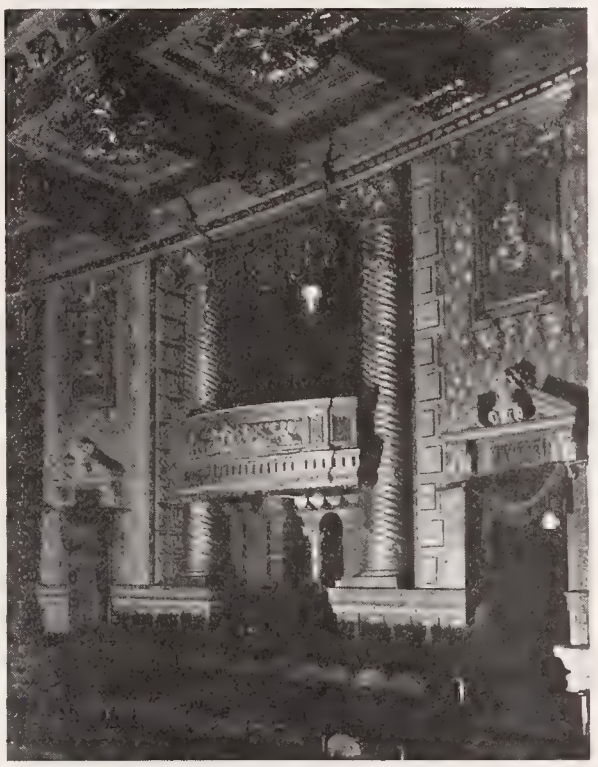
Developing a Theatre for the Motion Picture

Browsing Through the Twenty-Five Years that Brought the Modern Exhibition Plant



by GEORGE SCHUTZ

Editor of Better Theatres

A few years ago in New York a stage play by the facile George Kaufmann dealt nostalgically and rather fatalistically with the question: Will the stage theatre disappear or will it come back? The dramatic action provided no answer; Mr. Kaufmann wasn't putting himself out on a limb, and anyway the answer was of no more importance there than it is here; however, a certain bit of action offered, at least inferentially, some comment on the role the physical exhibition plant plays in the motion picture scheme.

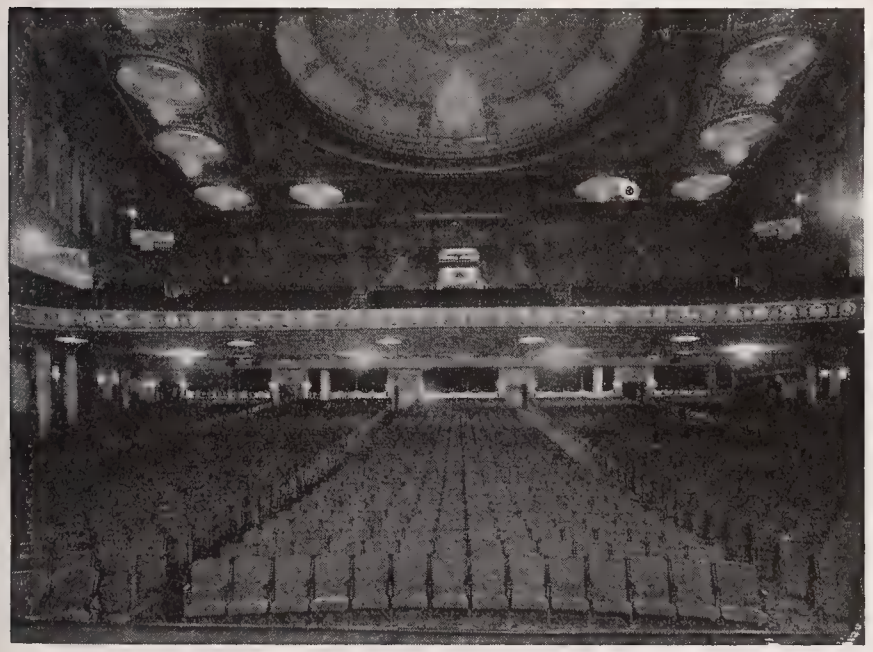
The theatre in which this play, "The Fabulous Invalid," appeared was itself more or less part of the setting. Ultimately the curtain rose on a stage bare to the rigging and building walls. Enter two gauche young men to look the place over. They talk, in contradistinction to the polished manner of the stage folk of the story, in the accents and argot of New York's streets. They are crude fellows, it is plain to see—uneducated, ill bred. They are "moom pitcher guys" who, having leased the theatre, have come to see what must be done with it to render it fit for its new service. I haven't Mr. Kaufmann's script handy, but in the course of their examinations, during which they look out into the auditorium as well as around the stage, these entrepeneurs of the motion picture say, in effect:

"What a dump! And dese guys get two and t'ree dollars a copy! Look at what we give our customers—da latest in decorations, comf'table seats, swell lighting, good air winter or summer, wit' a two-t'ree-hour show includin' shorts and newsreel besides da feature picture—all for forty cents or maybe even two-bits."

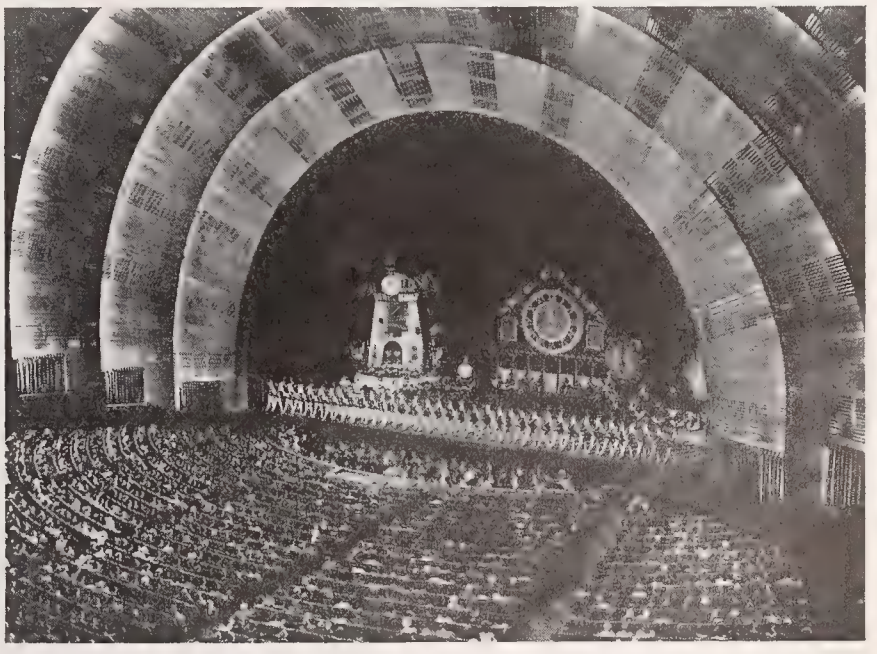
Ignoring the dialect, which is merely an injection of spleen, what these fellows are made to say describes the pattern of motion picture merchandising. It is to make The Theatre, with all it can mean in the representations of luxury and of the stimulating intensities of life, economically and pleasantly accessible to the vast majority of people everywhere.

The newspaper writers on motion picture doings, when they are taking the preparation of their critiques of current Hollywood productions too seriously, call this function of the film and its theatre Escapism. It would be more accurate for them to say: It's a business.

NEW FILM ART BRINGS "DELUXE" TYPE THEATRE



As an art, the motion picture has had its moments of penetration into the consciousness of those who run the business, but not for long at the sacrifice of the business. They became aware of their merchandise as an art when its burgeoning art appeared to be important merchandise.



And that was along about the beginning of the period of time now in review.

The motion picture theatre as we know it began to take shape in those few years just before and immediately following 1915 when "Quo Vadis," "Cabiria," and "The Birth of a Nation" were demonstrating that the inventors and developers of a method of simulating action photographically, had produced, believe it or not, a new art form.

The details are a matter for a book, if a single volume of conventional dimensions could prove adequate to the subject, which is extremely doubtful. All that can come within the range of an article are the milestones, the critical junctures in the development of a physical plant for the merchandising of the new art form.

The first job, along about 1915, when it appeared that the film show had or at least could outgrow its nickelodeon, was to convince the public that the mechanical theatre was worthy of respect. This meant accentuation, exaggeration, glorification. The motion picture theatre became an architectural instrument of institutional salesmanship. The expressions of this function soon became colossal.

On New York's Broadway were constructed the Rivoli and the Mark Strand theatres. The former was a selection of the architectural devices of classic Greece; the Strand was Frenchy, and with all its gilt and plastic decoration, obviously something quite as "authentic" and expensive as the Rivoli. And to the architectural trappings and plush furnishings were added a symphony orchestra, precisely timed curtain openings, drilled service staffs, et cetera, to make attendance of a screen play quite as worthy of a place on one's calendar as going to the ("legitimate") theatre.

"LUXURY THEATRE" EXTENDS ITS PROPAGANDA

This interpretation of the significance of the motion picture, very deliberate on the part of film exhibition's more resourceful entrepreneurs, was quite rapidly placed in execution the country over. It was confined, to be sure, to the larger centers of population, since the cost required capacities from a couple of thousand seats up, but it made certain film theatres city attractions, and their influence filtered out to the rural areas through visitors and the press.

These theatres, in New York, Chicago, Los Angeles and points between, were publicized far and wide. The copy writers called each "an acre of seats in a temple of dreams," or induced visions of similar coloration. And in these theatres the motion picture play was the thing. Not stage drama. Not vaudeville. The latter was minor, referred to merely as "presentations." They were motion picture theatres. Yet as gorgeous as the Opera.

Architecturally excessive to the point of vulgarity (though our criticism of this must be tempered by the realization that a popular theatre was being created, forthwith, out of an invention), these instruments of glorification gradually multiplied all through the 1920's. They appeared in the theatrical and business centers of the principal cities of the United States, and importantly at the instance of American interests, in those of Canada and Europe as well.

Expansion of this grandiose exhibition plant at this time was scarcely something that the little fellow, or "independent," could handle. It thus proved an opportunity for group operation of theatres. At the same time, a belief among most of the film distributors that control of theatres was a needed competitive weapon, had urged the distributors to get into exhibition, to operate theatres in "key" situations. Motion picture theatre circuits, which already had a pattern in the booking circuits of vaudeville, came into being, grew, carried the pretentious, so-called "deluxe" cinema to the medium-sized cities, often without local warrant, frequently (as was later learned) without financial profit, but always to the advancement of the "picture show" as a respectable, competent source of theatrical entertainment.

Architecturally, these "palaces" or "temples" were borrowings from the stage theatre. Basically they were the same gilded extravagances, usually at the outset, in the Empire style or some corruption of it. But in the effort to put part of the show on the walls and ceilings, the big-time exhibitors became impatient with any inherited restrictions and highly receptive to new schemes of optical splendor. They therefore welcomed the most abandoned fancies of designers in period styles, reproducing historical and local scenes, which developed into a peculiar form generally referred to in the trade as an "atmospheric" theatre.

This type does not need explanation here, for it is still extant in many places despite the nation-wide program of remodeling pursued during the last few years. It can be identified by the outdoor effect of the auditorium, with its ceiling simulating a star-studded sky, and its walls the walls of some Mediterranean palace or villa. Repudiated today by its most influential exponents, this gorgeous fakery practically characterized motion picture theatre design during the latter 1920's.

It climaxed the period of architectural glorification of the film show. Came 1929, the Depression, Modernism, and a growing appreciation of the fact that the motion picture, by now established as the popular dramatic medium, needed a theatre more comprehensively planned for its own peculiar needs.

EQUIPMENT DEVELOPED TO MEET NEW STANDARDS

The art of the motion picture has always followed its technology—and consequently, so has the business. We have noted earlier in this summary how the advances in the art suggested exploitation of it through the architecture and appointments of the theatre. Here, too, the technologist was at work, as he ever has been since, to give the film-recorded play better reproduction.

A first-class theatre in 1915 might use a projector with Maltese cross 72° intermittent movement that soon became noisy in use and produced an unsteady picture after only moderate wear. The projector was open, and if the film tore a loose end would often flip back toward the lamphouse, catching fire, of course. Motor speed would be varied to adjust the speed of film motion to a preconceived schedule that took no account of reel length, a rheostat being used for d. c. drive and a leather friction clutch for a. c. motors. The take-up was likely to be a split pulley, the tension between the two halves varying as the film was taken up.

Screen illumination might run from 1½ to 4 foot-candles (or as much as 6 foot-candles in rare cases) depending on whether the light source was incandescent, or a vertical arc burning carbons up to ⅞-inch (in some cases 1 inch) in diameter, and drawing 60-75 (sometimes 90) amperes. Arc current source might be the unstable mercury-arc rectifier, an unreliable motor-generator with a short-circuiting arrangement that permitted the projectionist to "steal" current from one arc to feed the other at changeover, or the so-called compensarc, which was simply a step-down transformer for a.c. arc supply.

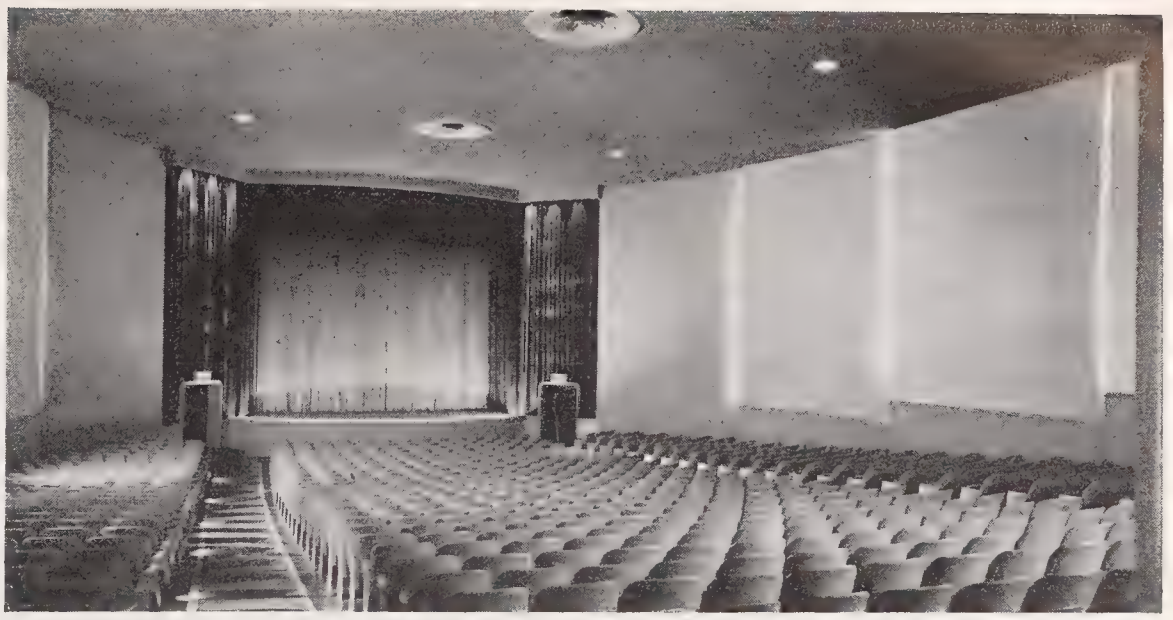
This equipment was mounted either on a four-legged metal table or on the earliest "barber-chair" pedestal, top-heavy, too narrow at the base, and somewhat likely to turn over when the lamphouse was swung from behind the projector proper to the off-side position used for stereopticon projection.

EFFECTS OF SOUND AND IMPROVEMENTS IN LIGHT

In the middle twenties manufacture of the Maltese cross movement was finally abandoned in favor of the Geneva cross when the Nicholas Powers Company was absorbed by Simplex in the building of International Projector Corporation. Simplex projectors had always been enclosed, and the enclosed, dust-free, relatively fire-proof mechanism became the universal standard.

The split-pulley take-up remained in favor until the introduction of sound in the later twenties. Sound also caused elimination of the old type drive motor speed controls in favor, first, of more accurate devices for varying speed and then, in the early thirties, speed variation was entirely abandoned and the 90-feet-per-minute required for sound projection became an invariable standard.

The four-legged table pedestal had become substantially obsolete by the middle twenties; the enlarged and better-balanced "barber-chair" pedestal was first improved by addition of rear braces and, beginning about 1930, very slowly superseded by the completely enclosed box-type base which is standard today.



It was of course in the period under review that projection became more than reproduction of an image. When in 1928 the dialogue and music of the theatrical arts became part of the screen performance, the film theatre acquired full status as a medium of purveying dramatic entertainment.

Projection of the image had, by then, developed to a high state of competence, and advancement in the new technique of sound tended to "steal the scene." The technics of image reproduction, however, have been steadily carried forward, until today a rock-steady picture, well defined of detail whether black-and-white or in color, can be assured any theatre, regardless of size and budget, and with operating refinements raising levels of both efficiency and safety.

One of the most notable of the advances made in projection since 1915 did not come until after the establishment of sound. This was the development of the so-called "Suprex" carbon, which made projection light of the high-intensity quality found in the largest and most pretentious theatres, economically available to medium-sized theatres. The year 1940 has, of course, seen the extension of high-intensity projection light to even the smaller theatres, along with improvement of the screen surface, of lenses, and of shutter systems substantially increasing the amount of effective projected light. Today it is practical to insist upon a minimum of ten foot-candles of screen illumination in any full-fledged theatre.

Accessory equipment of all classes, many of which had not been suggested by the simple needs of the rank and file of theatres in 1915, if, indeed, they had yet come into being at all, now form a prodigious list of essentials. On film cabinets and film splicers, on ticket issuing and registering mechanisms and on curtain control devices, the technician has labored, in high seriousness, as part of the diverse aggregation of people and businesses exclusively or at least importantly serving the film theatre.

There is additionally the equipment which is peculiarly associated with what the more aggressive showman started to sell along about 1915. The comfort of the patron logically fell into the scheme of luxuriousness on which the program of film-art glorification was based.

The veneer auditorium chair was typical of motion picture theatres when this program got under way. Many new luxury-theatres were equipped with the box-spring, upholstered chairs of the finer stage theatres, and through the twenties operators in this class kept demanding more and more comfort and "beauty"—meaning more decorativeness and appearance of comfort. The average little theatre kept the veneer chair, of course, until sound, needing a constant "audience-factor" of absorption, made its elimination a practical necessity. But as the idea of luxury grew in terms of the box office, the motion picture theatre became the principal influence on the designs and development work of seating manufacturers. Today's theatre chair represents a comprehensive revision of auditorium chair design, which effects comfort not merely through the softness of cushions, but through studied support and the relationship of parts to movement as well.

It was not until the early twenties that the development of a positive means of controlling atmospheric conditions within an enclosure gave the comfort-conscious exhibitor a new source of comfort to sell, but he quickly seized it.

The first theatre to be air-conditioned was in Los Angeles. This was, according to the Carrier Corporation, pioneers in the field, in 1922. Today the public, however it may be willing to endure hot, stuffy air in other enclosures, expects comfortable atmospheric conditions in the motion picture theatre, winter or summer.

TODAY'S TRENDS IN FILM THEATRE PLANNING

A large share of those years from 1915 forward were devoted to the development of the mechanisms of the motion picture which would bring it to genuine competence as a creative technique; and to an impressive identification of it, through a growing number of luxurious theatres, with "culture" and the traditional art forms. In these later years we have begun to design our theatres more fundamentally.

With the "settling down" of the motion picture as something of a local recreational service, (after the efforts of the late twenties to give it the exaggerations of the Opera), we have come to interest ourselves more in the seating plan, the auditorium lighting in its effect on vision of the picture, in precise acoustical correction, etc.

This is by way of revaluating the building which, with its equipment and furnishings, forms the whole mechanism of motion picture exhibition today. In 1915, in emerging from the nickelodeon era, the more affluent exhibitor groups directing this emergence, merely borrowed from the stage theatre. Today we are endeavoring to develop, on the basis of some standardized minima, an exhibition plant designed specifically for the motion picture in its modern status as the predominant purveyor of dramatic entertainment.

Modern principles of architecture generally, stressing function as the controlling factor in design, have aided in this revaluation, but the building of smaller units to serve the neighborhood and small town, providing all the essential mechanical and environmental facilities that the "deluxe" centralized theatre had exploited, demanded greater efficiency and specialization in planning.

Today the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, which, so far as it had interested itself in the theatre, had been concerned exclusively with projection and safety measures, began in the early thirties to sponsor studies of architectural form as it related to projection, vision, acoustics, etc.

Even Hollywood has brought the exhibition plant into its purview, through the Research Council of the Academy of Motion Pictures Arts & Sciences.

In architectural or decorative style, the motion picture theatre has adopted, for the most part, the devices of modernism, but the showman finds it difficult to convince himself that the high colors and ornamentation characterizing traditional styles are not necessary to the creation of a suitable theatrical environment. Therefore, in some ways, the theatre is developing a modern style peculiarly its own. The range of devices is wide and varied. But whatever the showman thinks he needs in this department, he has become receptive to the idea that the basis of his planning must be studied motion picture engineering.

A modern functional auditorium treatment employing architectural forms for acoustic control, in the Whitney theatre in suburban New Haven, Conn. Ben Schlanger, architect.

STILL FIGHTING FOR "BETTER PROJECTION"

THE oldest member of the editorial staff of Motion Picture Herald, F. H. Richardson, continues to carry on his efforts in behalf of high projection standards. Twenty-five years ago, when Martin Quigley launched his career in motion picture trade journalism, "F. H." was already in the thick of his battle for full recognition of the significance of projection and of the men operating the equipment, to the success of the motion picture. Joining the staff of Moving Picture World in 1907, after several years as a working projectionist, Mr. Richardson waged his campaign unrelentingly through the years in that publication, until 1928, when the World was merged with Mr. Quigley's Exhibitors Herald, transferring the battle ground to the Herald-World. There is, happily, far less need of "Pop's" excoriations today, but it is entirely logical to think that this is so to an appreciable degree because of his labors through those 30 years. —G. S.

BROADCASTERS GET $18,206,716 ON $89,990,646 GROSS FROM SPONSORS

Six Stations Exceed Revenue of $1,000,000; Payroll for Year Was $51,620,305; Average Employment, 19,000 Persons

Service operations of 705 broadcasting stations last year brought in a total revenue of $89,990,646 and resulted in a broadcast service income, after deduction of $71,783,930 for expenses, of $18,206,716, it was disclosed this week by the Federal Communications Commission.

Analysis by the commission of the financial reports filed by the stations showed that, on the whole, broadcasters with revenues of less than $50,000 lost money on their broadcasting service. The report showed that 362 stations with revenues of $50,000 or more showed a total broadcast income of $18,490,118, while 343 with revenues of less than $50,000 showed a deficit of $283,402.

Six Exceed $1,000,000

There were six stations, according to the report, with individual revenues in excess of $1,000,000, with an aggregate revenue of $10,460,123; 32 in the $500,000-$1,000,000 class, with an aggregate revenue of $22,398,847, and 178 with revenues of $100,000 to $500,000, with an aggregate revenue of $34,397,170.

A breakdown of the revenues of 519 stations with time sales of $25,000 or more showed that they received $22,500,941 from the sale of time to major networks, $1,139,244 from regional networks and $473,943 from other networks and stations. Other receipts were $30,472,053 from time sales to national and regional non-network users and $34,590,967 from time sales to local users. Talent sales accounted for $4,524,219 and $110,262 was received in commissions, fees and profits from obtaining or placing talent. Sundry broadcast revenues were $2,325,224. Against time sales, the stations reported payments of $743,559 to networks and stations and $8,127,455 in commissions.

Demonstrating the important position it has achieved as an employer of labor, broadcasting last year had a payroll of $51,620,305, it was shown by the FCC analysis. Of this amount, it was found, $13,651,074 was paid out by the network companies and $37,969,231 by 705 individual stations.

The analysis showed that the chains generally were paying much higher salaries than the individual stations, in the case of staff musicians the relatively weekly average being $125.90 for the nets and $47.53 for the stations.

The FCC found that a definite relationship existed between the size and type of station and the pay of employees. The 33 full-time clear-channel stations, for instance, accounted for about 25 per cent of the salary payments; the 206 unlimited time regional stations accounted for nearly 50 per cent, while the small local stations represented only about 15 per cent.

Fluctuations in employment were noticeable but considerably less than those of other industries, it was indicated. Average employment during 1939 ran between 18,416 persons in July and 20,257 in December. Fluctuations in the network organizations ran between 4,101 in June and 4,348 in December.

100,000 FM Sets

A sales goal of at least 100,000 FM radio receivers has been set for 1941 by manufacturers. Prices range from about $150 up for a set which will receive FM and the regular AM broadcasts. John V. Hogan, operator of WQXR, has been appointed chairman of a FM committee by the National Association of Broadcasters.

On Sunday the Mutual network will total 150 stations, with the additions of the Intermountain network, comprising three Utah stations, KLO, Ogden-Salt Lake City; KOVO, Provo, and KEUB, Price. WMRC, Greenville, S. C., also has joined Mutual.

The Communist Party has purchased time on the major networks for four national hookups. Last June when the Communists were granted free radio time the networks made a brief announcement that time had been granted under the Communications Act and that the speeches did not reflect the opinion of the network.

Circuits Set Radio Tieups

Warner Brothers theatres in Philadelphia and the Schine houses in Rochester have arranged radio tieups. Station KYW in Philadelphia during the month of October will broadcast a daily recorded musical quiz during which attention will be drawn to motion pictures playing at Warner first run theatres. According to the plan 25 pairs of tickets for the eight theatres will be distributed each week. The theatres' part of the exchange deal will be to flash the radio station's call letters and special program announcements on the screen and displayed in the lobby.

In Rochester the Schine Theatres have inaugurated over station WSAY a 15-minute program five nights a week and on Sunday afternoon. The programs feature Kay Kruzer, organist on the programs broadcast from the Riviera theatre, and guest singers. Bob Meagher, advertising manager for Schine, produces the programs and is the announcer.

Philco Corporation, in Philadelphia, has made and sold approximately 15,000,000 radio receiving sets since it entered the radio manufacturing business in 1928, according to a review of the company's growth and development published this week. "One of the most important factors contributing to Philco's record of achievement is its research and engineering activities," the history of the company stated. "Philco maintains one of the world's largest research laboratories devoted exclusively to radio and television engineering and the further development of these arts. A staff of approximately 230 engineers, scientists and research assistants is constantly at work developing and improving the company's various products," it added.

DEFENSE DELAYS INDUSTRY DATA

The issuance of reports by the Census Bureau on the 1939 operations of the motion picture industry, covered in the 1940 census of manufacturing and business, will be delayed until dates have been compiled on 75 industries important in the national defense program, it was learned in Washington this week.

The reports on the 75 industries were requested by the National Defense Advisory Commission in connection with its efforts to secure up-to-date data on the output and potential capacity of existing plants in those lines, to determine the necessity for expansion to meet national defense requirements.

In the normal course of its operations, the reports on motion picture production and exhibition would have been among those compiled within the next few months but census bureau officials this week declined to hazard a prediction as to when it now will be possible to prepare them.

Labor Backing Sunday Shows

Support of the Sunday motion picture issue in the Pennsylvania communities which will vote on the question at the November election has been pledged by James L. McDevitt, president of the Pennsylvania Federation of Labor.

The Federation favors Sunday films, Mr. McDevitt said, because they provide additional work opportunities for motion picture employees and because they offer wholesome entertainment for many persons who cannot attend theatres on any other day.

Under an act of the 1935 Legislature, Sunday films are permitted only where it has been approved by vote. The first referendum five years ago resulted in 167 municipalities permitting Sunday motion pictures and 158 opposed.

Resumed in Gulfport

Sunday motion picture shows were resumed in Gulfport, Miss., last Sunday when Lloyd Royal, operator of the Royal and Ritz theatres, opened the houses for the benefit of Louisiana's flood sufferers with a percentage to be set aside for this cause during the next few Sundays.

The two Saenger houses, Paramount and Anderson, remained dark following a controversy between the management and the local American Legion Post, which declined to further sponsor Sunday shows on a 10 per cent of the take. When all shows closed late in August on Sundays, it was the first blue law adherence on the Mississippi coast in 10 years. Mr. Royal was not a party to the Legion agreement.

Following a drive against gambling of all types on the Mississippi coast and particularly in Harrison County, all theatres in Biloxi, Gulfport and Pass Christian discontinued Bank Night this past week.

Sunday Films Lose

The long fight of Sunday motion picture advocates to legalize exhibition between 2 p. m. and midnight in Rensselaer, N. Y., was defeated this week owing to the unprecedented opposition appearing before the common council.

The Palace theatre, first run house in Charleroi, Pa., starts Sunday film shows this coming Sunday.

The Mark of Zorro

(Twentieth Century-Fox)

Tyrone Power here appears in the role of Don Diego Vega, best swordsman in all Madrid, who returns home to Los Angeles in the year 1820, and, as "Zorro," ousts a tyrant and restores his father as mayor.

The role will be remembered as one taken by the late Douglas Fairbanks in 1920, who also did others among the Johnson McCully stories of the young swordsman. In this latest version, Linda Darnell appears as the niece of the incumbent mayor's wife, providing the romantic interest.

The boy's father is interpreted by Montagu Love, the tyrannical mayor by J. Edward Bromberg, the latter's aide by Basil Rathbone. Gale Sondergaard is seen as the vain and supercilious wife of the mayor, while Eugene Pallette portrays a two-fisted priest to whom the boy confides his dual role. While acting the fop at home, he is showing the contempt of the people for their mayor by making his famous mark of "Z" on whatever the former has done in the countryside, and eventually drives him back to Spain.

Raymond Griffith was associate producer on the Darryl Zanuck film, with Rouben Mamoulian directing, as he did last on "Golden Boy." The McCully story was adapted by Garrett Fort, and the screen play written by John Taintor Foote.

Release date: Nov. 1, 1940.

Directed by Ray Taylor, who handled the "Flash Gordon" and "Green Hornet" serials, the picture had Joseph G. Sanford as associate producer. Sherman Lowe wrote the original screen play.

Trailing Double Trouble

(Monogram-Phoenix)

Second in the "Range Buster" series produced by George Weeks' Phoenix Productions for Monogram release, this has the title trio bring to justice a group of murderers.

Finding a baby in a runaway wagon, Ray Corrigan, John King and Max Terhune discover that the child's father has been murdered for motives involving a gravel contract on his ranch. The trio hide the baby, switch a dummy in place of one of their own number in a kidnapping sequence, and finally see that justice is done.

In addition to the three protagonists, the cast includes Lita Conway, Nancy Louise King, Roy Barcroft and Jimmy Wakely and His Rough Riders. Featured is "Under the Western Skies," song by Lew Porter and Johnny Lange.

Bittersweet

(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

Co-starring Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy, "Bittersweet" is based on the Noel Coward play which received previous film treatment by Herbert Wilcox in 1933. The Coward story, using a flashback technique, portrays two young lovers about to say goodbye because of the man's lack of money. Their parting overheard, they are told the story of an elderly lady who had faced the same problem, decided to marry the man she loved.

The greater part of the story is concerned with the life she led as a result of her decision, a life which was rich and full. Both parts are taken by the feminine principal in the film.

The picture was directed by W. S. Van Dyke, II, associated with the co-stars in "Naughty Marietta" and "Rose Marie." Producing was Victor Saville, who supervised "The Citadel" and "Goodbye, Mr. Chips." The film is in Technicolor.

The cast, in addition to the co-stars, includes Ian Hunter, as a nobleman and gambler who defends the principals; George Sanders, as Eddy's antagonist; Felix Bressart, Curt Bois, Sig Rumann, Fay Holden, Lynne Carver, Edward Ashley, Diana Lewis and Herman Bing. Nine of the Noel Coward songs are heard.

Release date: To be determined.

Father Is a Prince

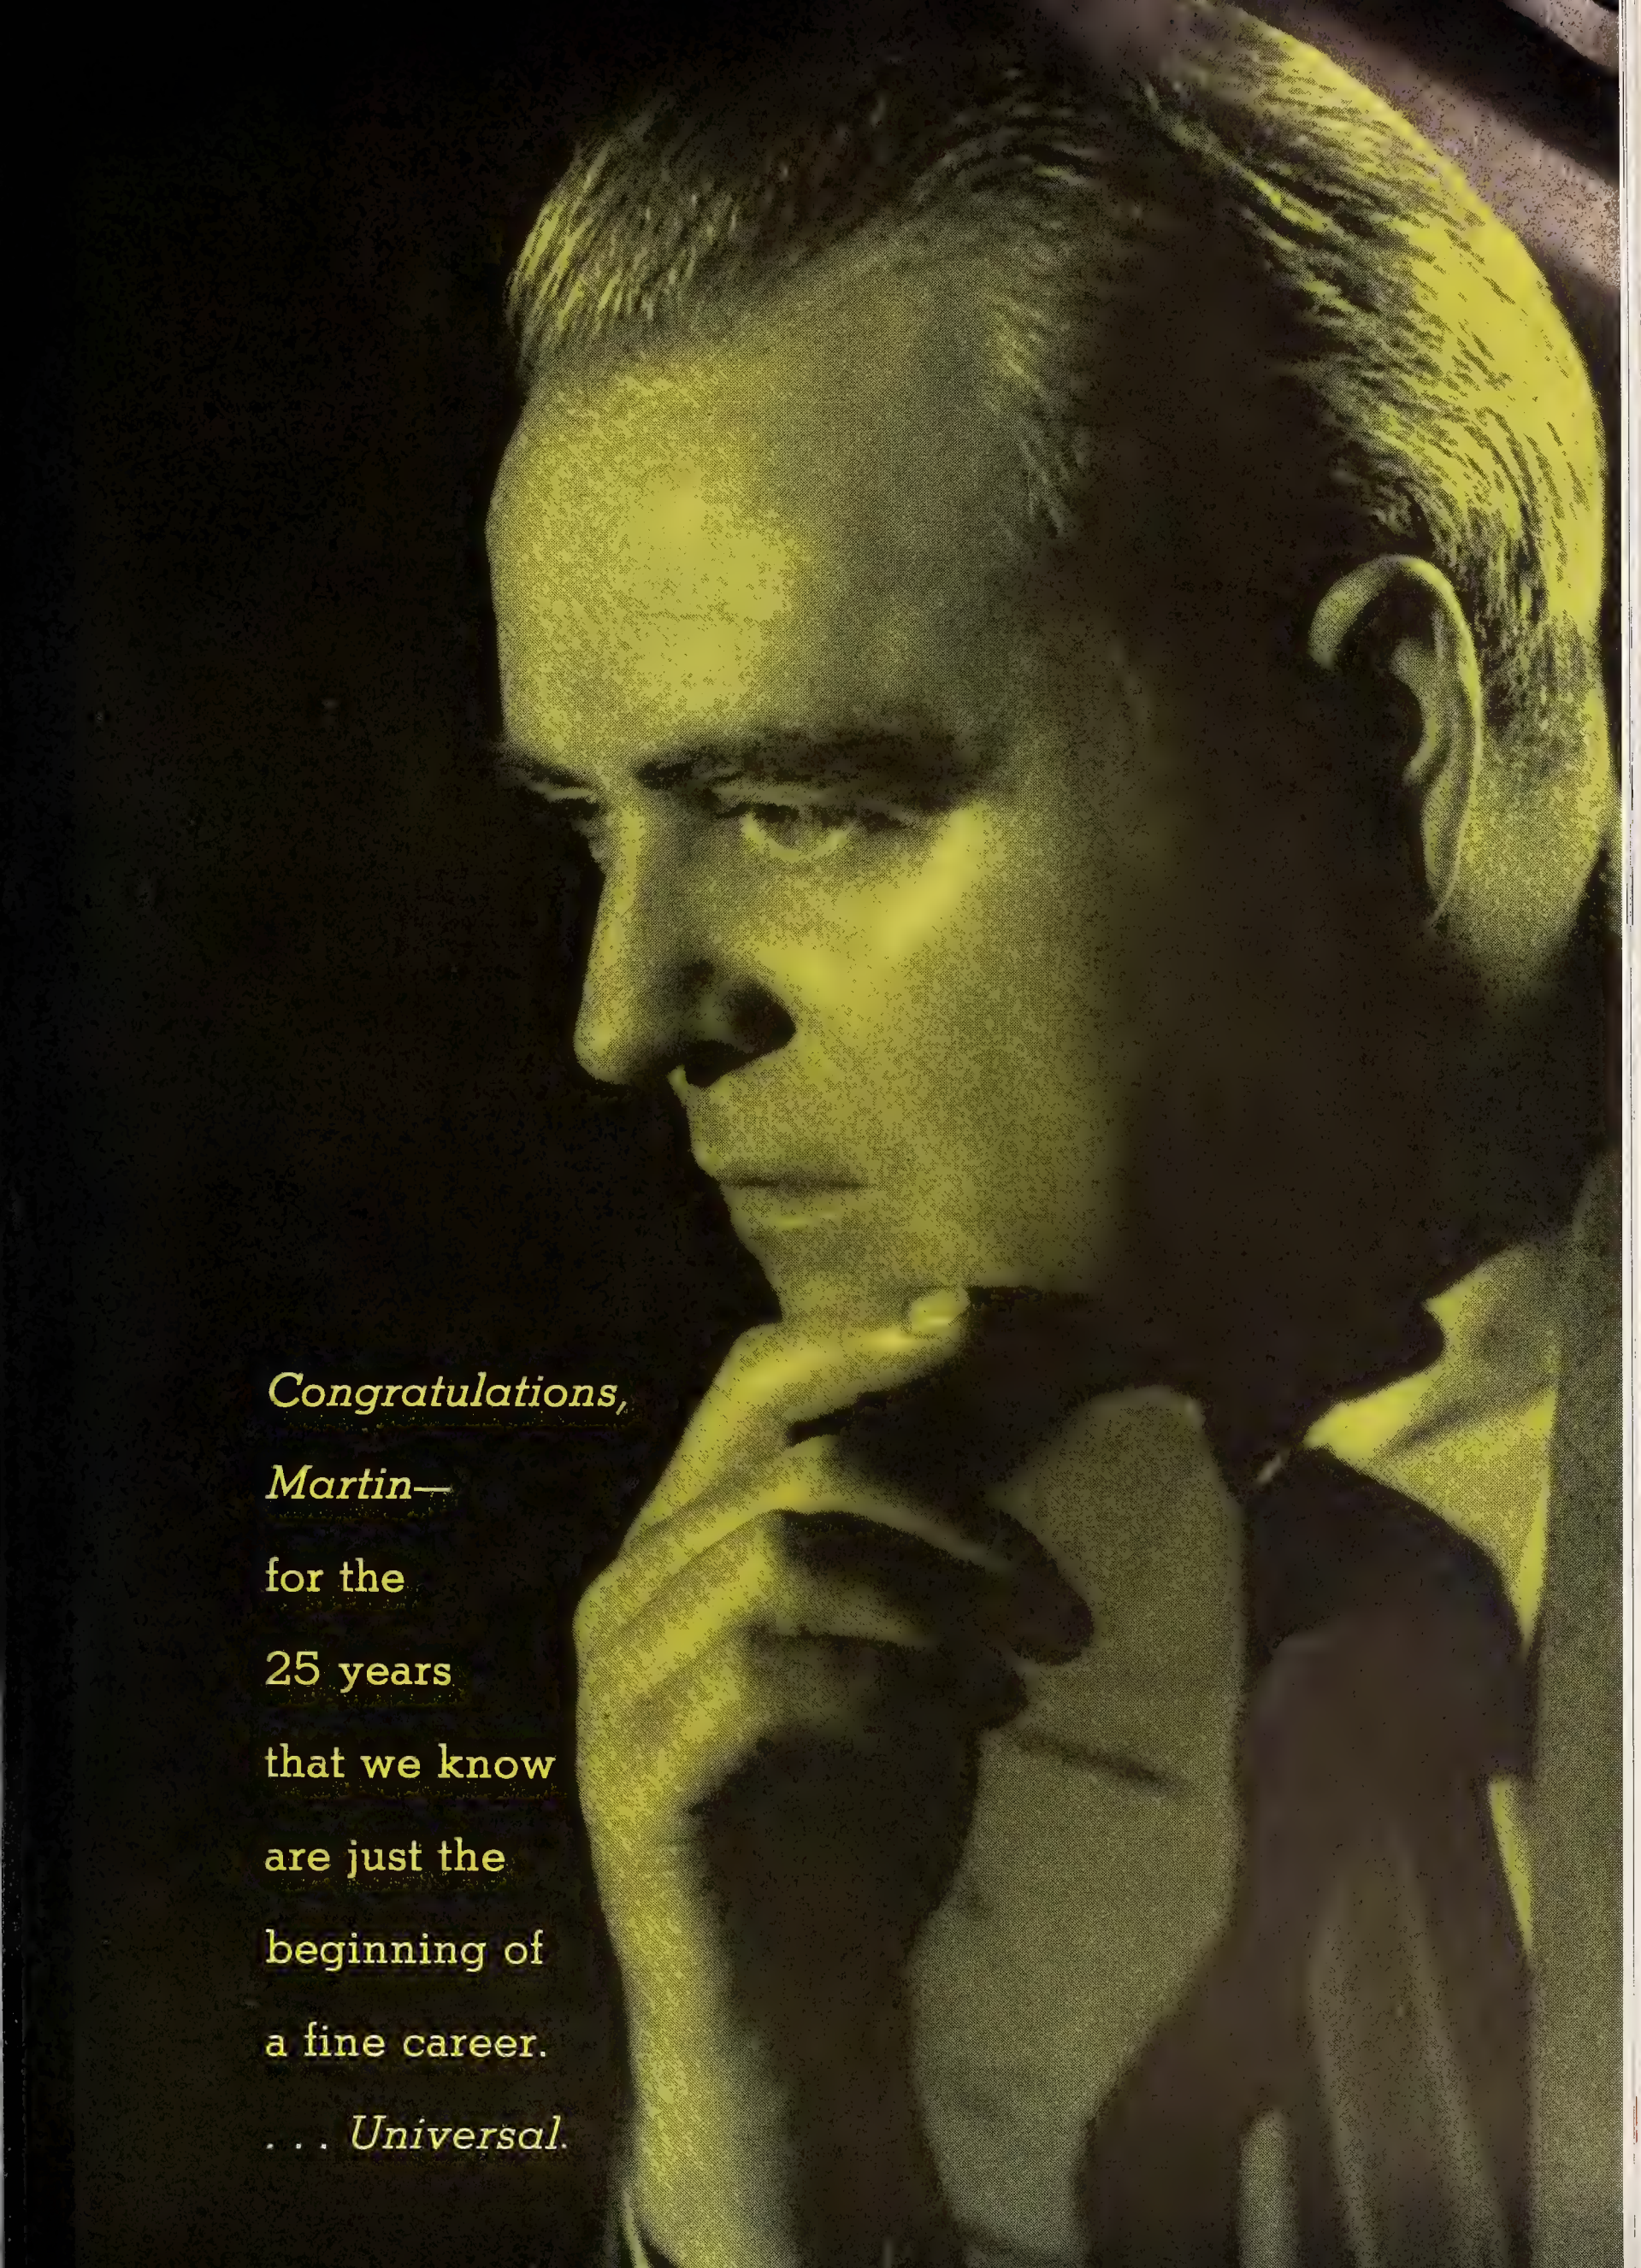
(Warner Brothers)

Taken from a play by Sophie Kerr Underwood and Anna S. Richardson, this screen play by Robert Kent portrays the reformation of a crusty husband and father who is more concerned with the importance of money than with his family's happiness.

Grant Mitchell portrays the above character, while the part of his wife is enacted by Nana Bryant. Their children are seen in the persons of Jan Clayton, Billy Dawson and Richard Clayton, with the fiance of the first interpreted by George Reeves. His appearance at the family house is the spark igniting rebellion within the family at their father's refusal to be civil. Bringing him around is his wife's illness.

William Jacobs was associate producer on the picture, which was directed by Noel Smith.

Release date: To be determined. (Formerly called "Father Knows Best.")



Flying News

(Universal)

Latest in the Richard Arlen-Andy Devine action series, "Flying News" casts the two as newsreel cameramen, with the former's exploits continually getting him into trouble but also providing him with exclusive shots.

The principal adventure treated deals with the foiling of plans concocted by foreign agents to sabotage an American dam site. The agents are depicted by Rolf Harolde and Richard Terry, while romantic interest for the two principals is supplied by Dorothy Lovett and Janet Shaw.

The Money-Making Stars of A Quarter of a Century

The Box Office Favorites from 1915 to 1939 as Recorded in the Files of The Herald

by WILLIAM R. WEAVER
Hollywood Editor

WHO were the Money-Making Stars of 1915?

Nobody knew for sure. Everybody professed to. Every film-salesman knew he had them in his portfolio. Every exhibitor knew he had them booked—or that his competitor had. It was a seller's market.

By the end of 1916 "What the Picture Did for Me," its shadow slanting backward over 1915 by virtue of the exhibition-life enjoyed by films in that era, would be placing the facts on record for all to see, facts as of city and town, East, West, Middle West and South, but that was not now. Now was flux, transition, give and take, make or break, guess and gamble—no bottom, ceiling or sides.

There were, however, a few dependables, enough to whet appetite for more.

It was no secret that display of William S. Hart's name in front of a theatre, with or without title of film, would be followed by a filling of the auditorium to capacity.

There was no concealing the fact that Charles Chaplin's name on a marquee—just as, a little later, Sidney Drew's—was guarantee that the comedy on the program would carry the feature—any feature.

And it was a circumstance of those 'teen years, not duplicated since and perhaps in part because the facts about the drawing-power of the stars were made determinable, that the names of D. W. Griffith, Cecil B. DeMille and Thomas H. Ince meant more to the public than any player's.

In those years, as today, a number of conditions related in no way to merit, ability and popularity influenced a star's standing in the Money-Making Stars rating.

Frequency of appearance was and is a factor. No star limiting himself or limited to one picture per year has been listed among the top ten, whereas several whose names have been included with regularity owe the distinction to the number of their pictures per year rather than to the measure of any one of them. It's a matter of box office mathematics. Thus Charles Chaplin, whose drawing-power in two-reelers is not reflected in a listing based on feature-length films and whose feature-length vehicles come at five year intervals, does not appear in any year's list.

Extent of distribution, number of holdovers, repeat engagements, these and other conditions controlled by buyer and seller in their negotiations control in some degree the player's chances of finding his name listed at year's end among the ten who have drawn more money than any other into the cash registers of the nation's theatres.

The Money-Making Stars of a quarter century are as follows:

Annual Polls and Canvasses Record Early Money-Makers

In adjoining columns are listed the Money-Making Stars of 1915-1939.

Lists for 1932-39 are those obtained through polling exhibitor-subscribers of Motion Picture Herald by means of a questionnaire adopted in 1932.

Lists for 1925-31 were obtained from the same source by means of a questionnaire, abandoned in 1931, which elicited also a listing of each year's pictures in the order of their yield at the box office.

Lists for 1915-24 are compiled from an analysis of 200,000 exhibitor-reports to Motion Picture Herald published in the 520 weekly editions spanning the decade, from study of records preserved by theatres then in operation and documents in possession of producers, distributors and circuit-operators of the period.

It is to the exhibitors cooperating through the columns of the Herald's "What the Picture Did for Me" department that the trade owes the accuracy of these Money-Making Stars lists for 1915-24. With the founding of that service on October 14th, 1916, a means of determining in detail the American public's demands in the field of entertainment was placed at disposal of an industry which had progressed until then by rule of thumb. The motion picture had possessed no such instrument, welcomed this one as an answer to a need.

It was into no atmosphere of calm and certainty that the "What the Picture Did for Me" service thrust its inquiry.

The day of two- and three-reelers was in its twilight hour but had not ended.

The Triangle film company, combining the output of D. W. Griffith, Thomas H. Ince and Mack Sennett, had stormed upon the scene one year before, introducing a Douglas Fairbanks, a Frank Keenan and a Charles Ray, a William S. Hart about to command a public outnumbering all other fan groups.

Famous Players corporation and the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play company had been merged in July to form Famous Players-Lasky and marshal under one trademark the resources of Jesse L. Lasky, Cecil B. DeMille, Samuel Goldwyn, Adolph Zukor, Oliver Morosco and Daniel Frohman—into one program such stars as Mary Pickford, Blanche Sweet, Wallace Reid, Marguerite Clark, a score more.

Metro—its Harold Lockwood-May Allison team turning out adventure-romances with the regularity of a metronome—was on the move from New York to California with expansion in view and Olga Petrova on the billboards.

William Fox was working Theda Bara and William Farnum overtime to meet demand, developing June Caprice, others.

Carl Laemmle's Universal was vacillating between two-reelers and five-, manufacturing, the while, films in all dimensions and classifications for exhibitors in all corners of the world-market, Hobart Bosworth and Jane Novak his aces.

Lewis J. Selznick was offering Clara Kimball Young's "The Common Law" in the states'-rights field and "The Birth of a Nation" was still roadshowing, building fame and a fortune for D. W. Griffith, futures for Lillian Gish, Henry B. Walthall.

General Film company, World Film corporation, Mutual and V.L.S.E. were fighting a rear-guard action with competitors disposed to give no quarter.

ASSOCIATED MOTION PICTURE ADVERTISERS

I well remember the first issue of the Exhibitors Herald as the Motion Picture Herald was originally known. The Herald created a real sensation throughout our business because in format, vivid presentation of the news, constructive editorial policy, and general air of showmanship, had transcended any current or previous trade paper. That for 25 years this magazine has not only maintained the high standards set by Martin Quigley when he launched it, but has constantly proved of greater service to the industry, particularly in developing and encouraging the art of showmanship, which is what we all live by, is a tribute to Mr. Quigley and his splendid editorial staff.

My heartiest congratulations to you on your 25th anniversary, Mr. Quigley, and to all who have unceasingly labored by your side to make your publications the indispensable source of information and guidance for every exhibitor in the land!

LEON J. BAMBERGER,
President.

SOCIETY OF MOTION PICTURE ENGINEERS

In my opinion, the Motion Picture Industry is fortunate in having had twenty-five years of service from Mr. Martin Quigley. His constructive thoughts and forthright expression of them have, on many occasions, served as a beacon to warn adventurous souls in our industry from dangerous shoals, and guided them safely into worthy and proper channels of thoughts and action.

Our Society of Motion Picture Engineers has appreciated the support given to its technical endeavors by the Quigley Publications and join with hosts of others in the industry, in wishing for Mr. Quigley, many more years of happiness, prosperity, and leadership in our industry.

E. A. WILLIFORD,
President.

QP Inter-Office Letter, London to New York

Along with the Clipper mail and cables from over there, the morning of press day for this anniversary issue of the HERALD, James Cunningham, news editor, received a note from Aubrey Flanagan, editorial representative in the London bureau at 4 Golden Square. Just as one writer to another, Mr. Flanagan tells how it has been to work in London of late. His letter follows:

Dear Jim:—

Maybe you'll all have been wondering if you'd ever hear from us again. Maybe, for that matter, you won't. But if you receive this it will be sufficient indication that to the moment of writing we are still flying the QP banner bravely in the breeze.

I write—as I usually do these days—during an air raid warning, with the guns barking deafeningly and Nazi bombers and British fighters battling like silver gnats in the sunshot blue above. Around them clots of sudden cottonwool pepper the skies. All is thunder. A few moments back two Jerries "bailed out," their atomic bodies swaying beneath the bellying 'chutes which float drunkenly to earth. Somewhere another Heinkel has crashed on Hitler's mighty scrap heap.

Work under these insane circumstances is not easy. We carry on, but phones are restricted, and many folks take shelter. And anyway, with shrapnel pattering the pavements, and machine guns peppering away above, you can't get about much. Our alarums are something more frequent than frequent. They may last eight hours or ten minutes. Cumulatively they interfere with the daily round.

I suppose censorial strictness will prevent me being specific about damage. But it is very minute compared to the whole target of London itself. Probably Jerry knows as well as anyone what he has done. All of us know of the shambles which is now the East End, of the devastation of humble working class houses, and the sad, red-eyed processions of homeless refugees who trek from place to place seeking the bus or the lorry that never comes, know, too, of the long queues of desolate East Enders who with bedding and odd scraps of furniture line up in early evening outside the West End air raid shelters, in the hope that there they may find a bed. There is the insensate tragedy of war, if you like, Jim. Measure the grimness of this against the burnt out warehouses and the damaged railway lines, and the broken shop windows, and it is an odd result.

I live out of town, but even there, twenty miles away the barrage and the rings of bombs, the incessant drone of German planes, back and forth on a sort of shuttle service of slaughter, has prevented me from sleeping for many nights now. One night this week I stayed in town, slept five in a communal bed on the floor of a Chelsea cellar (del "slept" and insert "lay"). It was odd enough taxi-ing from Park Lane to Chelsea in the booming darkness of the raid, skidding over broken glass and swerving to avoid craters. But even odder was it to walk at midnight to the riverside in a city which seemed dead or doomed, with no sound but the evil droning of the bombers miles above . . . . And then a whistling crescendo and a cataclysmic "crooomp" somewhere . . . . and silence again save for the droning on. I could never hope to recapture that atmosphere of desolate doom, the silent streets, the ruins here of a noble Georgian house, a jagged profile of ruin against the night sky, there of a shelter where many were killed by a direct hit, the droning death, and the shrill whistle and the thunderous explosion, and the silence that we knew was the silence of death. . . .

To lay there in the night, on that basement floor waiting for the periodic but intermittent thunder, a thunder all the more grim for the silence that preceded it and the prelude of destruction literally whistling from the skies, was something new.

And all my charlady—probably you'd call her housekeeper—has to say is:

"All this is a fidget isn't it?"

But, as I say we carry on, with cinemas open but taking little or no money, everybody—save the tragic of the East End—incredibly calm and resolute, facing this new threat of invasion and military battle.

Hopie is taking a week in the country where she has heard no guns and no alarums. I've not even thought about a holiday.

My regards to all at Rockefeller Center—at least the QP section. And I hope you'll still be hearing from me.

AUBREY.

P. S.: A piece of shrapnel has just come down through our office window.

Weekend Cable from Aubrey Flanagan, London.—Air raids in all sections. Film industry still operating, calmly. More cinemas hit by bombs, some destroyed. Fifty theatres in London home counties temporarily or completely out of action.

Networks Urge Bands to Plug Music from BMI

Girding themselves for January 1st, when they will be forced to operate without music from the catalogues of the American Society of Composers, Authors, and Publishers, the country's two largest networks—the National Broadcasting Company and the Columbia Broadcasting System, this week asked the leaders of orchestras on their sustaining programs to use several non-ASCAP songs on each program.

To Use BMI Catalogue

Presumably, the leaders can choose these songs from the growing music catalogues of Broadcast Music, Inc., of New York, established early this year by the National Association of Broadcasters to replace ASCAP as a source of music for radio, screen, stage.

The CBS order, understood to have been sent out over the weekend, is reported to have asked the orchestra leaders to use one non-ASCAP song for each 15 minutes of a program. The NBC ordered the leaders to use at least three such per program. It is understood that the Mutual Broadcasting System, third largest of the country, is following NBC and CBS, in this course.

BMI music will be available after January 1st, the networks hope, in quantity enough to entirely supplant ASCAP music and they feel it necessary to popularize its music in the preceding months.

Noting the actions by the networks, ASCAP last week charged that they were more moves "to establish monopolistic control in the radio industry."

Meanwhile, BMI announced it had admitted to membership 160 authors, and composers, among them Stuff Smith, Remus Harris, and Jimmie Fidler.

BMI is spending approximately $45,000 monthly, New York observers of the music publishing industry estimated this week.

Continuing its policy of going to the public, as well as to the entertainment world, to plead its case, ASCAP on Tuesday began its Music Festival at the Golden Gate Exposition, San Francisco. Members were to conduct the city's symphony orchestra, in ASCAP selections, and others were to make personal appearances.

Up to last week, BMI had published approximately 120 original songs, and 175 new arrangements of others. It has recently been buying new songs written by popular radio band leaders.

ASCAP counsel, Louis D. Frohlich and Herman Finkelstein, will appear at Lincoln, Nebr., Federal Court October 3rd for hearing on the record for the U. S. Supreme Court appeal on the constitutionality of the state's anti-ASCAP law.

Assistants at Outing

James A. Coston and Charles H. Ryan, executives of Warner Brothers Theatres, were to be hosts at the "Assistant Managers' Outing," at Beverly Shores, Indiana, Wednesday, September 25th. Soft-ball, golf, horseshoe pitching and a tug-of-war, by teams headed by Harry Turrell and Herb Wheeler, were to feature the event.

On the same day, girl employees of the Warners' Chicago office were to have had an outing at Lincolnshire Country Club. Verne Kenney and Ruth Buhlig were in charge of a program of tennis, soft-ball, golf and horseback riding.

IMPORTERS SEE END OF 'ART' THEATRE IN U. S.

Supply of French Films Cut Off by Occupation; Latin-American Production Planned

For art theatres, according to foreign film distributors, this year is the end of the French film cycle with the U. S., made so by the French collapse. However, it may also be a year in which another cycle will begin—Spanish films replacing French.

Quantity Imports Ended

The French collapse ended the flow of French films to this country. There may still be a trickle; but the day of the French film here is apparently ended. Already, art houses are closing, or closed. Some have turned to independent product. Some are being used by their former opposition. Others are still running, existing on French product still unused, or coming.

The hope of the little theatres is that importers of French films, who know what the theatres want, will succeed in developing a substitute film source.

A canvass, this week, of the importers reveals a general pessimism. Some have product, but not too much. Others have pictures in France on contract but do not know whether they will be delivered. Still others hope they can salvage some of the still unscreened French films when and if contact with occupied France is resumed. Some hope to obtain French pictures from French Canada and other French language territories.

Several are planning to produce pictures in the United States and in Latin America. Andre Heymann, president of the French Film Center, New York, said this week that he would begin producing films this winter. He expects to make them at low cost, probably in the East using exteriors. His first film will be a feature.

Mr. Heymann's firm has no contact with France now. He had an agreement for four films but they are in Paris and he thinks it foolish to expect to obtain them until the Germans leave. Also, he expected five from French producer Marcel Pagnol: "Le Schpountz," a satire on the film industry, starring Fernandel; "Topaz," starring Louis Jouvet; "Marius," with Raimu and others; "Cesar," with Raimu and others; and "Jofroi." Some of these were made as far back as 1936.

Mr. Heymann said he had been informed negatives of "Jofroi" and "Le Schpountz" had left Paris May 10th. They have not arrived. He was told by a Frenchman arrived in America recently that Mr. Pagnol declared the negative of "Cesar" had been sent from France. That, also, has not arrived.

Films from Latin-American

The French Film Center now has only two "new" French films: "Heritage," now being released; and "Gold in the Mountain," title of which is tentative.

There is little chance of French production resuming while the country is occupied, until the Germans leave, Mr. Heymann thinks. The Germans, he pointed out, have not licensed French producers but they have dubbed about 200 German films for showing in France and they may attempt to send these to the United States, posing them as French films.

He suspects that, if French production does resume, it will be propaganda-filled.

This is a transition year for art houses, from French to Latin-American films, according to Irvin Shapiro, general sales manager of the World Pictures Corporation, New York. Mr. Shapiro compared the present period to that in which the little theatres changed their film fare from German to French. German pictures, he recalled, were the fad of the superliterate film fan before Hitler.

World Pictures is already releasing two Latin-American films: "Time in the Sun," and "Night of the Maya," both made in Mexico.

World is not buying films now from France. "We want first to make sure what kind of France it is," he remarked.

The company is interested in four films to be made by Geza Polaty in Cuba. The first, "The Kingdom of God" is in work. This will be released here and in all territories except Latin-America by World.

Though no new French deals are pending, World has two new French pictures, sent before that country's collapse: "Hatred" and "The Patriot," both in the New York offices.

May Come from Montreal

Joseph Burstyn, of Mayer and Burstyn, New York, still expects to secure some old French pictures from the south of France or from Montreal where, he understands there are several good pictures.

Mr. Burstyn has no new French films but is still setting bookings on "Ballerina," "The Lower Depths," "Generals Without Buttons," "Club Des Femmes," "Louise" and others.

"In the future," he remarked, "we'll perhaps have to make our own pictures in the Spanish language in Latin America." He explained that such pictures would be made on a low budget with French directors, and in the French artistic idiom, and would be aimed at American art houses as always, and at the large Latin-American market of some 5,000 theatres, in which French pictures have always been admired, and where they usually have been the strongest competitors to American films.

Mayer and Burstyn are now negiotiating to produce in Latin-America, perhaps in Buenos Aires, he said.

This week he had established contact with the south of France, he said. Most producers, he explained, are there waiting for permission from the Germans to obtain negatives and other property from the Paris area, and to produce.

I. E. Lopert, of New York, sees "enough product for a year and after that, the end of French film importing."

No business will be done by him with this France, he said, meaning the France represented by the Petain-Laval government at Vichy.

Mr. Lopert will probably produce English language pictures in this country, he said. French language pictures, he pointed out, would be impractical because of the smallness of the market outside of France.

Mr. Lopert now is distributing "Hotel Du Nord," starring Annabella and Louis Jouvet. He hopes to obtain about six French pictures from the United States Customs House in New York which are being held in the absence of any word from the several French producers whose property they are.

Film Alliance of the United States is not presently distributing any French films though it has several in its vaults, a spokesman said in New York Monday. It was additionally explained that French films represented a small portion of the Company's interests.

His editorials have always been to the best interest of the entire industry and I can say without fear of contradiction that he enjoys the friendship and goodwill of the entire Motion Picture Industry.

A quarter of a century, a long time, my friend. . . . It has been with a great deal of keen appreciation on my part to watch you steer the papers you publish in a straight channel of intelligent fairness. Your editorial policies from the time you started have been an inspiration to us workers of the motion picture industry. In that entire span of time never have I seen you and what you stand for falter. Keep up that good work. You are a great asset to a great industry.

GRIFFITH AMUSEMENT COMPANY

Martin Quigley has contributed as much, or possibly more than any other executive in the industry to the end of making the motion picture industry one of the foremost of all industries. By his ceaseless labors he has been able to write editorials that give a clear understanding of all important matters that have come before the industry through the years; and, in my opinion, these have helped all men in all branches of the industry to understand the viewpoint of the other about most anything.

L. C. GRIFFITH,

NEW AGREEMENTS MADE BY OPERATORS' UNIONS

Cleveland Contract Renewed; Cincinnati Gets New Pact; Nick and Weston Sentenced

With new contracts obtained in some cities, and being negotiated in others; with their unions involved in labor disputes in certain locations, and elections and plans afoot for the coming year in others, projectionists this week make labor news headlines.

Renewal in Cleveland

The agreement between the Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association, and the city's projectionists' Local No. 160, has been renewed until August 31st, 1941.

The two-year contract of September 1st, 1939 has been abrogated, and a new pact made between the Cincinnati projectionists' Local 327 and the Greater Cincinnati Independent Theatres group of approximately 50 houses. The new contract, on a three year basis from September 1st of this year, provides for an increase of $2.50 per operator per week on that date next year and a similar yearly raise each year thereafter.

In New York, the Independent Theatre Owners Association is seeking a reduction in wage scales from Local 306, with whom its members have contracts. Appointed to a negotiating committee last week were David Weinstock, chairman, Stanley Laughton, Hyman Rachmil, Lawrence Bolognino, Irving Renner, Sam Rhonheimer, Rudolph Sanders, Sam Seelan, Sam Weinberg, and Harry Brandt, president of the association.

Negotiations Postponed

The negotiations between Chicago exhibitors and projectionists have been postponed because of the absence, this week, of Jack Kirsch, president of the Illinois Allied. Mr. Kirsch attended the Allied Eastern regional convention and testimonial dinner to Abram Myers in Atlantic City.

Operators of the Peoples Cinema Theatre, Brooklyn, last week applied to the New York Supreme Court for an injunction to halt Local 306 from picketing the theatre. The union is picketing to compel employment of its members.

Darwood Shelton, former projectionist at the Overland Theatre, St. Louis, is suing Robert Tomsen, business agent of projectionists' Local 143, and Frank B. Gralike, assistant business agent of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, for $5,794, in that city's Circuit Court. Mr. Shelton charges that he, not a member of the union, lost his position at the theatre in 1935, when the defendants threatened to halt construction of another theatre owned by the Overland's operator. He added that he was denied membership in the union.

Five Years for Nick, Weston

John P. Nick and Clyde Weston, deposed president and business agent, respectively, of the St. Louis projectionists' Local 143, were sentenced to five years in Federal prison and fined $10,000 each, by Federal Judge Caskie Collet, in St. Louis, on Monday. Both men were convicted last week, on 11 counts, for violation of the Federal anti-racketeering and Sherman anti-trust laws. They are now on bond, pending an appeal.

Ferd Fortunate, booker at the Universal exchange in Philadelphia, replaces Ben Harris as vice-president of the Film Exchange Employees Union, of that city. Mr. Harris has organized his own film exchange, the American, but will continue with the union as an inactive member, and was elected honorary vice-president for the remainder of his term.

The Screen Cartoonists Guild, Hollywood, this week won a closed shop contract from MGM, after threatening a strike. Some provisions of the contract are a 40-hour week, time-and-a-half for holidays, double-time for Sundays, and a minimum wage for animators of $85 per week.

On Thursday and Friday, approximately 130 scenic artists in Hollywood were to vote for a bargaining agency at their respective studios, by order of the National Labor Relations Board. Studios affected are Warners, Paramount, MGM, RKO, 20th Century-Fox, Columbia, Universal, Goldwyn, and Hal Roach.

Labor committees from the Screen Writers Guild and the producers' association met in Hollywood last week, with no results ascertainable, beyond the announcement that "progress was made." The negotiations are over a bargaining contract.

Music Decision Reserved

New York Supreme Court Justice Aron Steuer reserved decision Thursday, September 19th, on the application by the American Guild of Musical Artists, for an injunction to restrain the American Federation of Musicians from using pressure to bar AGMA members from radio, concert hall, and recording studio.

James C. Petrillo, president of the federation, had ordered all instrumentalists of the guild to join his organization after Labor Day, or suffer loss of employment by Federation pressure. He was restrained, three weeks ago, by a temporary injunction obtained by the guild from New York Supreme Court Justice Ferdinand Pecora.

Samuel Seabury, noted New York attorney, represented the federation at the Thursday hearing, and argued that its charter from the American Federation of Labor gave it clear jurisdiction over all musicians.

Justice Steuer also reserved decision on a motion by the AFM to dismiss the Guild's suit.

The New York Herald-Tribune, on Thurday, September 19th, editorially criticized Mr. Seabury's acceptance of the AFM and its head, Mr. Petrillo, as clients. It expressed shock that the "arch-crusader against political tyranny and corruption should agree to lend his ability and prestige in support of a labor tyranny more vicious than Tammany rule" and called Mr. Petrillo, "who rides about in an armored car with a bodyguard" a "typical specimen of the labor overlord."

The dispute over wages and hours for performers on radio sustaining programs will be settled, it was indicated on Friday by William Davis, chairman of the New York State Labor Mediation Board, which intervened two weeks ago, when the American Federation of Radio Artists threatened to strike against the networks, to gain its aims. Negotiations were to be resumed Wednesday, in Mr. Davis' New York offices.

John F. Kosik's appointment as administrator of the Local 997, United Theatrical Workers, CIO, may end the long dispute in Scranton, Pennsylvania, between that union and the local AFL unit. The 14 month dispute has resulted in much cross-picketing. Both locals are now restrained from such picketing by order of the Lackawanna County Court.

Ad Restrictions Proposed

Civic organizations in Pittsburgh have urged proposals on city and state officials to force theatres to discontinue marquee, street display and billboard advertising.

UNITED MOTION PICTURE THEATRE OWNERS OF EASTERN PENNA., SOUTHERN NEW JERSEY AND DELAWARE, INC.

I wish to extend to you at this time my heartiest birthday congratulations not only upon the Motion Picture Herald, but also upon Martin Quigley's twenty-fifth year of service to the motion picture.

I have always awaited the issue with much pleasured anticipation because of its comprehensive coverage of this industry. Not only does it print the news in a very entertaining, intelligent, and readable manner but it gives to the reader, in addition, much other information touching pictures, production, policies, and what is going on generally, for the guidance of the exhibitor.

I like the various departments. I like the presentation of the departments. I like the general set-up of the publication, and I can not refrain from setting forth my heartiest cooperation, appreciation, and pleasure of Martin Quigley's policies of publication. While policies in many instances, remaining unchanged, become antiquated, this can not be said of Martin's policies. They are unchanged only in the readable character of them, but change with the trend of the changes that constantly take place in this industry, and they bespeak of the wide range which he possesses both as a contributor to the advancement of trade publications as well as a recognized research student in the motion picture industry.

LEWEN PIZOR,
President.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

BASIC APPEAL

The two "reward" ideas reproduced on this page are identical, the first, circa 1920, the second of 1940. Both accomplished what they set out to do, and the same slant probably will click as well in 1960.

Search of the files for anniversary background material revealed a host of familiar "oldies." Over the years, in one guise or another, they have been brought back upon the exploitation stage to give their usual good performance. By the same token, other early-day promotions told about elsewhere in this section, could be as profitably rejuvenated.

The years have witnessed startling advances in the technology of motion picture production and manufacture. The selling of it too has changed. But only in conformation with the times, The basic appeal directed at the ticket-buyer remains, as always, a constant.

The life-blood of promotion depends importantly upon reiteration of fundamental principles in emphasizing the "what" of showmanship, rather than the "how." If there is any tinkering to be done, it is in the presentation of it. The form may change. The formula is changeless.

ON TREADING CAREFULLY

It does not happen too often. That it does happen is reason to note here a recent experience concerning a representative Round Tabler. For reasons of his own, the member chose to leave a long-time job where he was solidly secure, to take up with another circuit.

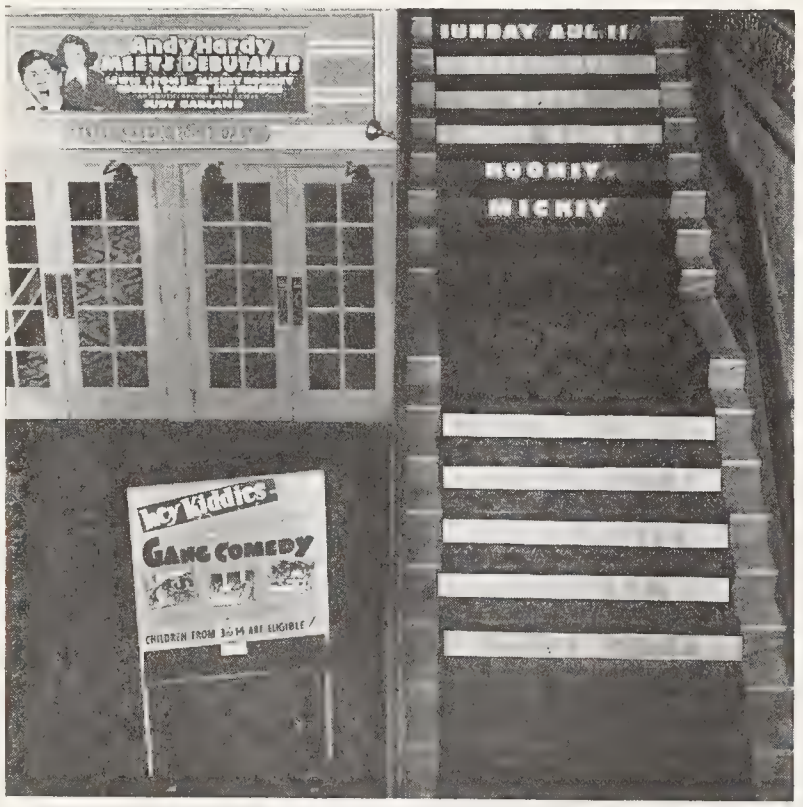
Let it be said immediately that his employers let him go with real regret and the new bossmen were very happy to have him. From the beginning, however, the new setup never worked out. In the end, the disillusioned member cut loose. After chasing a number of rainbows, he wound up in another situation—and a good one, too—but where he will have to start from scratch, and hardly at the money his abilities formerly rated. Of course, the boy will come back. It is to be regretted, however, that a comeback is necessary.

Is there a moral? If there is, then it might be that other pastures take on a much greener look from afar. Or, perhaps, a wise general always blueprints long in advance where he is to entrench if the battle goes against him.

ENOUGH BOWS FOR ALL

Noting that the Press was running a "Howdy, Neighbors" series dealing with various sections of Cleveland, as president of the neighborhood businessmen's association Johnny Newkirk promoted the paper to include his Loew's Granada sector. The daily went for the idea, breaking out with a five-column spread. The folks were pleased with all these attentions. The theatre's prestige was immediately strengthened and the Round Tabler's "in" with the merchants became more so.

It is expected that the manager's duties should also have to do with advancing community interests. Most often the benefits accrue to the theatre as well.



A-Mike Vogel

ROUND TABLE IN PICTURES

Recent winner of a local beauty contest was spotted on busy street corners by Joe Longo for the "Foreign Correspondent" run at Loew's State, in Cleveland. Carrying portable radio, girl tuned in on all available news broadcasts. Card tacked to chair on which girl was seated read: "Hear latest news flashes and see" etc., etc.

On the main stairway to the mezzanine, Francis Gillon, Le Claire Theatre, in Moline, Ill., for "Andy Hardy Meets Debutante," planted copy on risers: "Don't take another step until you've made plans to see," etc., followed by playdates.

Five girls dressed as the daughters in "Pride and Prejudice" covered the streets of New Haven as part of Bill Reisinger's exploitation on the picture at Loew's Poli-Bijou. Each of the girls carried a small bag imprinted with their picture's names and theatre playdates.

Arranged by Harry D. Stearn for "Tear Gas Squad" date at Schine's Strand, in Lexington, Ky., was the street bally consisting of truck on which lads with complete tear gas paraphernalia toured the city, banners on either side of truck calling attention to the opening.

Used in connection with the recent Labor Day parade was Harry Bodie's hillbilly band for "Comin' Round the Mountain" at Warner's Sixth Street Theatre, in Coshocton, Ohio. Dressed in keeping, lads "made an attempt" at playing hit tunes from the picture.

And What About Exploitation A Quarter of a Century Ago?

The Records Note That Round Tablers of Those Days Were On Their Toes, Too

By A-MIKE VOGEL

The promotions here outlined, dealing with what was done for the boxoffice by the theatremen of 1915, were taken from the June–September files of that year. The exploitations were not selected because of any especial excellence over others. They were chosen mainly as representative of showmanship found profitable in that period and set down as a cross-section of ticket-selling procedure twenty - five years ago.

DOES the newly-come "publicity counsel" pat himself vigorously for having a "day" at the World's Fair named on behalf of his client? He rates his bow, for the tiein was always a smart one, in fact, was far back as 1915. It was then that the Panama-Pacific Exposition at San Francisco was promoted to put on a "Francis X. Bushman Day," with the star as the guest of honor.

There was quite a program. Arranged by Sol Lesser, now releasing through United Artists, then California representative for Metro Pictures, it included a presentation of medals to the star, followed by giant fireworks outlining the highly-publicized "Bushman profile." To delight the thousands gathered for the occasion, the early-day Gable graciously participated in a "thrilling silent drama." The proceedings were elaborately reported.

There were other industry indications, 25 summers ago, that exploitation was "beginning to crawl." And while the nursing of it was mostly in the hands of studio and distributor admen, efforts of exhibitors also furnished boxoffice sinews of growth. Even then, it was somewhat a familiar story that advertising and promotion could build business. Quigley Publications' files of 1915 bear evidence of theatre exploitations aimed to do just that.

Theatre Copy Questioned

In Orange, Texas, for instance, it seemed that the merchants were critical of a one-sheet at the Princess Theatre, advertising Essanay's six-part "Graustark." The copy by theatreman Arthur K. Watson was too strong, they felt, since the poster announced that patrons dissatisfied with the show could have their admissions refunded upon request at the boxoffice. The business men's objections to what might become an embarrassing business precedent were dissipated. No refunds were made among the capacity audiences drawn to the show by the publicity given the unusual offer.

Evidently the Texas storekeepers were not alone in their alarm over unorthodox copy. At this time, the sovereign state of Missouri chose to pass a Pure Advertising Law, the act relating to "untrue, misleading and deceptive" advertisements, and providing a fine or imprisonment, or both. Agitated theatremen boiled with the same intensity displayed in the current government vs. industry imbroglio. Missouri exhibitors leaned over backwards to wring each adjective dry.

Endorsement Tieins Favored

In other sectors, however, exhibitors were limited only by good judgment, and showmanship sense. Thus, in Marion, Ohio, on taking over the operation of the Family theatre, J. E. Camplin introduced himself and his aims to the community through an institutional advertising approach. This took the form of a three-column display headed "I Want to Get Acquainted," explaining the purchase and intentions to give patrons "first-class" pictures. A photo of the new proprietor was used to point up the appeal.

The personal slant, which might have been the forerunner of the today's "inquiring photographer" column, was effectually used by Manager James Alcorn to bring wider attention to the programs at the Greensburg, in Greensburg, Ind. Here the theatreman built his advertising with the inclusion of opinions from patrons, finding these endorsements a source of profitable publicity.

Endorsement campaigns, in fact, were familiar to exhibitors long before their discovery by the cold cream and cigarette people. Special screenings to that end were held in 1915, as witness the promotion directed at the clergy by W. H. Seitzler for "The Christian" at the Princess, in Fargo, N. D. The screening brought letters of praise to be employed for advertising in the campaign.

Civic Officers Promoted

Personal appearances of civic officers to stimulate publicity and the sale of tickets was another potent approach clearly understood by exhibitors in those days. In Nashville, Tenn., as an instance, the Governor was promoted to attend the "premiere" at the Parthenon, of a locally-made picture. His Excellency was also prevailed upon to address the audience, introduced by the state commander of the United Confederate Veterans.

Theatremen today only ask that their newsboys' parties bring in some extra publicity. In 1915, the guests were expected to do more than just pose for pictures, according to the gathering at the Grand Opera House, in Cincinnati. Manager Lew Foster offered prizes to the newsies for the best criticisms of the show. Publicity in sports columns was also being eyed, the benefits to be had indicated by the sponsorship of teams in Louisville, Ky., amateur leagues by the Clifton and Broadway theatres. According to the report, the sponsors got a good deal of advertising at a very low cost.

That happened, also, to build the goodwill of the Kerrigan, in New Albany, Ind., on the occasion of a "Potato Day.." It came about of a Saturday matinee when admission was set at one potato and one penny. The public responded to the publicity appeal by packing the house. Four barrels of "spuds" were distributed among the city's underprivileged.

Round Tablers who arrange for trucks to gather the "proceeds" of Thanksgiving and Christmas food parties will be interested in this early "canned goods matinee."

Chaplin Contests Widespread

The advent of Charlie Chaplin's "The Dictator," soon to be released, serves to emphasize here that 25 years ago the comic was the inspiration for many an impersonation contest. It seemed a "poor stick" of a theatre that did not advertise a competition open to amateur "Chaplins." Packed houses usually resulted and patrons were appreciative of the performers—sometimes, too much so.

It was at the M Street Airdome, in Washington, that a five-dollar first prize brought over 25 entrants and enough excitement from out front to break down half the wooden benches. The stunt proving to be a rich drawing card, was put on again, but this time with the addition of slides requesting the audience to "refrain from allowing their superabundance of hilarity to get the best of them and not to stand upon the seats."

"Voting" Found Boxoffice Aid

Contests for the most popular local girl also served to titillate the expectancies of 1915 customers. Today's winner rushing home to tell the folks about her success, probably brings back the good old days to mother who took down similar honors "way back when." That would include the Universal theatre, in Lynchburg, Va., from where Manager W. R. Wilkerson reported a successful "most popular" competition. As publisher of Hollywood Reporter, Billy has since seen quite a few "most popular" girls come and go.

The boxoffice possibilities in the offering of "all-expense trips" as contest prizes proved as potent in 1915 as they do today. In Washington, the Lyric Theatre created wide excitement by underwriting a trip to the Panama-Pacific Exposition, the winner to be decided by votes given with each admission. Local stores were allowed to participate in the publicity with contributions of merchandise prizes for the runners-up. In exchange, the theatre between shows ran slides of each merchant.

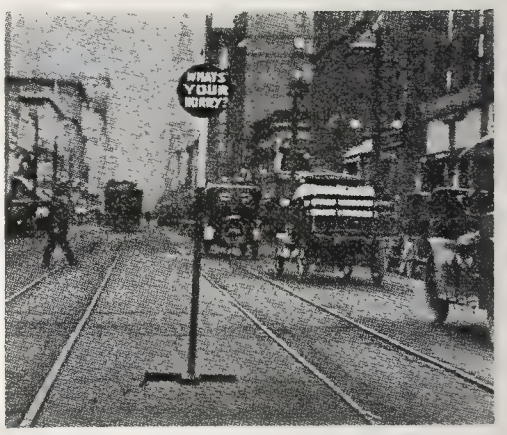
25 Years of Exploitation

1915. One of the famed theatres of the south, the Old Mill, in Dallas, Texas, was widely publicized for its electrically outlined front, as above illustrated. The name was suggested by the two large exhaust fans out front which gave the house an old Dutch windmill appearance.



1920. Working at intervals for four-days ahead, the "mystery lady"—a signpainter in costume, stopped traffic at one of Omaha's most prominent corners as she slowly filled in title, date and theatre on the stunt (above) arranged for the Moon theatre by Ed. Holland.

1920. An early Howard Jameyson front (above), in Hutchinson, Kansas, for "Silver Horde," made up of painted flats. The cutout pasted poster idea was voted a novel "Jamey" touch.

1915. Representative of the vehicular ballyhoos of the period was the donkey-powered signboard (left) used by R. B. Heilman, of the Mystic, Chicago Junction, Ohio.

1920. There were also speeders in those days, as witness the Denver tiein (above) on "What's Your Hurry" at the Rialto. Traffic signs, lettered with the title, and provided by the city were planted conspicuously.

1915. Lobby display (left) at the Portola, San Francisco, emphasizing the coming "high class motion pictures." Lighting behind cutout cardboard windows above were used to simulate streaming sun rays.

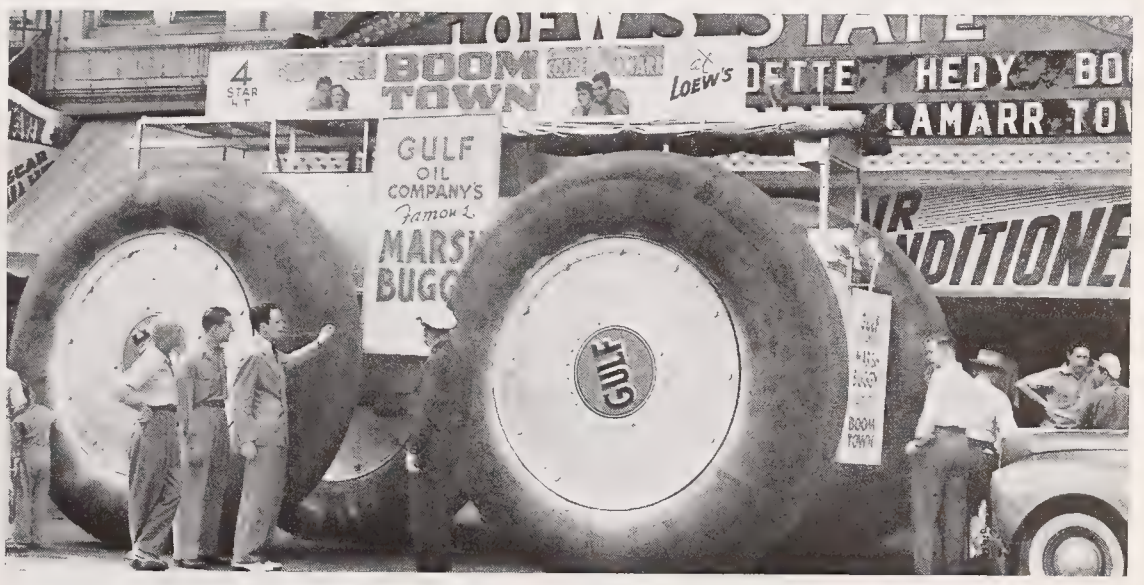
In Pictures

¶ The twenty-five years of Martin Quigley in motion picture journalism cover the evolution of showmanship from the pioneering ballyhoo of 1915 to the exploitation of today. That this evolution was hastened by the encouragement of the trade press in servicing the exhibitor is importantly indicated in the progression of exploitation sections in Quigley publications since their beginning, and from which developed Managers' Round Table as it serves today.

Instances thereof, set down on these pages, are representations of showmanship as practised by theatremen from 1915 on. In keeping with the September anniversary date, the pictures here reproduced were selected from among exploitations reported in September of the years which identify the reproductions.

1920. Philadelphia glamour-girls in the newest bathing styles helped to introduce "Up in Mary's Attic" via an auto tiein (above) arranged by Jay Emanuel, then skipper of the Metropolitan Opera House, with the assistance of Don McElwaine.

1925. For the date on "The Manicure Girl" at the Grand, in Athens, Ga., Manager George Rea brought a beauty parlor into the open by offering free manicures in the lobby (above). To be noted also, is the giant star cutout from the 24-sheet, an advertising device which came into favor at that time.



1930. To keep the public attention centered on the alterations being made at the Des Moines, in Des Moines, Iowa, Bob Gary planted a blackboard across the front of the closed house (above), inviting passersby to write their names thereon in wishing the theatre good luck.

1935. Elaboration of the cutout letter display was employed by Manager Jim Reed, for "G-Men" at the Fruitvale, Oakland, Cal. Eleven-foot letters (right) ran from sidewalk to marquee to spell out title.

EXPLOITATION IN 1915

the Rowland & Clark theatres opened a glorious vista with a voting contest for parts in a motion picture to be made by a major company. The local Press cooperated and publicity was vast. That promotion, incidentally, would be included among the earlier production endeavors of "Dick" Rowland, now engaged in Hollywood as producer of "Cheers for Miss Bishop," a coming United Artists release.

Childhood ambitions of current motion picture critics might have been touched off by such competitions as arranged by the Scenario theatre of Newark, N. J., where in cooperation with a leading woman's club, toy autos were offered for best children's essays on pictures shown at special matinees. Baby contests were also seized upon by hardy theatremen. However, Oscar A. Morgan, now Paramount Pictures district manager, and then manager of the Paramount, in Newark, played safe by confining his "kid stuff" to pictures of the annual Asbury Park baby parade.

Fashion Shows Attracted

The "treasure hunt," too, is much older than its vigor seems to indicate. In 1915 the Majestic theatre, in Grand Junction, Colo., plugged a picture called "The Broken Coin" by hiding cutout "broken coins" in various parts of the city. Finders saw the show "on the house."

As it still continues to do, the fashion show, a quarter-century ago, packed 'em in, and sensationally at the Washington, in Detroit, the first local presentation of its kind. After much persuasion, Manager Sturr managed to promote highly skeptical merchants for clothing and models. The showings were successful in increasing sales at the participating stores, and the co-operators, no longer skeptical, asked for an encore.

In passing, it might be mentioned that the models confined their modelling to outer garments. In those days, the proper term for women's lingerie was "unmentionables."

Extra Services Stressed

The fancy "cola bars" now promoted by Round Tablers for the serving of free soft drinks recall earlier tieins such as made by Keith's, in Louisville, where "Rivo," a newly-arrived ginger ale, was served by arrangements with the Merchants Ice and Cold Storage Company. Other added attractions in Louisville included "Father's Night," at the Woodland Airdome, Manager J. Johnson Mussellman stimulating male trade with a series of professional wrestling bouts.

Book-ticket sales were tried with varying success, inducements being made in price and extra service. The Maxime, in Detroit, did well with a special wallet for patrons purchasing a dollar's worth of admission at one time. Customers were informed the book-tickets would spare waiting in line at the boxoffice.

Lobby displays were beginning to be recognized for their attraction-value. In Buffalo, as an instance, for Chaplin's "The Bank," at the Palace, Manager Leon Schlesinger, now Warner cartoon producer, borrowed empty money bags from his bank, stuffed them to overflowing with "currency" and piled the bags in his lobby.

Animations in 1915 did their part in "causing much comment" through such devices as the mechanical-man conceived by Manager John J. Farren of the Victoria, in Rochester, N. Y. On behalf of a "Chaplin Week," the theatreman dressed a moving figure as the comic to pull a bannered carriage about the city. Arms and legs were propelled by hidden motors. The caption describing the stunt read, "a dozen persons will take notice of this outfit for each one who would note the decorated carriage alone." It has a familiar ring.

Window Display Noted

Though the window display had yet to reach its preeminence as an adjunct to theatre advertising, recorded instances of the period show an intelligent grasp of these potentialities. In Cleveland, for the Knickerbocker, Manager Emery M. Downs promoted a vacant store decorating the window as a stage with proscenium arch and other appropriate settings. Scenes from coming pictures were represented in the display space with theatre credits lettered on a card "down front." Passersby halted in large numbers.

Outside Contacts Developed

In extra curricular activities, theatremen were also successful in gathering "large numbers" as a token of the industry's growing prestige. Thus, weekly attendance records at the Kansas City Ad Club luncheons were strained on the appearance of Manager Joseph H. Gilday, of the Willis Wood theatre. Curious to know more about the movies and their advertising, the members learned that Mr. Gilday credited the theatre's success to newspaper advertising, for which the manager had engaged a special artist. Mr. Gilday spoke of illuminated billboards, personal letters to clubs, space in the theatre for social and club meetings, the cooling system, among other then unheard of customer-services.

The listeners were duly impressed. More than one was heard to murmur in amazement, "Why, I had no idea—"

Nor had they any idea that in the 25 years to come, theatremen were to blaze a wide promotional path which business, big and little, was to follow.

Kids Pick Own Shows For Saturday Matinees

Reported as proving highly successful and flattering to his kid patronage is the weekly stunt arranged by Manager Matty Rosenbluth at the Warner Colony, in Philadelphia, whereby a four by seven foot easel is erected in lobby and on it placed a list of comedies, cartoons, westerns and sport reels. A voting panel at right is provided with usher in attendance to aid the children in marking down their decisions. Score is tabulated each Saturday and the kids have a voice in picking shows of their choice.

World Premiere Staged by Smith

Since "Lum and Abner," radio headliners, are Arkansas boys, it was fitting that the world premiere of RKO's "Dreaming Out Loud" should be celebrated in the state, the opportunity falling to W-Clyde Smith, Malco Hot Springs city manager, who staged the opening elaborately with the stars "in person" at the Paramount and Central Theatres.

With such an opportunity it was obvious that Smith covered all angles, arranging a parade wherein the Mayor, Chamber of Commerce, civic heads, radio and newspaper officials participated in welcoming the stars to the city. Newspaper publicity was vast, including such items as co-op sections, photo layouts, interviews, Clyde getting out a special edition of his "Movie News" for added attention. Out-of-town newspapers in the 35-mile area were also covered. Stores carried window displays and "Welcome Back" cards, the merchants contributing further in their advertising with theatre copy.

Forty-foot banner from across the main street carried theatre "welcome home" copy. Other street promotions featured a stripped-down Model T Ford elaborately bannered and carrying boys dressed as the stars. Boys costumed similarly made the main streets carrying back banners advertising the premiere. Radio broadcasts were numerous with Stations KTHS and KWFC carrying the premiere from the theatre lobbies and other ceremonies from the downtown hotels.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Scholarships Offered In Rosen Style Show

Clothes-conscious amateurs interested in professional modelling were offered scholarships by Manager Bob Rosen as a feature of his recent style show at the subsequent-run Kingsbridge, in the Fordham section of New York. Entitled "Cavalcade of Fashions," the show was staged with the cooperation of 14 neighborhood women's stores, a well-known mannequin academy contributing three instruction courses awarded by audience applause for the best modelling. In adddition to some 30 amateurs competing for the prizes, a number of professional models were on hand to give further polish to the attraction staged by the academy's experts.

For quick interest, Rosen made up an attractive entry blank for distribution in the neighborhood, also bringing the contest to the interest of possible entrants by publicity in the neighborhood papers. Elaborate set-pieces in the lobby also called attention to the opportunity and all of the cooperating merchants carried window displays to the same effect, in addition to paying for printing and distributing of dignified folders plugging the event.

At the theatre, Rosen planted an easel in his lobby on which were photos taken by his roving photographer with announcement that guest tickets for the "Cavalcade of Fashions" would be awarded to those identifying themselves. Special runway was constructed for the occasion, jutting out into center aisle to first ten rows. Girls entered from right wing, walking up runway, back and across stage.

Poli Loewmen Set For School Tieins

With school opening, the feature of the month, the Poli-New England Loewmen are arranging promotions with school heads and student bodies for pictures that lend themselves to such tieins. In a division bulletin from Harry Shaw and Lou Brown, closer contacts with principals, and teachers are suggested. Emphasis is placed upon the value of school publications for cooperation on pictures of historical and educational strength. Essay, drawing, coloring contests, etc., are put forward, for guest tickets as prizes.

School libraries, dramatic clubs and history groups also make fertile territory for hookups, say the Loewmen, who advocate school group parties for selected pictures. Efforts in the direction of the schools by division managers are indicated in what has already been done by Ed Fitzpatrick, in Waterbury. Meetings with the editorial boards of the high school papers are being arranged for better breaks in these publications. A list has been prepared of coming attractions best suited to essay contests, displays, student-written biographies, etc., with "Brigham Young" set as an early example.

School Poster Space Secured

Contacts are also being established by Fitz for permanent poster space in school gymnasiums, as has been done in the past with outstanding pictures. The Round Tabler finds this of especial value since many of school events, including dances, are held in the gymns. Stressing of theatre parties and student matinees is also listed and plans made for similar contacts at the private schools in that area.

The "Back to School" is also the theme of exploitation in the Interstate Theatres, in Texas, with high school and college bands, and school beauties augmenting films appealing to the younger generation. Schools and colleges in the various towns and cities are cooperating with the plan which has stimulated business.

LaFalce Plants Contest For Menus on "Breakfast"

Tying in with the "Go-to-the-Earle" campaign, a four-week promotion in behalf of the Earle in Washington, D. C., zone publicist head Frank LaFalce, spotlighted the date on "He Stayed for Breakfast" at the theatre, with fashion pictures and stories on Loretta Young in the papers, Daily News coming through with a three-column photo layout of the star in her current picture and several of her earlier ones. Screening was held week in advance for the drama critics, radio home economics directors and commentators. Inclusion of picture title was used in all newspaper copy on the campaign which was publicized for four weeks.

Radio contest was held over WJSV's home economics program, in which listeners were asked to send in breakfast menus, guest tickets going to those submittting the best. Station WOL used a quiz program in addition, guest tickets given on this too. Assisting on the campaign were Bill C. Ewing and Rick LaFalce.

With the results of the seventh and final "Fortnight" posted below, the Third Quarter of the 1940 Quigley Awards concludes as a rush of top-grade material arrives to beat the Quarterly deadline. Keeping up with the high score maintained throughout the period, 56 Fortnighters are divided among 61 entrants, the added number given as usual for double-credits on individual entries.

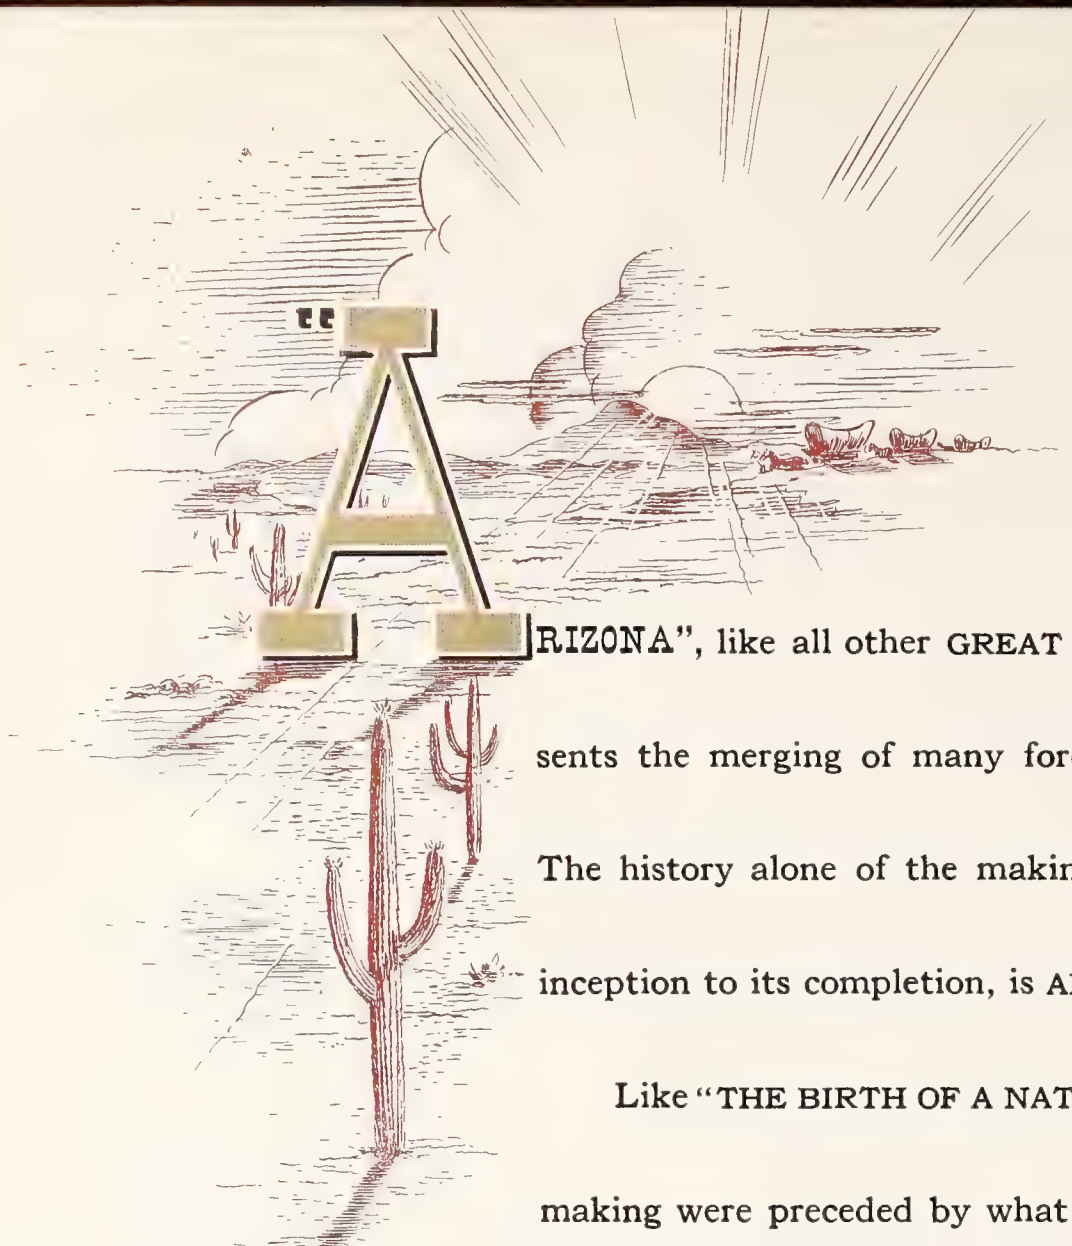
ARIZONA... ITS LEGEND AND ITS DESTINY

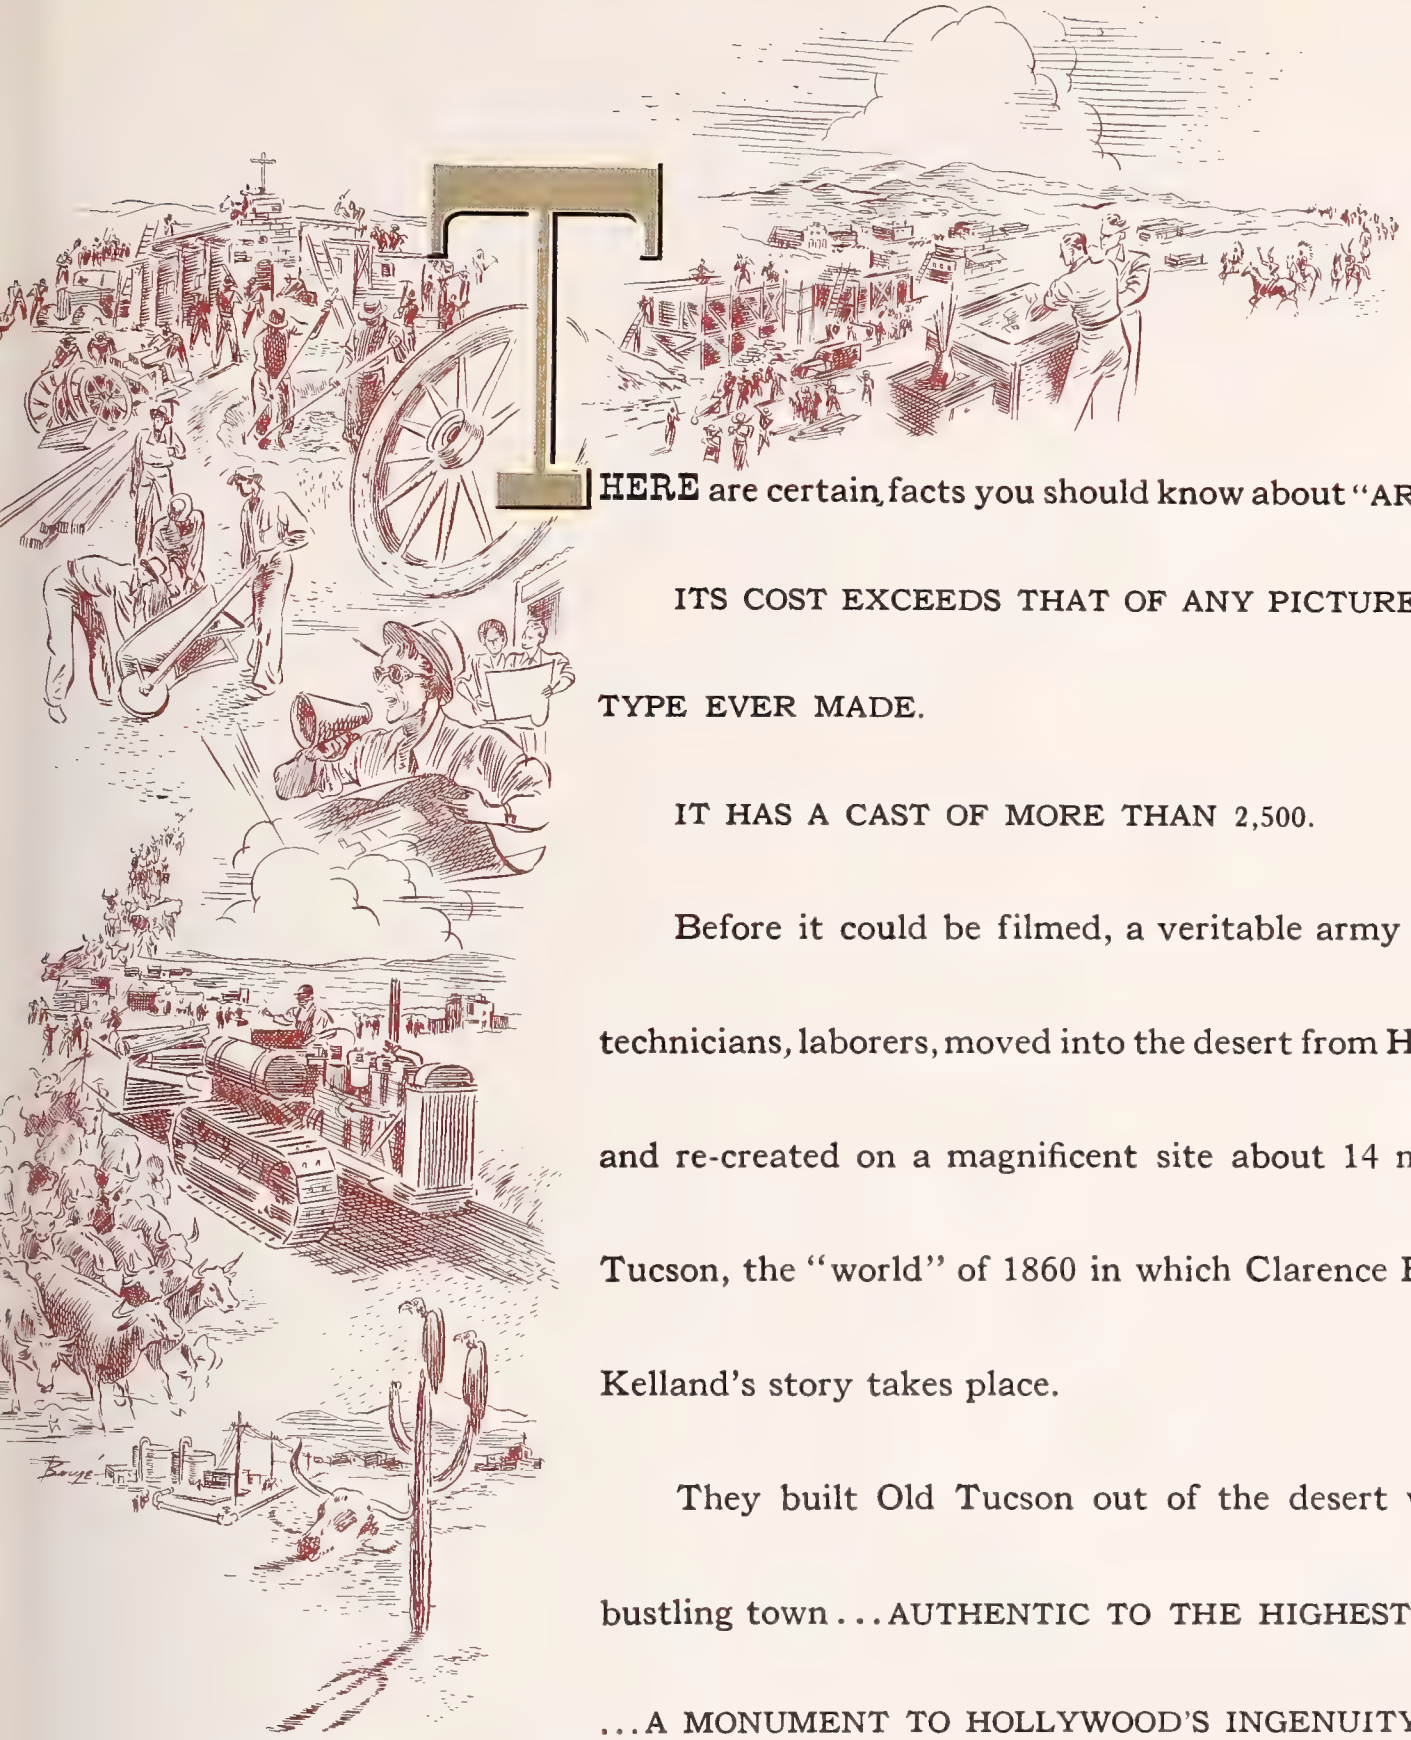


TWENTY-FIVE years ago "THE BIRTH OF A NATION" gave the motion picture business STATURE and PRESTIGE and the world gained a MEMORABLE EXPERIENCE in the theatre.

Since "THE BIRTH OF A NATION", at various intervals there have been MOMENTOUS, SIGNIFICANT PICTURES which have revitalized this prestige to keep motion pictures in a progressive state of improvement.

True, there have been setbacks and crises in this business, just as in life itself. But there has always been some epochal picture that has carried us over any transitory phase.

These are perilous times not only in our business but in the world and we feel that not only is Columbia entitled happily to anticipate the coming of "ARIZONA", but the industry in general as well as the public can look with an excited eye to the release of what is destined to be one of the GREATEST MOTION PICTURES OF THESE 25 YEARS.



"ARIZONA", like all other GREAT MOTION PICTURES, represents the merging of many forces, talents and resources. The history alone of the making of "ARIZONA", from its inception to its completion, is AN AMAZING STORY.

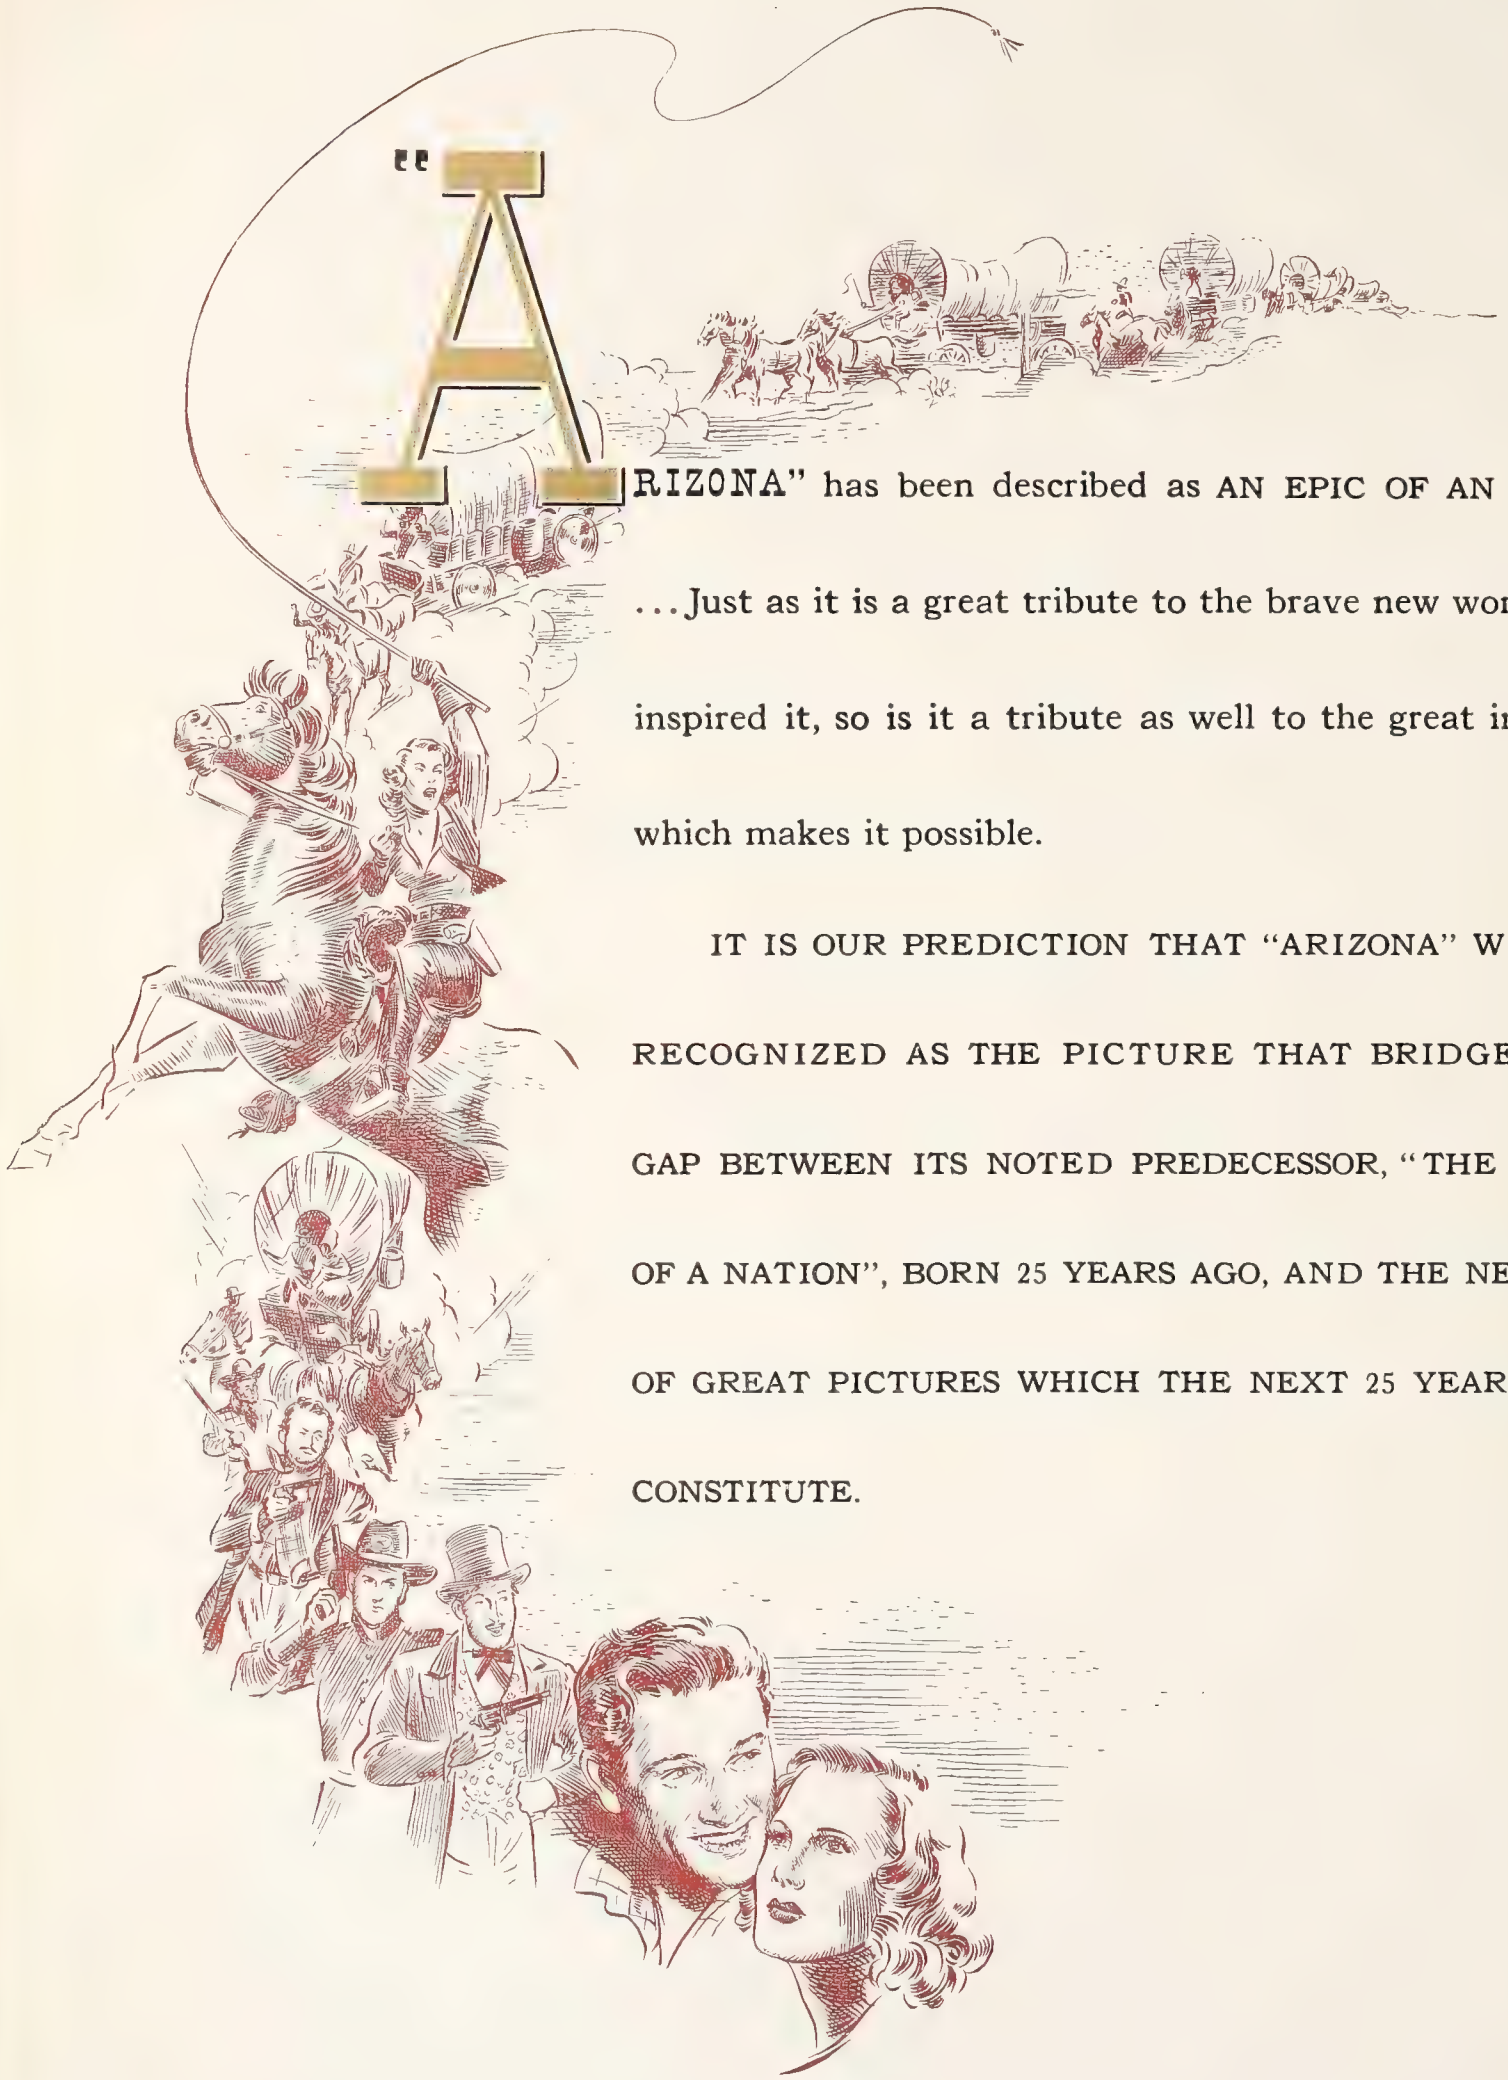
Like "THE BIRTH OF A NATION", its conception and its making were preceded by what at the time seemed insurmountable difficulties. TREMENDOUS COSTS were involved, much time was consumed in preparing the extensive PHYSICAL STRUCTURES which were a prerequisite to beginning the picture.

TO THOSE THOUSANDS OF EXHIBITORS who thoroughly appreciate the GIGANTIC TASK involved and who patiently await the release of the picture, COLUMBIA PICTURES and all those connected with the making of the picture express their heartfelt appreciation.

"ARIZONA", WE FEEL, IS ONE OF THE FEW MOTION PICTURES WORTH WAITING FOR.

THERE are certain facts you should know about "ARIZONA"...

ITS COST EXCEEDS THAT OF ANY PICTURE OF THIS TYPE EVER MADE.



IT HAS A CAST OF MORE THAN 2,500.

Before it could be filmed, a veritable army of artists, technicians, laborers, moved into the desert from Hollywood, and re-created on a magnificent site about 14 miles from Tucson, the "world" of 1860 in which Clarence Budington Kelland's story takes place.

They built Old Tucson out of the desert waste...a bustling town...AUTHENTIC TO THE HIGHEST DEGREE ...A MONUMENT TO HOLLYWOOD'S INGENUITY.

Wesley Ruggles peopled it with Indians, Mexicans, Yankee frontiersmen...filled it with more than 3,000 head of livestock, ranging, amusingly enough, from oxen to buzzards.

Rarely has a motion picture been mounted more MASTERFULLY...filmed more DYNAMICALLY...

"ARIZONA" has been described as AN EPIC OF AN EPOCH ...Just as it is a great tribute to the brave new world that inspired it, so is it a tribute as well to the great industry which makes it possible.

IT IS OUR PREDICTION THAT "ARIZONA" WILL BE RECOGNIZED AS THE PICTURE THAT BRIDGES THE GAP BETWEEN ITS NOTED PREDECESSOR, "THE BIRTH OF A NATION", BORN 25 YEARS AGO, AND THE NEW ERA OF GREAT PICTURES WHICH THE NEXT 25 YEARS WILL CONSTITUTE.

EXPLOITATION BRIEFS FROM A-FIELD

Promoting several sample boxes of the Borax product for "Twenty Mule Team," Chuck Shannon at the Boulevard in Pittsburgh shaped the form of a mule with the boxes and planted it on a 40 by 60 for his lobby display. This was crowned by a hand painted picture of the twenty mule team hauling the borax product across the desert, entire display being touched off with a title card, playdates and cutout head of Wallace Beery. In addition samples of crude and refined borax product were displayed. Aiding on the campaign was Shannon's assistant, Sam Roen.

Teaser gag used by Lige Brien at the Prince, in Ambridge, Pa., consisting of lad sitting in front of theatre with umbrella, copy on top reading: "I'm waiting for Strange Cargo to open." Water coming down from top of marquee hit umbrella proving attractor, folks stopping to look and read.

Stunt that is reported by Bill Bryan at the Manos, in Elkins, West Va., to have attracted considerable attention on "You're Not So Tough," consisted of large plank in front of theatre with available nails for driving. Guest tickets went to those scoring with one blow. Copy overall read: "You're not so tough if you can't drive a nail without bending it". Stills and title were also featured.

Effective was the atmospheric jungle lobby display used in advance and during run of "Pago Pago" by Round Tabler George Irwin at the Lyceum, in Duluth, Minn. Lobby was filled with overhanging cedar boughs and palms and adorned with cutouts, the banner and three-sheet frames were similarly dressed.

Outdoor bally was stressed in Bill Elder's "Boom Town" engagement at Loew's in Harrisburg with the sidewalk stencilled in front of theatre three weeks ahead, boys on bicycles carrying title pennants patrolled the downtown streets, boys with letter announcements on their backs plied the bathing resorts and girls with bare legs lettered covered the city streets for one day. Contest on "How to make Harrisburg a boom town" was planted in cooperating daily with guest tickets as prizes, and window displays were mentioned.

Distributed by Robert Hutchins, Liberty Theatre, in Mullan, Idaho, for "Edison, the Man" were tinted heralds carrying personal endorsement of the manager and calling attention to the cast, playdates, etc.

Painting 50 regular bricks with gilt paint and lettering them "Gold Rush Maisie is Company," George Sutermaster at the Majestic, in Springfield, Ohio, planted them on all downtown street corners where they attracted considerable attention. In addition gilt gummed stickers with the same copy were used about town and imprinted paper bags were used by cooperating five and dime.

PERSONAL SLANT AIDS ROY'S "ROCKNE" DATE

While manager of the Palace, in South Bend, Ind., Andy Roy, of Warners' Strand, Albany, N. Y., worked with the late Knute Rockne, famed Notre Dame coach, on a number of tieins. At the time of the coach's death, Roy put on a memorial at the theatre, attended by the school faculty.

With this personal background, Andy is working on his campaign for "Knute Rockne, All-American", by rounding up the college alumnus in the territory to canvass the sector in boosting the date. Among those cooperating are ex-Notre Dame players now coaching in nearby schools and colleges.

With two of his operators owning and piloting their own plane, J. R. MacEachron at the Paramount, in Jackson, Tenn., for "Boom Town" had the men fly over the city and surrounding area dropping heralds. Mac also tied up with local furniture store which has a daily "Man on the Street" broadcast, giving three single passes in connection with questions answered on the picture.

A "smile" contest was conducted in cooperation with a local newspaper by Bill Wolfson, Paramount, Montgomery, Ala., as part of his "Andy Hardy Meets Debutante" campaign. Guest tickets were awarded to those pedestrians whom the paper's photographer caught smiling.

A six-column layout on "Mrs. Chips and Rebecca's Husband," featuring Greer Garson and Laurence Olivier, stars of the film, was planted in the Columbus Dispatch as part of the "Pride and Prejudice" campaign put over by Russ Bovim, Loew's Ohio.

COPY TWIST SELLS "BROTHER ORCHID"

To impress upon his patrons the new Robinson characterization in "Brother Orchid" at Warners' Frolic, Chicago, Manager Benny Cohn arranged for post cards to his mailing list from Hollywood carrying a personal message from the star and illustrated by cartoon star cut. Copy read:

"I'm back in action here in Hollywood once more and I mean action. I'm through with biographies and I'm washed up with gunmen for a different character entirely. For a pleasant surprise, see me in," etc., etc.

Before his transfer to Dolgeville, N. Y., for the same circuit, Bill Johnson at Smalley's Fort Plain, in Fort Plain for his date on "They Drive By Night," tied up with the police department, traffic cops being on the alert for good drivers and presenting them with guest tickets to see the picture. Extra publicity was garnered when cooperating paper ran story and follow up by daily listing names of those who had been so awarded. In addition the chief of police wrote a personal endorsement of the picture which was run on front page of paper.

Some neat publicity was gained by Tom Ward at the El Raton, in Raton, N. M., recently when he ran stories in local dailies offering gratis admission to each family having four sons, in connection with that picture's engagement. Papers followed up by running names of those who attended the show.

Day ahead of opening of "Return of Frank James" at the Paramount, in Anderson, Ind., Manager Harry Van Noy dressed four boys as "hold up men" wearing back banners and had them ride horses through the town as advance for that picture. In addition, Van Noy used a two color job on his newspaper ads, the reward poster and cast being printed in red.

Neat newspaper coverage was secured by Bill Burke for "All This and Heaven, Too" at Schine's State, in Fostoria, Ohio, which included a full-page feature story, four-day picture story in another daily and six weeks prior to opening, serialization ran in two papers with a further break by securing permission from editors to run the date line with each chapter.

On "Buck Benny Rides Again" at Schine's Monroe, Rochester, Clayton S. Cornell lined up several merchants' windows with the Jello streamers carrying sig and playdates. Various restaurants about town featured a "Buck Benny Barbecue" and ahead of opening silk bannerettes were planted in lobby.

Prior to opening of "Edison the Man," Bernard Davis at the Victor, in McKeesport, Pa., promoted a display of earlier types of electric light appliances with more modern ones for comparative purposes. Second display consisted of patented inventions of a local inventor.

For "Girl in Room 313," Stan Andrews at the Capitol, Guelph, Ontario, engaged in a teaser ad stunt tied to largest hotel whereby two ads were run in the personal column. The first read "Who is the girl in 313? For information read tomorrow's personal column." This was followed second day with copy "For information on the Girl in Room 313, call 3000." Stan reports the reaction good with hundreds calling, operators telling callers that the girl was Florence Rice and she could be seen at the Capitol.

"Lucky Partner" Tickets Distributed by Unterfort

Week ahead of opening of "Lucky Partners" at the Keith, in Syracuse, Harry Unterfort distributed 500 lucky numbered cards plugging the picture, certain number of which contained duplicate numbers. These were given one to a woman and one to a man, recipients being informed that if they would appear at the lobby at seven p.m. opening evening, those having matching numbers would be admitted free.

Newspaper contest was planted, prizes going to those submitting best 25 word statement on the great Lucky Partners in three different fields of endeavor, literature, stage or screen, who their favorites were and why. Book stores were contacted, since a portion of the picture takes place in a book store, scene stills, playdates, etc. being prominently displayed. Numerous other windows were promoted and radio plugs landed over WSYR and WFBL.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Notaro Tags Autoists On "Sea Hawk" Date

Identical to the tags used by the local police for parking violations, etc., were those planted on autos by Manager Pat Notaro for his date on "The Sea Hawk" at the Columbia Theatre, in Sharon, Pa. Copy on the colored tags read: "Notice, you are summoned to appear at the Columbia Theatre, to see," etc., etc. In addition, two weeks ahead, miniature telegrams plugging the picture's opening were included with regular wires leaving Western Union offices. Double truck was promoted by the theatreman which included a quiz contest, wherein guest tickets went to those who submitted correct list of titles of past pictures, clues to which were found scattered in the various ads.

For "All This and Heaven, Too" Notaro used three different kinds of throwaways, one tying in with the current elections and carrying copy, "Republican or Democrat, you'll nominate Bette Davis," etc., second a two-page tinted folder and thirdly the old "don't let the season pass," gag.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Girls Dressed in Sarongs Hosted by Kilgore on "Pago"

Folks in Memphis, Tenn., were recently treated to the rare sight of girls wearing sarongs on their way to Loew's Palace as part of R. M. Kilgore's exploitation campaign for "Pago Pago." Launching the stunt by advertising for girls to attend a special showing dressed in sarongs, theatreman picked six of them to be known as "Pago Pago" girls and to be guests of Del Courtney and his band at local hotel. Professional dancers were chosen to do a south sea island dance routine to "Pago" music at the hotel, attired in full native regalia, stunts covered by local papers.

For his street bally, figures of a native man and girl without heads were made up by Kilgore's art department, the idea being to have folks on streets pose behind them by placing their heads in the cutout portion above the shoulders. Photos were taken and posted in lobby, guest tickets going to those identifying themselves. Other outside activity consisted of a giant "Pago Pago" water carnival, announcements made over loud speaker system, hand bills were distributed and the picture generally came in for publicity.

24-DAY SERIALIZATION PLANTED BY PEARLSTEIN

Clevelanders must certainly have been aware recently that "The Sea Hawk" was opening at the Hippodrome, since Warner ad man Manny Pearlstein in that sector effected a promotion with the Cleveland News for the publication of a 24-day serialization.

Starting off with a front page teaser calling attention to the first chapter to be run following day, opening of rounding up the college alumnae in amusement section with eight columns of art across top.

Patriotic Organizations Aid Lehman on "Ramparts"

Concentrating on the patriotic groups in his recent campaign for "The Ramparts We Watch," Larry Lehman of the Orpheum, in Kansas City, held a screening for the commanders of the American Legion posts, heads of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, army, navy, marines and Gold Star mothers in addition to leading Kansas City ministers.

An army recruiting truck carried large signs and covered principal sections of the city, parking in front of large department store where a window was given over to the picture. Recruiting officers of the three local branches placed a service desk in the theatre lobby.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Sampson's Truck Driver Contest

In a tieup with the Seattle Star, Jack Sampson, advertising director of John's Danz' Sterling circuit received liberal daily publicity on a contest to find Seattle's most handsome truck driver in connection with "They Drive by Night" at the Palomar Theatre. The local driver receiving the most votes during the week was presented with a silver trophy from Ann Sheridan; other contestants and letter-writers being awarded with promoted merchandise and theatre tickets.

STOLTZ SELLS "HALL" VIA PAPER PLATE COPY

Dropped from downtown windows and otherwise distributed were imprinted paper plates on "Pastor Hall" at the Avon, in Utica by Arnold Stoltz, copy reading:

"Dear Friend: I threw this plate out of my cell window in a concentration camp, hoping it would be found. My only crime was that I believed in religious freedom. Please notify my daughter, Christine, not to sacrifice herself to that Nazi trooper for me—she will be betrayed as I was. My only hope is to escape—tell her to see the General, he will help us. Sincerely, Pastor Hall. P.S. My story will be on the screen, starting Saturday, etc.!"

Old-Time Graduates Hosted by Rosenthal

Teaser campaign arranged by Round Tabler Morris Rosenthal at Loew Majestic, in Bridgeport, Conn., for "Tom Brown's School Days" consisted of use of photos of the graduating classes of the year 1928 which were made up into a display board for his lobby. Some of the heads were circled and to those properly identifying themselves, guest tickets were awarded. Display was used two weeks in advance in lobby and a week outside during current showing. Papers picked up the story.

Another activity which proved successful was the distribution of a series of cards with photos of different characters appearing in the picture. Those collecting the complete set of six cards were given guest tickets. Cards were distributed by leading store 10 days ahead in all outgoing packages, merchant also giving a full window display with a 40 by 60 on the contest and a "Tom Brown" special pre-school sale.

Cyclists Help Ballyhoo "Boom Town" for Farrar

Ten beautiful girls, attired in shorts and astride bicycles, were sent through busy streets with signs stating they were on their way to see "Boom Town" as one of the features of the Indianapolis campaign for the film at Loew's put over by L. Ward Farrar. Farrar also borrowed a "lie detector" from the local Police Department and received excellent newspaper breaks on the reactions of five men and five women who were questioned about Hedy Lamarr and Clark Gable, two of the stars of the film, respectively. Jumbo cards were placed in 150 Standard Oil stations. Farrar also conducted a contest whereby fans were asked to guess, from old stills, the names of earlier pictures in which the "Boom Town" stars appeared.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Baker's MofT Campaign

A six-week publicity campaign was accorded MofT's "Vatican" issue by Wally Baker, general manager of the Empress, in Stockport, England, with special invitation cards sent to the local Catholic clergy, parochial school heads and civic authorities. In addition, Wally had it so timed that when the clergy arrived at their homes after seeing the film, a personal letter over his signature awaited them expressing the hope that the issue would be brought to the attention of parishoners. The letters were typed on MofT letterheads and contained the date and detailed times of showings each day.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Addison's "Sea Hawk" Paper

Herman Addison at the Glove Theatre, Gloversville, printed a special four-page newspaper to ballyhoo the engagement there of Warners' "The Sea Hawk." Done in authentic newspaper format, the paper was called the "Glove Theatre News" and contained publicity stories and stills about the Errol Flynn starrer. The stunt was most effective and is reported to have caused a great deal of favorable comment in the community.

By his deeds ye shall know him

Principles, sometimes, are fearsome things and hard to pursue in a changing world...or a nation or a business.

Yet principles have built nations...made success of failure and engraved the names of men on the highest peaks.

Such a name is Martin Quigley . . . and such a man . . . now celebrating his twenty-fifth year in a business where twenty-five years comes close to antiquity.

So . . . we of National Screen Service and its associated companies, National Screen Accessories and Advertising Accessories Inc. have immeasurable pleasure in saying this of Martin Quigley.

We admire his principles and his steadfast courage . . . we acknowledge his greatness as editor, publisher and leader. We know him as a fearless fighter for what he thinks right, sometimes to his own financial disadvantage. We have watched him grow over the years . . . we have learned of his many fine deeds behind the scenes in his private life as well as in business.

And now, we are proud to take off our hats in salute to him as friend . . . and wish him well. May we hope to be around to wish him well again when he and his publications celebrate their golden anniversary.

THE YEARS IN RETROSPECT

A Miscellany of Comment by Martin Quigley from Early Issues of The Herald

July 22, 1915

MEANING OF THE MOVIES

Many competent observers have been led into error in attempting to ascribe some single cause as the basis for the marvel of the day—the extraordinary popularity of the motion picture. They have erred much after the fashion of a lamentably large number of social theorists whose predilection for some particular specific to cure humanities' ill has warped their vision so that a single angle becomes the entire matter.

The motion picture is a composite of a dozen agencies which previous to its inception individually influenced the human heart and mind. From off the magic screen comes every inspiration that may be had at the viewing of a painting or a work of sculpture; the interest and the heart-throbs of the most absorbing novel are here given to the onlooker; the breath of vision and the understanding of the world in which we live that is obtained in travel may be had in the comfort of an opera chair without the hazards and expense of journeying, and historical intelligence which could only be gleaned by years of study is secured without effort. . . .

BENEFITS OF TIME-CARD

Within easy reach of every exhibitor there is a way to add to the enjoyment of every patron passing the portal of his playhouse, and the cost of this particular service makes it accessible to all.

It consists of distributing among patrons an accurately prepared time-card, indicating the starting time of the principal offerings on every program. . . .

August 21, 1915

PUBLIC TASTE AND MORALS

The public mind throughout the length and breadth of the United States has been so aroused by agitation incident to the censorship question that people everywhere who are interested in the motion picture either as a business or as a form of pleasure are increasingly demanding that pictures be made clean and wholesome to the last detail. . . .

September 11, 1915

EXTENDED RUNS

The question of longer runs is a matter which should be of vital concern and extensive investigation by exhibitors. There persists widely a fallacy which had its birth in the days of the nickelodeum that the program of a picture playhouse should be changed daily. The persistence of this idea is costing numerous exhibitors large sums of money in the way of falling prestige and patronage.

There are undoubtedly specific cases where it is to the exhibitor's advantage to change their programs daily, but this does not alter the fact that there are great advantages to be gained through longer runs in populous centers. . . .

September 18, 1915

CENSORSHIP AND THE EXHIBITOR

The public, the press and the producer have all concerned themselves vigorously with the question of picture censorship, but the exhibitor within whose reach rests an influence second to none has remained throughout it all remarkably passive.

If the censorship situation is carefully analyzed the fact will remain that the attitude of the exhibitor results either in censorship agitation or the lack of it. The exhibitor is the supreme authority who sits in august judgment and decides what the public will see and what it will not see in the form of motion pictures.

Let an exhibitor in any community become careless in the selection of his program, let him sacrifice the ideals of his business for the sake of a small immediate gain—let him throw upon his screen an unfit picture—and immediately the moral sense of a number of his patrons is shocked and there arises a call for censorship. . . .

October 9, 1915

THE TRIANGLE EXPERIMENT

The heraldry and promise which attended the approach of Triangle photoplays left an important number of experienced exhibitors unmoved and unenthusiastic over the projected innovation.

They reasoned that it is not necessary to charge $2 for the very best moderate length productions; that three long pictures is too much film for one evening and that people will not desert sterling productions in their own neighborhood at 10 cents for a trip downtown and an expenditure of $2. It must be admitted that the "$2 picture" as offered by the Triangle has yet to vindicate itself. . . .

October 30, 1915

PASSING OF CIRCUS DISPLAY

The question of advertising display, both in the lobby and in front of the theatre, is daily coming in for an increased share of attention on the part of wide-awake exhibitors. This is a matter that has been flagrantly neglected and it is an encouraging sign that it finally has come to be recognized by a number of exhibitors as a question for profound consideration.

It is difficult to conceive of a more unsuitable manner of advertising many excellent productions of the day than by the gaudy, bizarre circus banners and paper which many exhibitors hang out in front of their theatres. Exhibitors are far from an intelligent understanding of the patrons of the better-class theatres when they are under the impression that stuff of this sort can possibly attract the intelligent patron into the playhouses.

November 27, 1915

NEWSPAPERS AND CRITICISM

A matter of vital concern to exhibitors is the newspaper criticism received by current film plays.

A vast number of picture playhouse patrons read the motion picture section of newspapers.

With the public's blind, instinctive credence in the reliability of the printed word it is easy for a motion picture reporter, by means of a review born of oblique vision and immature judgment, to deceive them to their own loss and to the loss of the exhibitor who runs the picture. . . . The reporter evidently has not learned that a little bit of cleverness is a dangerous thing, especially when this element is not present in a sufficient quantity to obtain throughout an entire review and portions of the review degenerate into mere iconoclastic slings offered up to an unbridled desire to be facetious. . . .

"THE HERALD'S" SERVICE TO EXHIBITORS

The current issue of Exhibitors Herald marks the conclusion of the first six months of its existence, and we accept the opportunity the occasion offers to reiterate certain principles which previously have been dwelt on and which have guided the publication into its present position of importance to exhibitors of the central west.

The dominant aim of Exhibitors Herald is to render a definite service to exhibitors, to be the representative afield of the man whose business it is to exhibit pictures. . . .

SAMUEL GOLDFISH COMMENTS ON EVILS OF OVERPRODUCTION

While alluring promises of enormous profits for the public are being made by some film manufacturing concerns, Samuel Goldfish, executive head of the Lasky Feature Play Company, declares that the motion picture industry is on the eve of its greatest trials. Mr. Goldfish declares there is a big element in the filmplay industry that is opposed to the exploitation of the public.

"It is about time the public knew," said Mr. Goldfish, "what many persons within the filmplay industry know that there is more money being lost right now in the motion picture business than there is money being made.

Mr. Goldfish declared that the motion picture industry was not only suffering at the present time from overproduction, but that it was being unjustly and undeservedly attacked by uninformed writers for some of the magazines, who have entirely misplaced the motion picture as an amusement and as an art.

A QUESTION OF QUALITY

Time was when a man could take a reel of Biograph under one arm and be in the exchange business by the time he reached the nearest fireplug for an office. We hearken back to the days when exhibitors stood in line at an exchange to get Biograph films.

Even as late as 1915 K-B's and Bronchos were the hardest working films in an exchange.

It is a fallacy to believe that a one or two-reel picture cannot be made as good as a five-reeler. If Lasky were to make single reels today, they'd book as fast as his longer subjects and in greater quantity.

We carry no brief for Biograph, Bauman, Kessel or Lasky. We do carry one for the exhibitor who reads this magazine.

These exhibitors have invested over a hundred million dollars in leaseholds and equipment. You have to make that investment good. It was made through faith in you, your advertising and the promise of a profitable business. No equivocation or secret evasion of mind will release you from your obligation.

Manufacturers, walk down and look at the Woolworth Building. A monument to the power of the nickel and dime. Possible only because of a rigid policy of giving full value for 10 cents.

BANNING PROPAGANDA

With the approach of what is expected to be desperately contested national political campaign it is timely to warn exhibitors to be very reluctant to sell their screen for political propaganda. Undoubtedly, the patrons of no single film theatre are all of one political complexion and by exploiting candidates and ideas to which any one group is not friendly a lasting offense may easily be imposed.

PICTORIAL INDECENCIES; ITS CONSEQUENCES

In behalf of thousands of clean-minded exhibitors throughout the United States who value the decent opinion and respect of their patrons both for themselves and for their theatres, the "Exhibitors Herald" herewith registers protest against the type of picture now being indulged in by one of the big producing companies.

By their own actions this company demonstrates that it is unwilling to bear the shame of placing their label upon these pictures, but they are willing to cast upon the entire industry the shame of these tawdry, sensational films.

It is true these pictures, if not confiscated by the authorities, will yield a certain profit to the producer and that small group of conscienceless exhibitors who will venture to run them.

But through them there will be a great loss to the motion picture industry. The menace of that costly curb, official censorship, will be increased; quack reformers who have cast an eye upon the motion picture industry as a rich field for exploitation will be strengthened in their work and everywhere thousands will be added to the ranks of those who believe that the motion picture is an agent of evil and should be surrounded with every official handicap.

And all this is being brought about through the indecency of the directing heads of one of the big producing companies. If this company were willing to come before the general public as the sponsor for these pictures it would tend to localize the injury that eventually will be done but with the traditional cowardice of the moral delinquent they draw a veil over their own connections with these pictures.

The Exhibitors Herald is not committed to a policy of reforming the morals of producers, exhibitors or any other class of individuals. It, however, would be grossly negligent of its trust as an independent publication in this field if it did not call attention to these violations of not only the code of decency but the code of morals and the code of good business judgment.

PICTORIAL INDECENCY; ITS CONSEQUENCES. II

There is a most intimate relation between the maintenance of an acceptable moral standard in photoplay production and the commercial prosperity of the motion picture industry.

As declared in these pages last week this is a fact which is being lost sight of by at least one of the big producing companies. The "Herald" raises its voice against this type of picture at this time not for the protection of this company—that is the company's own concern. The "Herald" protests on behalf of the entire industry, for no branch of the business will

ASSOCIATION OF MOTION PICTURE PRODUCERS, INC.

Hollywood is twenty-five hundred miles from New York. I wish it was much closer because it would bring you and your associates nearer to us and to our problems, of which I think you have such a complete and fine understanding.

Certainly, through the twenty-five years of unselfish service to this industry, you have helped all of us develop a better understanding with each other and with the problems which daily confront us, than we would have had if you had not been with us.

I know it must be a source of great satisfaction to you to look back over the record and know what a constructive force both you and your organization have at all times been to the motion picture industry. Twenty-five years seem to be a long time and yet when you consider the almost insurmountable problems that have been overcome and how the industry has grown from swaddling clothes to the great international organization it is today, then the accomplishments seem to have been worked out in a very very short period.

You will never rest on your laurels. You could very easily say —"A job well done and from now on we will take it easy"—but I know Martin Quigley too well.

Here's hoping we will have you with us for another twenty-five years.

Congratulations and best wishes!

FOREIGN MARKETS

America's position today as film maker to the world is unquestioned, but upon the restoration of normal conditions in the principal countries abroad America's present position will not be so secure unless manufacturers immediately take steps to strengthen their business in the foreign markets.

With the advantageous position in which manufacturers are now placed it should not be difficult to cause the American film everywhere to remain supreme if the proper steps are taken to exploit the American product in the countries abroad.

Now is the time to execute plans which will handicap competition at the close of the European war.

PATRIOTISM

In these days of acute international stress the motion picture has a great opportunity to answer the call of patriotism. Because of the universality of the motion picture it can carry any message which the government desires conveyed to the country at large and the motion picture exhibitor can be of great assistance in forwarding that message.

July 14, 1917

OPERATION OF CENSORSHIP

The Chicago Board of Censors has ruled out the newest Mary Pickford picture because it is too "anti-Prussian."

This picture is a too violent indictment of German militarism to be permitted exhibition in the City of Chicago—yet America has consecrated its men and its millions to the task of forever curbing this Prussian militarism.

This is an excellent example of the operation of censorship.

Mary Pickford in "The Little American" did not strike the fancy of Major Metullus Lucullus Cicero Funkhouser, so the citizens of Chicago—temporarily at least—will not be permitted to view this inspiring picture.

It would be unfair to Major Funkhouser to speculate whether Major Funkhouser's Teutonic ancestry, as suggested by his name, did not have a bearing upon prejudicing his mind against this picture.

Censorship of all kinds unwarrantedly subjects those within its scope to the prejudices of those wielding the censor power. Censorship is the rule of a few over the many. This picture may be distasteful to Major Funkhouser and also to a great many other Americans but millions of citizens of this country will rise up to inquire how it would be even humanly possible for any producer to over-emphasize dramatically the castigation which the President himself has given the military caste of Germany.

Motion picture censorship continues to convince the public of its utter absurdity.

October 20, 1917

EXTRAVAGANCE IN WARTIME

A big outstanding fact which frequently causes the thoroughly sane outside commercial world to stop and wonder curiously at the motion picture industry is the fabulous salaries exacted and paid certain of the "big stars."

The productiveness of any business which has yet appeared upon the face of the earth can be tested beyond reason; and the extraordinary drain which has been placed upon the motion picture industry in the way of veritable fortunes paid for the services of stars is leaving in its wake a variety of most sinister symptoms.

The exhibitors share of these irrational salaries is the exorbitant rental fee which makes very remote, in many cases, the prospect of profitable operation of his theatre; the distributor's share is the limiting of his market and the producer's share —the producer who has retained his sanity in the face of unreasonable salary demands —is to have meritorious productions passed over the fictitious allurement of a "big star's" name. . . .

A BURDEN THE BUSINESS CANNOT CARRY

Almost at regular intervals we hear a great howl of protest against the unwholesome picture. And almost before the echo of this howl has had a chance to subside, there is a new avalanche of filth films put forth to ensnare the greedy exhibitor and pander to the tastes of that small part of the public that welcomes risque amusement.

The picture that is unclean and sordid is a real menace to the entire business. The blame for the existence of the costly censorship is due directly to the activities of that, fortunately, small band of producers whose only instructions to their directors is to "see that it will get by." These producers regard that it is an enviable achievement to make a picture that borders foot by foot on the extreme limit permitted by the American public. . . .

From its humble and obscure beginning the Motion Picture Industry in the short span of a lifetime has risen to heights that the most optimistic could never foresee. That development and the policies that assured it are traceable to men like Martin Quigley.

In its early stages confused or avaricious trends would have irreparably injured this Industry's growth. Temptations were many and the monetary inducements, however questionable, were strong. It took courage to advocate then the same policies that now identify our Industry with the most wholesome agencies of consequence in building character and disseminating culture.

It was Martin Quigley's inspiring and tireless efforts that brought this about. It was his all-consuming devotion to the welfare and progress of our Industry that it owes to him in large measure the esteemed position it occupies in the eyes of the world today.

ization to the brink of disaster just ahead, sprung the motion picture as if by magic, a full-armored giant able to form and direct public opinion in a measure never before attainable by any other form of expression.

The century-old dream of a universal language was found an existing fact. The lifelessness of the printed word and the limitations of the individual speaker were overcome by the graphicness of this new art and its ability to thunder its war-winning messages before all nations of the world at a single moment.

With equal eloquence it told of the invincibility of America to the peasant of France, the moujik of Russia, the rice planter of Japan and the shopkeeper of Buenos Aires—proving the justice of the Allies' struggle for the preservation of the heritage of civilization and counteracting the Hunnish gospel of Kultur.

To valiant France, torn and bleeding from the brunt of the long struggle, the motion picture was the messenger of hope, crystallizing the promises of America and graphically showing that the vast resources of this country in men, money, and materials were speedily and resolutely being marshaled to the support of the sister republic. To Britain, Italy and the other co-belligerents the assurances of our envoys became established facts discernible by the very eyes of the humblest citizen of the nations concerned.

At home, the militant morale so necessary to victory at the front was maintained and constantly improved through the efficacy of the motion picture. War as it is actually fought was never so clearly understood by the populace behind the lines, who in the security of theatre seats had arrayed before them the tremendousness of the effort being made on the firing line for their protection. This intimate knowledge prepared them for personal and national sacrifices without limit, which made eventual victory as certain as did the strength and courage of our men in the field.

And aside from the propaganda and instructive achievements of the screen the motion picture accomplished incalculable good in providing amusement and diversion, transporting the people from the pressing realities of wartime to the dream world of the director and sending them out reposed and fortified in mind to combat anew the exigencies of the day.

The triumphant record of the motion picture in its greatest test and responsibility comes propitiously to the trade this Holiday season, bringing with it a message of great good cheer in that the highest claims of the art-industry have been justified, and in their justification under the trying circumstances of 1918 the future of the cinema looms greater and more roseate than ever.

ANNOUNCEMENT

Exhibitors Herald announces that, effective immediately, this publication will accept no advertising relative to motion pictures which aim to be sex hygiene propaganda.

This publication believes, in accord with the policy of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, that motion pictures of this type are not fit subject matter for exhibition in motion picture theatres under customary conditions and before mixed audiences.

October 4, 1919

MR. LOEW IS WRONG

To Mr. Marcus Loew is attributed the assertion that twenty-five cents is the logical admission price limit. He says an increase beyond this figure is prohibitive and that it will not hold the motion picture public.

There are probably few in the industry who should be better equipped than Mr. Loew to speak on this subject but despite a very high regard for Mr. Loew's opinion on this and everything else applying to the exhibition of motion pictures we are inclined to disagree—absolutely.

To agree with Mr. Loew is to agree that motion pictures comprise a cheaper form of entertainment; that the public does not rate motion pictures with other types of entertainment for which they have long been accustomed to pay more than twenty-five cents.

There is a reasonable limit. But it is not twenty-five cents. The show at the Rivoli, New York City, at a dollar is the biggest bargain on Broadway. And there are hundreds of Rivoli's throughout the country.

December 27, 1919

LURID ADVERTISING

Again the gray wolves of the business have created a situation which has not yielded to correction from within the industry and it has become necessary to call upon the civil authorities for legislation to wipe out the abuse by law.

We refer to mis-representative, lurid and lewd advertising upon theatre fronts.

The city council of Chicago now has under consideration an ordinance aimed to put a stop to this practice and the measure has the whole-hearted support of every decent element in the business.

This industry cannot afford to allow the motion picture to be hawked to the public with expressions such as the following which are taken from signs and banners recently exhibited on the fronts of downtown theatres in Chicago.

"Why a Young Girl Goes Out."

"A Current of Passion."

"If You Are a Married Man and Want to Stay Married, See This Picture."

"Could a Man Make a Woman Believe He Was Her Husband and Get Away With It?"

"The Woman with No Law, No Morals and No Mercy."

"He Seizes What He Desires."

SOUTHEASTERN THEATRE OWNERS ASSOCIATION

Congratulations to Martin Quigley on the twenty-fifth anniversary of his Motion Picture Herald, and to the Motion Picture Industry for having a man like Martin Quigley! The fact that Martin Quigley and the Herald are still with us speaks more for the sound and constructive policy that has been maintained thru these twenty-five years than any words of mine could possibly say, for Martin Quigley and the Herald have kept pace with one of the fastest changing business institutions in the world, Show Business, and they are still the leaders in their field of publications. May I compare them with the Associated Press, as the Herald means the same to the theatre world as the Associated Press means to the newspaper world and the general public, both being of like character, carrying the news to those who should have it, in an honest and unbiased way, giving equal advantage to both sides of every question. Without detracting from the glory which is Martin Quigley's, may I also add a word of praise for the efficient staff with which Martin Quigley has surrounded himself, Terry Ramsaye, Mike Vogel, George Schutz and F. H. Richardson, besides many others, for without them the Herald could not be as big as it is for Martin Quigley could not possibly keep the Herald going alone as he once did, and his staff is doing a grand job, too.

UNFOUNDED ALARM

The expressed apprehension on the part of theatrical producers that the influence of motion picture producers may tend to lower the standards of the American theatre is pitifully funny. The wail of the stage folk seems to have been incidental to the announcements of a tie-up between stage and picture productions.

A glance back over the past few years of stage history in America reveals very little in the way of standards to be jealous of. The stage producers of prominence at the moment—almost without exception—have complacently followed the call of the mob, writing their plays about bare-legged choristers, bedroom scenes and drama of such obviousness that it is hardly drama at all.

The alarm is quite unfounded: It would be a truly remarkable alien influence that would not help the American stage at least a little. As to lowering the general standards: that could only be done by magic. The stage producers themselves have exhausted all ordinary means through a commercialism utterly without consicence.

The influence of the makers of pictures, providing it is not violently opposed, cannot help but contribute to a great advancement.

November 1, 1919

WAVING THE RED FLAG

One of America's leading exhibitors recently told us that during the period of social and industrial unrest he will not exhibit in his theatre a single picture that has not been personally reviewed, because he has found that many producers are not awake to their responsibility in keeping off the screen stories, scenes and situations which tend directly or indirectly to promote this unrest and to foster class hatred.

Whether or not the responsibility is recognized, it certainly is a fact that this responsibility exists. The motion picture has within its reach a great power either to subdue this flame of social unrest or, through being derelict to its duty, to fan it into a great conflagration.

One of the worst phases of this matter, which is visible in several current productions, is violent contrast between great poverty and great wealth. In several instances that have been recently noted a distressing parallel between deplorable poverty on one side and great wealth and luxury on the other side has been dragged into pictures and there has not even been the excuse that these situations have been in any way essential to the stories.

Since the earliest days the theatre everywhere has been looked upon as a mirror of right conduct and an encouragement to right thinking. This never has and does not now conflict with the essential fact that the theatre is a place of entertainment. The motion picture, as the most popular manifestation of theatrical activity, stands in this exact position today.

The first business of the motion picture is to entertain, but while it is entertaining, those responsible for its existence must see to it that the manners, the conduct and the thought which it suggests to the public which it reaches, is of the right.

Pandering to the addled-pated minority is not even good business aside from every other consideration.

THE PICTURE PIONEERS

by JACK COHN

ABOUT a year and a half ago, I was one of a little group of motion picture pioneers who were gathered in a funeral chapel to pay final tribute to a man who had spent virtually all his business life in the film industry. One thought kept intruding upon my mind as I looked around that chapel. It was to the effect that the only time we motion picture veterans ever got together on any but business occasions, was when we were burying one of our own.

There was something wrong with that mental picture. The film business was virtually born, and certainly developed, right here in New York. Furthermore, the very heart of the distributing end of the business is contained in an area of approximately one square mile. Granted that we are all engaged in one of the most competitive of enterprises, and that we go after business in hammer-and-tongs fashion, with quarter neither given nor asked, it seemed to me as I stood in that chapel that we have much in common because most of us present had seen the film business develop from its very beginning.

What I therefore wanted to know, and I voiced the thought aloud, was why we could not create an organization which would meet informally two or three times a year; these meetings to be purely social so that we could revive the memories and the friendships of twenty-five years ago. Inasmuch as the dead are in no position to appreciate the tributes heaped upon them, why not get together every once in a while for the purpose of throwing bouquets at each other while we could still appreciate them and for the additional purpose of exchanging reminiscences of what each of us had done during the infancy of the motion picture industry.

Even as a flint strikes a spark, so did the idea strike a responsive chord in every individual who could claim to be a pioneer in the film business. Then and there the Picture Pioneers came into existence.

The first qualification set up for membership was that prospective candidates entered our field twenty-five or more years ago. It was the original belief that the organization would necessarily be confined to the Metropolitan area and that not more than twenty-five or thirty men would be found in all New York who had entered the motion picture industry two and a half decades ago.

How wrong we were in this latter belief was revealed following the first announcement of the formation of the organization which appeared in the trade papers. Not

I am delighted to be able to congratulate Martin Quigley on his Silver Anniversary with Motion Picture Herald and know the great help he has given to the Film Industry will continue to the Golden Anniversary.

In planning a series of pictures such as the undermentioned, it is more than satisfactory to know that Quigley Publications study the problems of the Producer with foresight and sympathy.

PIONEERS

from New York City alone, but from motion picture veterans the country over, came letters which demanded that the writers be admitted to membership. The result was that instead of twenty-five or thirty men attending our first dinner conference which was held at the Barberry Room June 19, 1939, a hundred and twenty-five men were crowded into space intended to comfortably seat approximately a hundred people, while many applications were held up by the Executive Committee because of the impossibility of accommodating a larger group that evening.

In connection with the Twenty-Fifth Anniversary issue of Motion Picture Herald, it is interesting to note the pioneering activities of Martin Quigley, for all these years its publisher.

¶ Along with Martin Quigley's name comes Terry Ramsaye, who entered this business as an employee of the Indian Film Company, in 1914. However as the editor of Motion Picture Herald and as the great historian of the film industry, he has long since redeemed that early mistake.

The first out-of-town application received came from Clair Hague of Toronto. Accompanied by other veterans who hailed from North of the border, Hague was so impressed by the spirit and comradeship shown by the Picture Pioneers at that conference dinner that he returned home filled with a resolve to start a chapter in Toronto. Even as it was found to exist here, the idea of a Picture Pioneer group found fertile soil in Canada, with the result that the Canadian Picture Pioneers today is a flourishing chapter with a membership in Toronto alone of one hundred and fourteen film men. Other chapters have been organized in British Colombia and in the Maritimes.

The Canadian Picture Pioneers occupies a high place in the esteem of the British government because of its recent efforts which resulted in the raising of more than $700,000 to help Britain win the war.

¶ Interest in our organization is not confined to our members. During the last year I have received at least three requests from outsiders who wanted permission to attend our conference because of valuable information which they believed could be obtained on the early history of the motion picture industry. One of these men was a Columbia University professor; another a professor at N. Y. U. and a third is attached to a university located in Colorado. I find myself wishing that it were possible to grant such requests because the full story of the industry has never been told and for that matter can never be told, simply because it has never occurred to those who know the story that what they can tell is of importance to outsiders.

The membership of the Mother chapter today is more than two hundred, exclusive of applications still to be acted upon.

There are few people in the film business that did the deal with "father time" that you did and have earned for themselves during this period of twenty-five years the respect that you have, not only in this country but everywhere throughout the world. It is a grand record and I take my little share in expressing my pride.

PRODUCER

Since my first animated cartoon beat Martin Quigley's first trade paper issue by a matter of weeks, I got into the business just in time to be able to watch his whole publishing career.

Those were wild, hectic days, and the picture industry was in bad need of the steadying influence of men such as Martin Quigley. But Mr. Quigley brought it much more than this. His keen insight into the problems of the industry's relations with the public; his fearlessness in attacking the wrong and defending the right; his unselfish devotion to the best interests of the screen, enabled him to make his torch one of the brightest of all lights in showing the way ahead to a vigorous, energetic, but not too certain art-business.

To say that Martin Quigley has been one of the primary influences in shaping the industry's policies and public relations during this last quarter century is merely to restate a fact which the whole business recognizes. He has at the same time made an invaluable contribution to its economic growth, to its success in monetary terms.

A vast number of friends pay sincere tribute to him on this occasion . . . and it is a pleasure to count myself one of them.

PARAMOUNT-RICHARDS THEATRES, INC.

Along with Watty Rothacker and a few others, before the word Public Enemy No. 1 was coined for a Chicago citizen, we often remarked among ourselves—I believe Jimmie Quirk was in the "Gang"—that the "Irish Boy Martin" would soon be No. 1 in the trade paper publishing field. That was in 1920, etc., so since then, the world has moved and so has Martin.

MOTION PICTURE THEATRE OWNERS OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

I have known Martin it seems since the beginning of time—as recorded in the motion picture industry, and I yield to no one in my admiration of his splendid loyalty to the industry to which we have both given our lives. His outspoken and fearlessly expressed opinions, criticisms and helping suggestions should be a model to all of the industry's publishers and his help to the exhibitors can never be estimated.

A. J. BRYLAWSKI.

BUFFALO THEATRES, INC.

I want to go on record as definitely as I can, in saying that I find Martin Quigley's work in this industry has been constructive throughout. I consider his two mediums, Motion Picture Herald and Motion Picture Daily, of great value to us in the theatre operating end of the business particularly. He attacks sincerely the destructive forces that from time to time show up in our business, but always with sensible, constructive arguments, never in a radical or troublesome manner.

VINCENT B. McFAUL.

ALLIED THEATRES OF MICHIGAN, INC.

I am very happy to have the privilege of adding my contribution in the form of paying a tribute to Martin Quigley for his efforts in behalf of this great industry.

Twenty-five years is a long time for anyone to cater to the minds of so many diversified interests, and still retain such a high rank among his profession. It is certainly an enviable record, and one which I am sure he is equally proud of.

RAY BRANCH,
President.

Film, Advice Dispensed at Poverty Row General Store

Landres Library Supplies Stock Shots of Anything

IN Hollywood, if you want 90 feet of an earthquake roar's sound track, 200 feet of an animal fight, films of international personalities of long ago, or some advice on virtually anything, just call on Morris Landres. The advice is free, the film will cost you $2.50 per foot.

For Mr. Landres is the mayor of Poverty Row, that near-limbo on the edge of Hollywood's heaven, in addition to being the owner of General Film Library, largest stock-shot library in the world.

A civil engineer by profession, he is still wondering why he entered the picture business. He has produced features and short subjects, and now occasionally puts out a feature.

His "duties" as mayor of Poverty Row are many. He is unofficial arbiter and conciliator of the many disputes arising there; he is the advisor of all; he arranges "deals," bringing together mutually interested persons.

Principal qualification for his position is that he is a good listener. He does more listening than any Hollywood yes-man. And all the while, he conducts his prosperous stock-shot business.

Biggest item on his day's agenda is the discussion of "schemes." (The word is his.)

The short, bushy red-haired "official" smiles when he thinks of some of them. He says:

"Most of them are like the guy who says to another: 'If we had some eggs, we could have some ham and eggs, if we had some ham.'"

Incredible, fantastic are the ideas brought to him for discussion and "promotion."

He relates one: "A fellow whom I just met came in to see me about making a picture. He asks me if I have a lot of jungle footage, animal fights and such. So I tell him yes. Then he says can you make a deal with a cheap, but good, sound outfit for re-recording. So I tell him yes, and that it will cost about $1,200.

"Then he says, you know all about getting a distribution deal, don't you? So I tell him I know how to go about it.

"Then he says, it's a deal."

Mr. Landres laughs, in telling the story. "This fellow tells me: 'You put up the $1,200 for the sound, we'll make the picture, and I'll give you 20 per cent of the completed picture.'"

Mr. Landres' 20,000,000 feet of film in his labyrinthian vaults contain innumerable heartbreaks. They include pictures completed by producers who were forced, when distribution deals flopped, to sell their footage for stock shots to salvage bean money.

There is some excellent jungle footage on which a producer spent $17,000, only to emerge with half a reel. There are pictures started but never finished, sound and silent, pictures on which laboratories foreclosed when costs weren't paid.

It's a graveyard of more than hopes. Landres, having purchased the old Horsley and the old Dawes libraries years ago, and also the entire file of the Kinegram newsreels, has the largest library extant of world famous personalities. President McKinley, the last Czar of the Russias, World War figures, notables of every nation since motion pictures began are there.

There's hardly anything that he hasn't been called upon to furnish for the making of motion pictures. While your reporter was talking to him, a man came to the first floor window of the office on North Beachwood Drive and asked:

"Hey, Morrie, can I borrow the nozzle of your hose? I'm shooting a fire scene up the street and I have to have a nozzle."

Morrie obliged.

Milgram Heads Drive

David Milgram, head of Affiliated Theatre, independent circuit in Philadelphia, was named chairman of the theatre division of the annual drive for $75,000 for the Northern Liberties Hospital.

Charles Goldfine, operator of three theatres in Philadelphia, has been appointed chairman of the Variety Club committee assigning use of the charity truck for showing films to institutions. The club's committee on the paralysis fund has been completed and includes James Clark, Dave E. Weshner, Sidney Samuelson, Hilleary Brown, Mr. Goldfine and Jay Emanuel. It is planned to institute a pilgrimage to visit the pool where infantile paralysis victims receive treatment.

Close Producers Deals

Producers Releasing Corporation has set several foreign distribution deals, Leon Fromkess, manager of foreign sales, announced this week, as follows: United Kingdom, Pathe Pictures, Ltd.; Argentina, Uruguay and Paraguay, Terra Films Company; Brazil, A. D. Pinto Pictures, Inc.; Venezuela, Aruba and Curacao, F. Veracoechea & Company, Mexico, Producers Releasing Pictures of Mexico; Peru and Ecuador, Distribuidora Franco-Peruana; Puerto Rico, Santo Domingo and Virgin Islands, Borinquen Films Company; Colombia, Alvar Films Company; Hawaii, Consolidated Amusement Corporation, and British West Indies, Jamaica Theatres, Ltd.

Gets English Post

Daphne Raglan of the story department of Twentieth Century-Fox in England has been appointed press representative for the company there, succeeding Hugh Findlay. The latter was granted a leave of absence to join the British Ministry of Information.

Use Portable Equipment

Thomas H. Crenshaw and M. K. Kearse, Jr., using portable motion picture equipment, have made arrangements to present shows in six towns, one night a week, in South Carolina. Towns include: Branchville, Hilda, Kline, Jackson, Williston and Barnwell. In each case, shows are presented in the local school, under the sponsorship of school authorities.

2,400 IN CANADA, U.S. SHOWING WAR FILMS

Dominion Government Films Get Wide Circulation, Grierson Tells Press at Preview in Ottawa, Canada

Canadian Government films designed to aid the war effort get blanket coverage in 700 Canadian theatres and are released to some 1,700 houses in the United States, John Grierson, Film Commissioner of the Canadian Government, said this week at a press party in Ottawa which previewed "Wings of Youth," the latest production of the National Film Board.

In addition to this broad release schedule the picture will be shortly distributed throughout Australia and New Zealand, Mr. Grierson said. Such publicity of Canada's war effort, he added, is extremely effective. "Wings of Youth," a 20 minute film, deals with the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan now under way in Canada.

Cooperating on Concerts

Exhibitors and distributors of St. John, N. B., and Halifax, N. S., are cooperating with the Navy League of Canada in the promotion of local concerts starring Gracie Fields, English screen comedienne. The proceeds from the concerts, part of a coast to coast tour by the star, are to go to the Navy League in its work among men in the Canadian and British navies.

The Famous Players-Canadian circuit is providing the Capitol in St. John and the Capitol in Halifax for concerts. The Spencer circuit is soliciting bulk sales of tickets and has secured $100 each from Louis B. Mayer, production head of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, and Walter Pidgeon, one of the MGM featured players, both of whom being former residents of St. John.

All of the St. John exchanges, which cover the Maritime provinces and Newfoundland, are represented by purchases of tickets in lots. The tickets are priced at $1, rush, and $1.50, reservation. Buyers of lot tickets include the Franklin & Herschorn and Bernstein & Lieberman circuits.

Special advertising in behalf of the Gracie Fields' concerts and their objective, is being carried without charge on the screens, in the lobbies of theatres and also in the regular newspaper advertising spaces of a number of theatres, coupled with free trailer and lobby advertising for the current second war loan drive.

1,600 War Broadcasts

A special report of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation shows that the National network carried 1,600 war broadcasts in the first 12 months of hostilities, the special programs occupying more than 350 hours on the air exclusive of regular newscasts, which have averaged 10 per day—with more on such occasions as the outbreak of war and the evacuation from Dunkirk. The war programs included commentaries, variety features from military camps and the troops in England, talks by the King and Queen, statesmen and public men, religious services and appeals in behalf of patriotic organizations.

In the month of August there were 129 war broadcasts, exclusive of regular newscasts, occupying 39.25 hours, and these included 87 war talks, 19 commentaries and 17 other topical features. Of these 80 originated with the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, 41 from the British Broadcasting Corporation, seven from the National Broadcasting Company and one from the Columbia Broadcasting System. The time of the war broadcasts in the month represented four per cent of the total CBC schedule.

The Navy, Army and Air Forces Films Committee has exhibited motion pictures in 26 camps across Canada, at no cost to the offices and men of the forces. The films are supplied to service organizations in the camps at a 40 per cent reduction in cost.

The NAAF Films Committee was organized on the suggestion of Brigadier-General W. W. Foster, head of Auxiliary Services, C. A. S. F., Ottawa, comprised of representatives of the Canadian Legion, YMCA, Salvation Army, Knights of Columbus and the motion picture industry. Its purpose is to supervise and coordinate film entertainment for all Canadian garrisons and camps.

The four major service organizations rent films at the reduced price and supply huts in which they are shown, projection material and operators. The committee eliminates duplication and makes certain the supply of films is as adequate and up-to-date as possible. The men have a choice of three pictures a week.

Red Cross Trailer

Again this year leading theatres throughout Canada are being asked to run a Red Cross trailer during the campaign which started in most provinces last Monday and continues until October 6th. The trailer was prepared by Associated Screen News at the request of the Motion Picture War Services Committee and is about 150 feet in length.

The trailer is being distributed in the six centres by the following companies; Paramount, in the Vancouver territory; United Artists, in Calgary territory; Empire-Universal, in Winnipeg territory; Columbia Pictures, in Toronto territory; Regal Films, in Montreal territory, and Vitagraph, Ltd., in St. John territory.

Screen stars and the Dionne Quintuplets will contribute their time on a radio program Sunday, September 29th, to aid the Canadian Red Cross. Alan Mowbray will be the master of ceremonies for the Hollywood portion of the broadcast and the cast will include Norma Shearer, Deanna Durbin, Ronald Colman, Charles Laughton, Merle Oberon, Errol Flynn, Anna Neagle, Brian Aherne, Basil Rathbone, Nigel Bruce, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Herbert Marshall, Alec Templeton, C. Aubrey Smith and Pat O'Malley. The Dionnes will broadcast from the nursery near Callander. CBC will handle the broadcast.

A group of Montreal pioneer theatre men gathered in the Mount Royal Hotel there last week to form a local chapter of the Canadian Picture Pioneers. Membership in the organization is limited to those who have been in the industry 25 years or more. Application has been made to Toronto, headquarters for the organization, for a charter and Ed English has been named tentative chairman with George Rotsky acting secretary-treasurer.

Marcus Loew's Theatres, Ltd., Toronto, has declared a $3.50 dividend on the 7 per cent cumulative preferred shares for the six months ending June 30, 1939. This payment provides a further reduction in the arrears, against which a series of quick disbursements have been made in the last two years. At one time the arrears on each share totaled $25.

N. L. Nathanson, president of Famous Players Canadian, has donated $7,500 to the Canadian Government for the purpose of establishing a sports center at the air station at Trenton, Ont., of the Royal Canadian Air Force, where hundreds of young men from various parts of the Empire are being trained as war pilots. The camp had had no sport facilities of a permanent nature.

TRI-STATES THEATRES CORPORATION

All of the amazing developments within the motion picture industry are commonly taken with too little genuine enthusiasm. We are living and experiencing these developments and naturally we cannot see the forest for the trees. It is so with our industry's keen appreciation of Martin Quigley. We take him and his tremendous service to motion pictures too much for granted. We seldom take time to genuinely admire the courage and the foresight with which he has directed the policies of his publications. His faith in and love for motion pictures have enabled him to foresee the dangers that threaten the industry and without fear of failure or criticism he has ventured out to chart a safe course. It is to his credit that many in the industry have not always agreed with him and his policies but always he refused to be swayed and his persistence has invariably proved his keen judgment, his broad vision and his high courage. When the development of our industry is recorded in motion picture history, Martin Quigley's name with his career will stand out from the accomplishments of the truly great, high and proud and magnificent!

A. H. BLANK,
President.

The fourth year for the film course conducted by the Film Library of the Museum of Modern Art, New York, will start October 2nd. The course, which is limited to 40 students, is designed primarily to furnish first hand knowledge of the history and development of the motion picture from its beginnings to the present day, particularly in the United States.

The course will be under the direction of Iris Barry, curator of the Film Library, for the Department of Fine Arts, Columbia University. Titled the History, Technique and Aesthetic of the Motion Picture it is open to anyone qualified in New York.

Rare items from the Griffith and Fairbanks collections and from the old Biograph films will be shown in conjunction with lectures as a part of the course.

High Mexico Court Reverses Censors

by JAMES LOCKHART
in Mexico City

A precedent with regard to Mexican censors' bans has been established in Mexico City with the decision of the national supreme court upsetting the prohibition by the censors and the civic government of exhibitions of the French film, "Arlette and Her Papas." For the first time in the history of the Mexican industry, such a case came before the high tribunal.

The film was banned on June 12, 1939, on the eve of the widely and costly advertised debut in Mexico City. The censors took the stand that the film was "unfit for any kind of exhibition" as it was "merely an apology for adultery." The case was taken to court by distributor Jorge M. Dada. The lower courts sustained the ban. Mr. Dada appealed to the highest tribunal in Mexico, a long and expensive process.

The supreme court judges saw "Arlette" at a special screening, and ruled that while the film was risque it was all right for adults. Their favorable verdict limits exhibitions to adult audiences.

It is understood that other producers and distributors, possibly some Americans, who have had their pictures banned will follow Mr. Dada's example.

Makes Report by Film

Something brand new in the way of state governors rendering their yearly report to their legislatures and public, as the law requires, was introduced by Wenceslao Labra, head of the state of Mexico, which adjoins Mexico City. He made a sound film of his year's works, with himself as the head actor and narrator. All visible accomplishments were shown in the film. Intangible works were explained in the governor's talk.

This is the first time that a governor's annual report has ever been delivered in the form of a picture.

Inactivity of Film Section

Mystery surrounds the continued inactivity of the expensive picture section of the ministry of public education. It cost thousands of pesos to equip this section, which includes two very fine production units, and is headed by Jose Castellot, Jr., who serves without salary.

The industry has made inquiries regarding the inactivity of this section and why so much money is being spent in maintaining it.

Tribute from British

The British Broadcasting Corporation paid Mexico homage on the occasion of the anniversary of her independence, Monday, September 16, by dedicating part of its program that day to this country. It is viewed here as a highly significant gesture, for Mexico broke off diplomatic relations with Great Britain two years ago because President Lazaro Cardenas took offense at London's inquiry as to how and when Mexico would pay for the expropriated Mexican Eagle Oil Co. (Royal Dutch Shell subsidiary).

Renovating Cine Olimpia

Mexico City's most interesting theatre, the Cine Olimpia, which was built in 1920 by William E. Jennings, the American who became rich from Mexican copper mines, and which has been operated continuously since then, is to undergo modernization starting October 1. The theatre is now managed by Edmund B. Noonan, brother of Sally O'Neil of film fame and brother-in-law of Jack Durant, the comedian. Mr. Noonan, who has the distinction of being the only American exhibitor in Mexico, will continue to be skipper of the renovated theatre which is scheduled to reopen about January 1.

The Olimpia is the only first run theatre in Mexico City that has run continuously for 20 years. In 1920, it was the most modern theatre here. Caruso sang there in 1921 during his visit to Mexico. The tablet marking that performance is to feature the remodeled theatre.

The renovations are to include modernizing the architectural scheme but along conservative lines, eliminating the gallery, which was never profitable, and installing first class seats, 2,800 of them, Western Electric sound, Century projectors and an up-to-date screen. The work is to cost from $100,000 to $120,000. The theatre cost $500,000.

tired to become a leading Mexican legal light in 1930, has turned picture producer. He is making "Con Su Amable Permiso" ("With Your Gracious Leave"), a comedy that he helped to write, at a Mexico City studio. The film is scheduled for release on November 20 (Revolution Day).

As the Mexico City government's annual last quarter of the year check up of gross receipts of cinemas starts on October 1, the Mexican Motion Picture Producers' Association is making most attractive offers for the exhibition of Mexican films during this period. The idea of the check up is to strike an average gross as the basis for taxes on the theatres during the ensuing year.

Reports that they will lay off quality American films during the check up quarter so as to make their taxes less in 1941, are stoutly denied by the exhibitors.

Reciprocal Exploitation

The plugging of the current features at each other's theatres has been introduced by four of the leading Mexico City cinemas, Olimpia, Rex, Iris and Alameda, in the form of five-minute exhibitions of trailers of these pictures and the banner heads of the newspapers in which they advertise.

This innovation was adopted when these theatres quit advertising with the local newspaper, El Universal, as retaliation for that daily's publishing a front-page story to the effect that these exhibitors were in trouble with their workers. The story, it is said, was prompted because the cinemas had advised the paper that they must reduce their advertising with it.

Found Guilty

Found guilty of the theft of electric power by meddling with their meters, two leading Mexico City subsequent run theatres, the Universal and Imperial, were each fined $1,500 by the federal government, a record fine for such an offense.

They are the first Mexico City theatres to be convicted on this charge.

Book Laurel and Hardy

Booking of Laurel and Hardy by Abraham Castro, a Mexican impresario, to make personal appearances for a week starting October 12 at $10,000 at a Mexico City cinema, is reported in amusement circles of the Mexican capital.

This will be the screen comedy team's first appearance in Mexico City and they are to be paid the highest sum an act has claimed in Mexico in years. The comedians are tremendously popular in Mexico.

Urge Cincinnati Hall

Influential interests in Cincinnati are urging the city council to recommend a $2,000,000 bond issue for construction of a 12,000-seat convention hall for sports events and other amusements. It is planned to connect the building by a tunnel with the Music Hall, which has a 3,500 seat auditorium, the largest in the city.

Griffith Acquires Oskar Korn Circuit

The R. E. Griffith circuit has acquired the Oskar Korn theatres in west Texas. The Griffith group, it is understood, has an option to purchase the Korn theatres outright. The only theatre of the circuit not affected by the deal is the new Lisbon at Dallas, which may also be included later on.

Towns in which the Griffith circuit acquired the Korn theatres are Alpine, Bracketville, Canadian, Crane, Grand Falls, Fort Stockton, McCamey, two at Marfe, two at Monahan, two at Pecos, two at Quanah, three at Sterling and a house at Pyote, which is closed at the present time.

"I come here to marry you because you was rich!"

A major reason why modern movies are America's foremost away-from-home entertainment is RCA Photophone Sound, created by RCA Research

SOUND in motion pictures has become as important to the enjoyment of America's eighty-five million weekly movie goers as the picture and stars themselves. Research in the RCA Laboratories, covering every phase of movie sound, has had much to do with the perfection of quality. RCA eliminated jerky, uneven sound by developing a Magnetic Drive for RCA Photophone studio recording equipment ... a Rotary Stabilizer for its theatre reproducing equipment. These outstanding features provide constant film speed, assure smooth sound reproduction.

Other motion picture sound advances resulting from RCA research include ultra-violet light recording, for clear reproduction of once harsh treble tones ... better, more flexible microphones ... a foolproof method of film printing and reprinting, so duplicates retain the clarity of the original.

RCA engineers have worked in close cooperation with film manufacturers in the development of finer grain films, which register greater detail, reduce background noise. They have operated similarly with lamp manufacturers in the creation of new lamps, extremely important in high fidelity recording. RCA Laboratories at all times maintain a special research staff to solve ever-changing acoustical problems in motion picture studios and theatres.

Research is Radio's Road to Progress

The contributions of RCA research to modern movie sound result from the policy laid down by the founders of RCA in 1919: that fundamental research must be the keystone of every activity of RCA. Continuing RCA research lights the road to future progress in many industries and sciences, as well as in communication, broadcasting and television.

Schenck, Sidney Outline "Night of Stars" Program

Marvin Schenck of Loew's and Louis K. Sidney, who are chairmen of the producing committee for the seventh annual "Night of Stars" at Madison Square Garden, November 27, outlined the program for the show at first luncheon meeting of the sponsors at the Astor, Monday. Nathan Straus, Federal Housing Commissioner, chairman, presided.

Proceeds will go to the war relief fund of the United Jewish Appeal. Some 500 community leaders attended.

The Greater New York Fund reports an increase of 65 per cent in this year's gift from the radio industry, a total of $41,829 having been donated as compared with $25,256 in 1939, according to Niles Trammell, NBC president and chairman of the Radio Broadcasting Section of the Utilities and Amusements Division. Mr. Trammell paid tribute to those who contributed and expressed the hope that this year's result "will look small by comparison," with next year's gift.

Agrees to Judgment

A stipulation has been filed in New York supreme court under which Lefrak Amusement Company, Inc., of New York agrees to the entry of a judgment of $26,637 by Unity Theatres Corporation. The stipulation states that the judgment is for loans made by Unity to Lefrak.

THROUGH THE YEARS, one takes into account what has been accomplished and its share in the scheme of things. While these are serious times and history seems to again repeat itself, there are new hopes for free people and a great industry. For thirty years the BRULATOUR organization has been conscious of this responsibility and has tried to discharge it faithfully and efficiently for the welfare of its clients. The progress and prosperity of the industry was produced and earned not by a single thought alone, but by a combination of minds and faith in the great power of the screen. Its development and progress was manifested only through unfailing search for the perfection that EASTMAN is noted for. WILLIAM MORRIS AGENCY

INC.

"The Agency of Show Business"

Sincere representation is the first principle of the Agency—a principle established by the founder, WILLIAM MORRIS—a principle to which the entire organization always has adhered.

Entertainment is one field in which human relationship is an important factor, personal integrity is essential and a mutual respect for judgment is paramount in successful operation.

Radio, motion pictures and television may have altered the framework of the amusement structure, but the principles of entertainment remain the same, as does the relation between Artist and Agent.

Variety is the essence of showmanship—on the air—on the screen—on the stage. Knowledge born of long experience enables the Agency to provide intelligent guidance for the careers of its Artists.

In more than forty years the WILLIAM MORRIS AGENCY has developed more talent from novice to established star than any other agency in show business, and its trade-mark has become a symbol of service.

Cafes, hotels, clubs and ballrooms, which for years have been supplied with singing, dancing and comedy talent by the Agency, now obtain their music as well from an impressive list of name orchestras.

Every form of public amusement enterprise, including executives, sponsors, advertising directors and performers, is encompassed in the far-reaching activities of the oldest agency in the field.

New Device Cuts 96 Sound Tracks

Demonstrated, last week, in New York was a newly-invented sound recording device in which the record is cut on a long loop of film by a high pressure stylus needle invented by William L. Woolf, chief engineer, of the Recordograph Corporation, New York.

As many as 96 sound tracks were recorded on standard 35 mm motion picture film. Of major importance, is the fact that an hour's conversation or music can be recorded on only 25 feet of film, its inventor, Mr. Woolf said. If necessary, 120 sound tracks could be compressed within the 35 mm width.

Used at Airport

The new invention is now in use at LaGuardia Airport, New York, to record the ship-to-ground conversation between pilots and dispatching officials, thus maintaining a permanent record.

Representatives of the Court Reporters' Association conferred this week with Mr. Woolf to ascertain how the invention could be utilized for courtroom reporting. One of the advantages of the device, it was pointed out, would be that it would be wholly unnecessary for court stenographers to transcribe trial testimony, the entire record being available on film, for use, at any time, without transcription.

The intense pressure used in recording sound with the new device, according to Mr. Woolf, gives the film a burnished appearance and enables the sound track to stand up much longer under hard usage. Emulsion is not used on the film stock, it is said, but the raw film is chemically treated to reduce the "noise level."

The inventor declined to predict whether his creation would or could be adapted to use in the motion picture industry.

A similar device was demonstrated about 1922 by an Austrian inventor, Ferdinand von Maedellar. The demonstration was held in Riverhead, N. Y.

Von Maedellar, who maintained experimental laboratories in Long Island, made an ineffectual attempt to market the process, but failed. He had carried on experiments with the phonograph and participated in the early attempts to record sound on film. He had engaged in this work in Europe and America for 40 years.

He is known to the younger generation as the patentee of "Homemovie," a projector for use in the home.

AMPA Seeks "Movie Book"

Selection of the best motion picture adapted from a book during the past season will be made and an award presented by the AMPA at the first annual "book ball," at the Manhattan Centre on November 8th, it was announced, Tuesday, by Joseph Gould, chairman. Book critics of metropolitan newspapers will act as judges. Employees of book publishing and selling concerns will participate in a star-impersonating contest, wearing a number of original costumes which have been used in recent important films.

Cinema Lodge Ball

The Cinema Lodge of the B'Nai Brith, headquarters of which are in New York, will hold its first annual banquet and ball at the Hotel Pennsylvania, in that city, on October 26th. There will be personal appearances of radio, screen, and stage stars, and several name bands. A. W. Schwalberg, head of exchange operations for Warner Brothers, is president.

A Quarter of a Century of Organized Exhibition

Reviewing the Movements and the Men of Showman Group Action

by JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

Ironically, a substantial part of "organized exhibition" today stands for the very thing for which it was established to prevent: Governmental regimentation of the motion picture—local, then; national, now.

Back in December of 1937, a letter of reminiscenses to Martin Quigley from Charles W. Picquet, of North Carolina, brought to realization that this industry had then come to the completion of its first quarter of a century of organized exhibition, and in the atmosphere of the anniversary occasion MOTION PICTURE HERALD, which grew up with the institution of motion picture exhibition, through more than a quarter of a century of evolutions and developments, duly observed the event, in the HERALD of December 4th of that year.

An old warehouse in Charlotte, N. C., steeped, deeply, in the aroma of tobacco leaf, was the setting of a meeting of motion picture theatre operators in 1913, out of which came the Theatre Owners of North and South Carolina, over which, in its 28 years, there have been but four leaders, Mr. Picquet presiding now some 17 years.

Rothafel an Early Unit Keynoter

But organized exhibition had earlier, though less formidable beginnings, of local nature, not state: the Motion Picture Exhibitors League, in Minneapolis, held its first convention at the St. Paul Hotel, across the river in St. Paul, on September 4, 1912, where the late Samuel L. Rothafel told of the "vast amount of good accomplished" by mutual assistance.

Cleveland owners, in 1911, banded together against the early day demands by "city fathers" for drastic regulation of the "infant" screen.

Sam Morris, who later became foreign sales manager for Warner Brothers, was the first exhibitor torch bearer in Cleveland, leading a band of 15 who met on the fourth floor of the Columbia Building on Ontario Street. Mr. Morris was their first president. He was then running the Crown and Home, neighborhood theatres.

Greater Kansas City lays claim to a 1910 beginning, but it was not permanent, apparently operating only as the occasion necessitated. In that sector one heard the names of Carl Mensing, William Meyn and his brother, Fred, and Jimmie Foland, whenever "exhibitor organization" was discussed. There was Elmer Pearson, too; he later headed Pathe.

Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Michigan has a close claim to a top title among first state exhibitor organizations, beginning in the winter of 1912-1913.

Native sons carrying the banners for Michigan at the beginning included Glenn Cross, Joseph Denniston, Claude Cady, John Neibus and A. J. Kleist, among others.

Out of Michigan exhibitor organization came what was probably the first accomplishment in exhibitor-distributor self-regulation of local character. About 1917, the local distributors were operating a film board of trade, with J. E. Flynn, now Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer division manager, as organizer. Its "grievance board" was not successful; its successor was, comprising as it did joint representation from the exchanges and the exhibitors.

The Movies' First "Movie Ball", in '17

Relations then grew such harmonious and institutionally helpful affairs of public recognition as the "Annual Movie Ball."

Thousands attended that first ball, in 1917, in Detroit, storming the gates for a glimpse of Clara Kimball Young, Alice Brady, Elaine Hammerstein, Dustin Farnum and other "silver screen" idols of the day.

Out of that, too, grew the personal appearance of the Hollywood star, Clara Kimball Young, native daughter of Michigan, starting the trend.

That first "Movie Ball" was the affair for which some press agents arranged the appearance of the Mack Sennett bathing girls, to give an aquatic exhbition in the pool of the conservative old Detroit Athletic Club. Detroit's moguls turned out en masse—only to see the girls, in tight-form-fitted suits, walk to the edge of the pool, and bolt—not a one could swim a stroke.

As the need for local protection grew, so grew organized exhibition, bringing to the fore early such names as Sydney S. Cohen, R. F. (Pete) Woodhull, W. Alvin (Fightin' Al) Steffes, "Jim" Ritter, Lee Ochs, W. J. Sweeney, Henderson Richey, now with Metro; Colonel H. A. Cole, Ray Branch, "Pete" Wood, Aaron Saperstein and Jack Miller, L. O. Lukan, H. V. Harvey, Maurice Rubin, M. A. Rosenberg, Steve Lambert, Walter Vincent, R. X. Williams, Alfred S. Black, Frank J. Rembusch, Willard Patterson, "Joe" Hopp, Sam Bullock, Ed Fay, Morton Van Praag, E. T. Peters, Glenn Harper, A. J. Moeller, George P. Aarons (who last week became national MPTOA counsel replacing Frank Comerford Walker, who resigned on becoming U. S. Postmaster General).

Others whose names, too, appeared prominently in connection with early exhibitor organization activity, included those of Joseph Mogler, Martin Smith, Joe Walsh and E. W. Collins, Fred Herrington, Harry Crandall and Jake Wells, H. B. Varner, Gus Schmidt, S. A. Handy, Mike Comerford, Charlie O'Reilly, Eli Whitney Collins, "Bob" Biechele, William (Billy) Connors, Ludwig Siegel and "Mike" O'Toole, A. A. Caplan, S. W. Neall and Charles Nathan, Bert Kern, A. J. Bettencourt, Henry Lazarus, "Benny" Dudenheifer, O. C. Lam, Colonel Thomas Orr, George Ricker, Nat Williams and M. C. Moore, "Bob" Wilby, Sam Katz, Max Krofta, R. A. Tesch.

And, John Hamrick, Al Rosenberg, Leroy Johnson, H. V. Harvey, Al Chamberlin and Morton G. Thalhimer, Charles Somma, Roy Bair, William J. Slimm, Henry Lustig, John Harwood, Ed Levy, Arthur Lockwood, Harry Lavietes, Nebraska MPTO Attorney Van Dorn, J. Earl Kirk and Charlie Williams, Ed Rolsky and John Stapel, M. L. Horwitz, A. Julian Brylawski, and the M. A. Lightmans, the Kuykendalls, the Abram Myers and Nathan Yamins, the Harry Brandts, Max Cohens, Sidney Samuelsons and others whose names even today continue to figure prominently in national exhibitor organization activity.

Today organized exhibitor opinion is expressed through 46 different regional groups and two national: Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America and Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors.

National Organization In Cleveland, in '20

Up to 1920, there had been no "national" exhibitor organization. Conceived in serenity but born amid pangs of strife, the Motion Picture Theatre Owners, the first, had three sires, each nationally ambitious, who bore down upon Cleveland in mid-June of 1920.

There was Alfred S. Black, for instance. Mr. Black was president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors of America, Inc., formed at St. Louis in 1919 out of a merger of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League and the Associated Exhibitors of America. With the convention call ringing out a message that there must be no domination of theatres by producers, there came reports that Mr. Black was selling control of his Massachusetts circuit to Famous Players-Lasky (now Paramount).

Frank J. Rembusch was temporary chairman of the Independent Motion Picture Exhibitors of America, which had had its beginnings in Chicago two months earlier. The third group was the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, temporarily formed in early 1920 by exhibitors from 32 states, in 16 regional organizations. Sydney S. Cohen was temporary chairman, Sam Bullock secretary.

All branches of the industry were represented in a fourth organization, the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, which was to have its fourth annual convention at the same time. William A. Brady of New York was its president.
